13 Dead, 4 Dying, 12 Sick as Plague Strikes

MEXICAN FUNERAL SEEN AS SOURCE OF 'BLACK DEATH'

Los Angeles Health Officials Draw Sharp Quarantine Line in Effort to Stop Spread of Disease.

SYMPTOMS SIMILAR TO SPANISH FLU

High Temperatures and Infected Lungs Are Symptoms of Fatal Malady, Doctors Announce.

BY H. O. THOMPSON.
Los Angeles, November 1.—Thirteen persons have died and four more are not expected to live as the result of a plague in the form of double pneumonia which has attacked the Mexican quarter of Los Angeles.

The victims of the malady attended the funeral of a Mexican woman, Mrs. Luciana Samarra, a fortnight ago, contracting the disease at that time. E. L. Peterson, assistant county health officer, announced late today that 12 new cases had been discovered among the friends and relatives of the funeral mourners, but later explained that he had been wrongly informed and that the 12 suspected cases had come in contact with the afflicted persons, but had not yet contracted the disease. They might still be saved, he said.

Quarantine Is Rigid.
City and county health authorities believe they have controlled the epidemic. Dr. Elmer R. Pascoe, acting health officer, said tonight he did not expect any new cases.

Over an area of several square miles, including the Mexican district, a rigid quarantine has been established. Twenty uniformed officers are patrolling the streets, aided by civilian guards.

All of the victims are Mexicans. The husband, mother-in-law and other relatives of the woman whose funeral caused the plague, died in a few days after developing the symptoms.

Is Worst of Plagues.
Of the three major plagues, the pneumonic, bubonic and septicemic, the one which appeared here is considered the most virulent. It affects the lungs, while the bubonic plague appears in the skin and glands and the septicemic in the blood.

The local disease is said to be similar to the Spanish influenza which spread throughout the country during the war.

A preventative serum has been discovered and inoculations against the disease are recommended. The lowest mortality rate in the disease was 34 per cent in Sydney, Australia, in 1900. The highest was 95 per cent in Hong Kong in 1899, medical records show. The mortality is much higher among Orientals than Europeans. The average duration of the disease is five or six days. The patient who survives the 10th or 12th day has a chance to recover, but convalescence is usually prolonged. Secondary attacks are rare.

OPPORTUNITY'S KNOCK

Today

Don't expect too much of today. Don't neglect it. Take it for what it is and use it to the full.

Today is yesterday's tomorrow — and tomorrow's yesterday. It is the continual present, coming out of the past and moving into the future. It is the only time for action.

Yesterday is the unreality of the man who is resting on his accomplishments. Tomorrow is the illusion of the worker who postpones effort. Only today is genuine, full of possibilities — and alive.

And today's the day to begin watching the opportunities that appear among The Constitution's Classified Ads!

Newspapers Bid To Be Defendant In Tax Test Case

Attorney General Receives Requests From Several Would-Be "Goats."

Washington, November 1.—Attorney General Stone's proposed suit to test the right of newspapers to publish federal income tax records has appealed to several newspapers as an opportunity not to be overlooked, according to department of justice officials, who said today that the attorney general has received requests from several newspapers to be made the "goat" in the test case. It is unlikely, however, that any of them will be accepted.

While Mr. Stone has made no decision as to where or when the test suit will be filed, the novelty of the experience of an individual or corporation desiring to be made defendant in a suit instituted by the government has proved something new to old attaches of the department. The attorney general wants to make the test case a real suit, it was said, and is likely to pick a newspaper that may not be entirely willing to have its name used.

The department is awaiting replies from all the United States attorneys who have been requested to supply the attorney general with a statement of facts upon which they can develop a case.

RED VIRGIN TRIES SUICIDE THRICE, BUT DEATH IS COY

Germaine Berthon First Sought To Kill Herself Beside Tomb of Leon Daudet.

Paris, November 1.—Germaine Berthon, the "Red Virgin" of Paris, the anarchist slapper who killed one royalist, loved the son of another and impudently puckered her un-kissed lips in dark corners of the Parisian underworld, thrice tried to take her own life today and now lies on a hospital cot, her frail body marred by a bullet and the marks of acid on her crimson lips.

Germaine was discovered in the Church of Our Lady of Lourdes, screaming and painfully burned after she had dashed the contents of a phial of acid down her throat.

"I did it for personal reasons," the young girl told the authorities and confessed that she first had sought to take her own life beside "a certain tomb in Pere la Chise cemetery."

Is Resting Place of Love.

In Pere la Chise lies the body of young Philippe Daudet, the 14-year-old son of Leon Daudet, whose dead body was found in a taxicab here. Daudet, the elder is leader of "the Camelots du Roi," the extremist faction that desires the restoration of the pomp and pageantry of the French monarchy.

Strange stories that young Philippe had embraced anarchism, lured it was whispered, to a confession in that faith by the lovely Germaine, and that Philippe died by his own hand after promising the "Red Virgin" that he would kill his own father, circulated about Paris after his death. The affair remains a mystery.

Certain it is that Germaine wished the elder Daudet dead. It was to kill him that she visited his newspaper, the royalist Action Francaise. Finding her prey absent, Germaine leveled a steady gun at the editorial writer, Plateau. When she had done shooting, Plateau was dead.

Tried Bullet Route

"I am sorry I didn't kill you," the virgin told Daudet during the exciting days of her trial when she, alone of all the persons who crowded the courtroom, was calm. Germaine was acquitted. Philippe's rumored conversion to anarchism occurred soon after Germaine was freed. Germaine went to Pere la Chise to kill herself by the side of the "certain tomb," which she refused to identify further, but there were too many people about. Then in front of the hospital where young Philippe's body was taken after it was discovered in a taxi, Germaine shot herself with a gun she had carried concealed in her blouse. She wounded herself, but the hand that so steadily held the gun that killed Plateau trembled today and Germaine sought another means to end her life.

In the cloistered shadows of Our Lady of Lourdes Germaine lifted acid to her lips and fell screaming to the flagstones when the searing fluid

EXCITING SESSION OF CITY COUNCIL PROMISED MONEY

Aven Resolution for Cancellation Investigation of Police Department Is Sure To Stir Up Row

PASSAGE PREDICTED BY AMPLE MARGIN

Pennington Ordinance to Increase Size of Council Committee Slated To Cause Trouble

Facing a demand for a councilman investigation of the police department together with a probe of the action of the police committee of council transferring a large number of officers, and also expecting a fight on the ordinance which proposes to increase the number of members of all important committees to 12, city council Monday probably will have one of the hottest sessions of the year.

A large amount of interest centers on a resolution to be presented by Dr. C. C. Aven, councilman from the third ward, asking that the mayor pro tem appoint a committee to make thorough investigation of the police department.

Coming immediately on the heels of grand jury presentations, which charge dozens of police officers with enforcement of their duty, it is practically certain that the resolution will be adopted and the investigating committee named.

Rapped Police Officers.
In a recent statement Dr. Aven rapped a number of police officers, intimating they had criminal records, and charging one with personal cowardice. He also said that practically all officers mentioned were habitual users of liquor. While he made no direct charges, he also intimated that certain members of the police committee were protecting criminals in the city, saying, "An officer never knows when he is closing a disorderly house or arresting a criminal, whether he is tramping on the toes of a member of the committee, and will be demoted or suspended at the next meeting simply for doing his duty."

Dr. Aven indicated Saturday that he will name the same members of the police department, in addition to several others, and may use names of members of the police committee in his statement.

ATLANTA CONCERN GETS WAR CLAIM

Fertilizer Company Is Awarded $27,000 on Cargoes of Potash That Were Never Delivered.

Washington, November 1.—Awards totaling $722,500 were announced today by the American-German Mixed Claims Commission.

The awards included one for $24,956.41 to the Jefferson Fertilizer company, of Birmingham, Ala.; $27,683.86 to the Gulfport Fertilizer company, of Atlanta, Ga.; $88,508.31 to the F. S. Royster Guano company, of Norfolk, Va.; and $81,210.26 to the Gulf Fertilizer company, of Tampa, Fla.

The awards were agreed upon by the American commission, Chandler P. Anderson, and the German commissioner, Wilhelm Kieselbach. Lytle D. Burns, president of the Gulfport Fertilizer company, declared Saturday that the sum awarded his organization represented the amount of claims it had before the American-German mixed claims commission.

A portion of the claim, he said, represented money paid to a German potash syndicate for two cargoes of potash which never were delivered. The potash was ordered just prior to the opening of the world war, he said, and when the war started the shipments were held in the port of Hamburg and not allowed to be sent to America.

The remainder of the sum was claimed by the fertilizer company as a rebate for shipments of potash by the syndicate. Mr. Burns declared. This rebate was allowed by the German syndicate according to tonnage. Mrs. Burns said, but the Gulfport Fertilizer company failed to collect it when the nations went to war.

4 DESPERADOES SLAIN IN FIGHT ON RIVER BRIDGE

John Ashley, Mobley and Two Other Members of Ashley Outlaw Band Killed by Sheriff.

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.

Miami, Fla., November 1.—Sheriff Merritt, of St. Lucie county, tonight shot and killed four members of the Ashley gang, notorious east coast of Florida outlaws, according to information reaching The Miami Herald. Those killed were John Ashley, Mobley and two unidentified members of the gang.

The sheriff came upon the outlaws on the Dixie highway bridge across the Sebastian river. Sheriff Allen, of Dade county, and the Florida East Coast railroad dispatcher at Miami both received reports from St. Lucie county confirming the killings.

Six deputies were with Sheriff Merritt and in the gun battle every member of the gang was killed. None of the sheriff's force was wounded. The Ashley gang was in an automobile.

The Ashley gang was taken by surprise by the St. Lucie sheriff and his deputies. Sheriff Bob Baker, of Palm Beach county, has left for the scene of the killings.

Woman Is Slain By Flying Steel In Train Mishap

Bit From Broken Brake Bounces Through Window of Coach.

Trenton, N. J., November 1.—Mrs. Fred Cooper, of Jenkintown, Pa., was killed tonight when she was hit on the head by part of the brake rigging of a train on the Pennsylvania railroad, on which she was a passenger. The missile was a piece of the locomotive brake shoe, which fell off and rebounded into the coach where Mrs. Cooper was seated. None of the other passengers was injured.

Burlington county authorities and state police at first held the theory that a bomb had exploded in the train, but this was denied by railroad company officials after an investigation.

CORDUROY PANTS ARE LATEST STYLE OF PRINCETON MEN

Princeton, N. J., November 1.—With the passing of a quarter of a century, Princeton campus styles have reverted to corduroy trousers. Alumni of the "Golden Nineties" will be astonished to find on returning to their Alma Mater that the corduroys popular in their day have been copied in 1924. The cooperative store of the university, after a record-breaking sale of 500 pairs, has cut prices to its stock, but a promise has been made to have a new supply within a few days. Town stores have also been reaping a harvest in the sale of corduroys.

Meantime, the bell-bottom trousers are passing.

COOLIDGE IN LEAD, THINKS SULLIVAN

Predicts Davis Will Run Ahead of Cox Record With 193 Votes in Electoral College.

BY MARK SULLIVAN.

New York, November 1.—In all the territory from the Atlantic coast to the Mississippi river, and north of the Ohio river and the Mason and Dixon line, there are 14 states. Of all these states, there are but two that Coolidge can be spoken of as in any degree likely to lose. These two are Wisconsin, which he will probably lose to La Follette, and Indiana, which he may lose to Davis. The remaining states in this territory, with the number of electors each has, are as follows:

Maine, 6; New Hampshire, 4; Vermont, 4; Massachusetts, 15; Rhode Island, 5; Connecticut, 7; New York, 38; New Jersey, 14; Pennsylvania, 38; Ohio, 24; Michigan, 15; Illinois, 20. Total votes, 209.

Here are 209 electors voted to Coolidge. Crossing the Mississippi, Coolidge is almost equally certain to carry the following states: Kansas, 10; Oregon, 5; Utah, 4.

Brings Total to 228.

MORGAN COMPANY FINANCED DRIVE FOR G. O. P. - WALSH

La Follette Counsel in Slush Fund Probe Says Bankers Underwrote Campaign Budget.

G. O. P. WAR CHEST HIT BY DEMOCRATS

Washington, November 1.—A statement given out at the democratic committee headquarters tonight assailed the republican campaign contributions list and declared that many of those who contributed would benefit materially by a revision of the tax law along the lines of the Mellon plan.

The statement included a long list of the largest contributors to the republican war chest and compared the amount of income tax they paid last year with the amount they would have paid under the reduced surtax rates of the Mellon proposal.

Washington, November 1.—In the opinion of Frank P. Walsh, attorney who represented Senator La Follette in the senate committee's investigation of campaign funds, the testimony has shown that the firm of J. P. Morgan and company really financed the republican campaign.

Walsh, in a statement today, summed up his views of what the hearings had disclosed. Republican contributions, he concluded, had come principally from the leading financial and industrial figures of the country. The attorney said his conclusions were based on a "careful analysis" of the testimony and that this analysis would be filed with the committee.

"Upon the basis of the data now made public it can be stated as a fact that the banking house of J. P. Morgan & Company has underwritten the republican campaign fund," Walsh said.

NEGROES HOLD UP CROWDED GROCERY GET $791 IN CASH

Clerks and Customers Held at Bay by Two Bandits While Third Rifled Cash Register.

WHITE HANDKERCHIEFS USED TO COVER FACES

Negroes Escape in Dark Into Alley—None of Customers Relieved of Purses by Dark Trio.

During one of the busiest hours of the day, when the store was crowded with customers, three masked negroes entered the grocery store of Jake Feuman, 161 East Harris street, about 6 o'clock Saturday evening, held up a dozen customers and clerks, and rifled the cash register of $791 in cash and $56.50 in checks, according to police.

The negroes, after successfully carrying out their daring hold-up, retreated into the street and disappeared into the darkness of an alley on Butler street, just around the corner from the grocery establishment, according to several of the witnesses.

Seven of the customers in the store at the time of the robbery were white persons.

Entering the front of the store with the lower part of their faces hidden by white handkerchiefs, the negroes flashed revolvers on the customers and clerks and ordered them to hold their arms above their heads and remain silent. While two of the negroes held the terrified customers, the huskier of the three negroes methodically went about the business of emptying the cash drawer.

After accomplishing their purpose, the trio backed silently out into the street with no more ado, rounded the corner of Butler street and were soon lost in the darkness.

The hold-up was investigated by Call Officers W. A. Goode and M. B. Johnson.

MADDOX REQUESTS LARGE DAVIS VOTE

Fulton County Nominees Also Call on Voters To Cast Straight Democratic Ticket Tuesday.

Adding his voice to other leaders of the democratic party, both nationally and in the state, G. Ed Maddox, of Rome, chairman of the state democratic executive committee, Saturday issued a statement calling upon Georgia democrats to roll up a record-breaking popular vote for John W. Davis at the election Tuesday.

At the same time, democratic nominees for Fulton county offices issued a statement, calling upon every democrat in the county to stand loyally behind the regular party nominees and vote the straight ticket Tuesday.

Big Popular Vote Necessary.
Chairman Maddox, in his statement, declared surface indications justify confidence in a democratic victory for the presidency, but that it is possible, in view of the third party candidacy of Senator La Follette, that the election may be thrown into congress through failure of either Davis or Coolidge to win a majority in the electoral college.

"It is unnecessary," says Mr. Maddox, "to dwell upon the moral advantage that will accrue to the presidential candidate who receives the largest popular vote, in event the contest goes to congress."

The statement of Mr. Maddox follows.

Statement of Maddox.
To the Democrats of Georgia:

The state democratic organization shares with managers of the democratic campaign a deep interest and genuine concern in getting out a record-breaking vote in Georgia next Tuesday. The appeal of National Chairman Shaver, voicing the wishes of John W. Davis for the fullest vote in Georgia, should command itself to every member of our party as it com-

TROOPS PATROL NILES; TROUBLE SUBSIDING

Martial Law Declared When Parade Crowds and Resisters Clash. Militia Prevents March.

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.

Niles, Ohio, November 1.—State militia tonight patrolled the streets of Niles following a day of rioting between members of the Ku Klux Klan and Knights of the Flaming Circle. Quiet was rapidly returning tonight.

Gun battles between Flaming Circle adherents and Ku Klux Klansmen had occurred near the meeting places of the rival factions. Pistol fights between speeding automobiles and klansmen and Klan foes added to the casualty toll.

Several times shots were fired by the opposing factions in their rival camps. Many of these shots went wild as large numbers of men fell flat on the ground when the firing started.

Military control, however, was not established until after almost a dozen persons had been shot or badly maimed. Some are in hospitals in serious condition at Warren, the county seat of Trumbull county, five miles away.

Townfolk Great Troops.

Arrival of the uniformed troops was the most welcome sight which citizens of this city had seen in some time, as it meant immediate disintegration of the opposing forces. As the big motor trucks rolled through the streets loaded with soldiers and machine guns mounted on their hoods and tops, shouts and cheers went up from the crowds which lined the streets.

Sheriff Thomas said this evening after a tour of the city that "everything is quiet and I don't expect any more trouble."

The sheriff with scores of special deputies had managed to keep the opposing forces from coming together en masse until the arrival of state troops. His efforts of preserving order, however, did not prevent numerous sporadic clashes among detached units of the opposing forces, resulting in the casualties.

"I am tickled to death that it was no more," was the only statement Sheriff Thomas would make tonight. Colonel L. S. Connolly, of the 148th Infantry, who was placed in command of all troops ordered to Niles by Governor Donahue, in a statement to the citizens of Niles, said it was not his intention to impose unnecessary military regulations on them and urged all to cooperate with him in maintaining order.

Mayor "Lays Low."
Tonight practically all klansmen from other cities had left the city or were rapidly leaving by back routes or avoiding entering the city. A special train carrying several hundred klansmen from Kent and other cities arrived after the Erie railroad after military authorities had taken charge.

of the situation. They were not permitted to leave the train.

Many business places were closed tonight. All banks were closed though it is their custom to remain open on Saturday nights.

Throughout all today's tense period, Mayor Harvey C. Kistler was not at his office which he had left last evening. No one connected with the city administration professed to know where the city's chief executive was. Police Chief L. J. Rounds said he thought Mayor Kistler "probably is in the city somewhere attending to official duties."

Arrest Klan "Police."
Until the arrival of the first units of the militia, about 3 o'clock this afternoon, Sheriff Thomas and his deputies and local police had arrested almost 50 persons, most of them special klan "police" who had been empowered by Mayor Kistler and who had been sent out to patrol the streets along the proposed line of march of the parade.

Some were heavily armed. A bushel basket would not hold the pistols that were confiscated and in a corner of Police Chief Rounds' office to night repose about a dozen rifles and shotguns. Ammunition belts filled with loaded cartridges, besides handfuls of loose loaded cartridges, helped to make up the booty.

Patrols of the flaming circle also brought into police headquarters a number of persons carrying firearms. Most of the klanmen were taken to headquarters, but no serious charge was filed against them and they were permitted to leave after the militia had assumed control of the city. They were loaded in large buses at the police station and under military guard taken to the klan meeting place about two miles from here.

Several persons still were being held in custody tonight on charges of carrying concealed weapons. Two charged with shooting with intent to wound were released under bond at Warren.

3 Shot at Flaming Circle Camp.
The belief was general among officials and citizens of Niles that there would have been much more serious trouble had the city not been placed under military control. They believe that the timely arrival of troops was all that prevented many lives from being sacrificed.

The situation already tense at dawn this morning as a result of the shooting last night of Frank McDermott, 19, son of former State Senator John McDermott, was almost unbearable by early afternoon.

When police patrols would answer a riot call, immediately could be seen machines loaded with anti-klan forces speeding in the same direction.

The most tense spot in the city throughout the day was in the vicinity of Main and Federal streets, where the Knights of the Flaming Circle had their headquarters in an open field, and where three members of the flaming circle were shot down by men in a passing automobile with side curtains drawn. About a mile beyond into the country was the camp of the klanmen.

TWELVE INJURED DURING RIOTS.
Niles, Ohio, November 1.—(By The Associated Press).—At least twelve persons were injured in sporadic street rioting today between Ku Klux Klan supporters and anti-klan factions who clashed over a scheduled klan parade.

The parade was prevented by the arrival of troops ordered here by Governor Donahy.

Reports that several persons were killed were not confirmed by a military survey of the situation early this evening.

Nine Are Shot.
Nine of the victims suffered gunshot wounds, two of them being reported in a critical condition. The others were beaten by crowds.

E. G. Victor, of Farrell, Pa., shot in the heart and lungs, and Joseph Murray, of Niles, with a bullet lodged in the base of the brain, probably will die, hospital physicians said.

E. E. Cope, of Seabright, with a knife wound in the head, and Elsworth Keyser, of Youngstown, were reported in a serious condition.

Quiet was restored shortly before 3 o'clock by the arrival of two companies of guardsmen from Warren and Youngstown, nearby. Several other units arrived later.

Colonel L. S. Connolly, commander of the One Hundred and Forty-fifth infantry, immediately took over the police authority and issued a proclamation placing the community under strict military control.

Young First Victim.
Governor Donahy's order mobilizing the troops came after several hours of intermittent rioting of increasing violence. It followed several urgent requests for aid by Niles city officials and Sheriff John E. Thomas, of Trumbull county, during the last two days, which the governor declined to heed, taking the stand that the local authorities had power and authority to control the situation.

The first victim of the violence, Frank McDermott, a 19-year-old youth, was shot from a passing automobile on a street corner before daybreak this morning. McDermott, the son of one of the leaders in the group which yesterday appealed to Mayor H. C. Kistler to revoke the permit for the parade, professed neutrality in the community feud.

Ohio national guardsmen took control of the city authority in Niles shortly before 3 p. m.

Throw Cordon Around City.
Troops from Youngstown and Warren moved into Niles, immediately threw a cordon about the city, between the business district and the assembling field for the klan parade, about two miles from here.

Several of the injured were reported in a critical condition.

Before the arrival of the troops, deputy sheriffs and members of the anti-klan faction massed at Federal and Main streets, the principal highways leading to the klan field, turning back automobiles in an effort to participate in the parade.

At least six distinct clashes were reported to Chief of Police Rounds up to 2:30 o'clock.

In one outbreak several men fired with rifles from a motor truck into knots of pedestrians, wounding three.

Qualified martial law was established in the city after efforts of the sheriff and Chief Rounds to cope with the situation had become futile.

A move to halt the parade by injunction had been under way in another quarter.

Sheriff Thomas had augmented his force of deputies throughout the day, but refused to arm his assistants until forced to do so. Ten deputies were on duty at the ball park, at which the klanmen assembled.

Word of Troops Quits Mob.
Handbills urging "free-born Americans" to refuse to submit to the dictation of foreigners were circulated in the downtown districts for several hours this morning before Chief Rounds prohibited the activity.

Word from Columbus, the state capital, after the fourth clash of the day that a regiment of national guardsmen had been ordered mobilized, tended to quiet the tense feeling which has stirred the community for two days.

Sheriff John E. Thomas, of Trumbull county, had sworn in more than 100 special deputies late this afternoon.

A throng of five thousand persons assembled at an outlying ball park an hour before the scheduled hour of the parade.

Two Robbed Men Beaten.
Two robbed klanmen were attacked by an excited crowd of pedestrians in the business section of the city. The pair were seized near the headquarters of the Knights of the Flaming Circle, which has arranged itself against a parade of klanmen arranged for this afternoon.

The crowd of more than a score of men dragged their victims from an open car, beat them and ordered them out of the neighborhood.

Three men were shot during the strife raging about a parade of the Ku Klux Klan scheduled for 3 o'clock. Joe Mahone, Dominick Toone and Arthur Davis, all members of the Knights of the Flaming Circle, opposed to the klan, were shot from an automobile about a half mile from the ball park at which the klanmen had assembled for the parade.

Major Christie, of the Youngstown unit of the Ohio national guard, immediately wired Governor Donahy, urging that troops be sent into Niles.

WILLITE TO BE USED UPON PONCE DE LEON

Paving of Ponce de Leon avenue from Peachtree street to the Southern railroad, award of the contract for which has been recommended by the street committee of city council, will be done with willite, manufactured by the Willite Southeast company, of which Don M. Dickinson is president.

Contract for this work was let to the McDougall Construction company, at a cost of $59,472.40 for the 45,748 square feet.

When the new paving is completed, Ponce de Leon avenue will be one of the finest streets in the city. The paving will be laid thick enough to withstand the heaviest traffic.

In addition to Ponce de Leon, many other streets in Atlanta have been paved with willite, notably Edgewood, Jackson, Boulevard, Highland, Whitehall and Pine streets.

Hearings To Fix County Salaries Begin This Week

The Fulton county commission will begin a series of hearings this week for the purpose of fixing the salaries of county officers.

By decision of Henry Wood, clerk of the commission, complete information regarding the salaries now being paid the employees of the various departments, together with recommendations concerning future salaries.

The salary question will not be discussed at the regular meeting of the commission Wednesday, it was announced, but a time will be set at the meeting when the first of the hearings on the subject will be held.

Members of the commission have declined to discuss their recommendations, stating that they will not be made public until the matter is thoroughly investigated.

MADDOX REQUESTS LARGE DAVIS VOTE

Davis is familiar with the political outlook.

Although the surface indications justify confidence in a democratic victory at the polls, it is possible, in view of Senator La Follette's candidacy, that the election may be thrown into question through failure of either Davis or Coolidge to win a majority in the electoral college.

Gives Moral Advantage.
It is unnecessary to dwell upon the moral advantage that will accrue to the presidential candidate who receives the largest popular vote, in the event the contest goes to congress.

Georgia, in common with her sister states of the south, is solidly democratic. The preponderance of democratic sentiment in the south can be realized only if all the democrats go to the polls.

The party believes rightly that the democratic majorities in southern states can be increased in such proportion as to give the democrats the popular majority in the nation.

As the second most populous state in the south, Georgia can and should give to Davis and Bryan a majority nearly as large as that of Texas. If the democrats will turn out next Tuesday this hope will be realized. I appeal to them to do their full duty toward their party.

Vote on Amendments.
While it is gratifying that none of the democratic candidates, including the governor, state officers and judges, are opposed in the election, there will be submitted to the voters eight constitutional amendments. It is the duty of every citizen to express his views on these suggested changes in the organic laws of the state. This duty should furnish an additional incentive to the democrats to go to the polls.

As chairman of the state democratic executive committee, I feel it my duty to call upon members of the state executive committee and upon the chairmen and members of county and city executive committees to devote their best efforts to getting out the fullest vote next Tuesday.

Appeal for County Ticket.
A joint statement, issued Saturday by democratic leaders of Fulton county, calls upon all Fulton county democrats to stand behind the party organization and vote the straight democratic ticket.

It was explained that any names of party nominees missing among the signatures could not be reached Saturday.

We feel that it is the solemn duty of every democratic voter in this county to abide by the verdict of our democratic primaries and align themselves squarely behind the democratic candidates for national, state and county offices.

"The strength and usefulness of the democratic party as an agency for white supremacy and good government depends in large measure upon the loyalty of its individual members, and we feel it our duty to remind Fulton county democrats of the moral and legal obligation that rests upon them to support all democratic nominees for office in the coming election."

"John A. Boykin, solicitor general; T. C. Miller, clerk superior court; L. Lowry, sheriff; W. S. Richardson, tax collector; George M. Hope, county commissioner; I. N. Ragdale, county commissioner; W. H. Abbott, tax receiver."

COOLIDGE TO WIN, CLAIMS PROPHET

The others already mentioned; but if one were to say at any time during the last week of the campaign whom they are likely to go for, the answer is Coolidge. These states are: California, 13; Idaho, 4; these are not all of the states west of the Mississippi that Coolidge has the best chance to carry.

Sees Life Majority.
I think he will carry in addition: Arizona, 3; Colorado, 6; Montana, 4; Wyoming, 3; Iowa, 13. Admittedly a group takes us into the genuinely democratic region. The best judgment, however, is that Coolidge will carry these, on that assumption we now have 274 electors to be credited Coolidge.

Let us now leave the west and turn to the border states, traditionally as faithful as between the republicans and democrats. These are, from east to west:

Delaware, 3; Maryland, 8; West Virginia, 8; Kentucky, 13; Missouri, 18; Oklahoma, 10.

Of these 60 electors, Coolidge is likely to get at the very least, 16. The states in this group that he is most likely to carry are Maryland and West Virginia, in spite of the fact that West Virginia is Davis' native state. It is also true that it is more often a republican than a democratic state, and the reports from there during the closing days of the campaign are convincing to the effect that the state is likely to go republican.

These 16, added to what Coolidge already is credited with, make 290. This 290 is the minimum of Coolidge's probable winning. He is more likely to have more than less. Indeed, he is very likely to have more. With 290 he is safe.

Davis to Beat Cox.
To arrive at what others he may win, let us now approach the subject from the point of view of what states Davis and La Follette are likely to carry.

Davis will do very much better than Cox in 1920. Republican predictions to the contrary are not well founded. Davis will carry certainly the usual southern states, including Tennessee and Kentucky. The total score of these states is as follows:

Alabama, 12; Arkansas, 9; Florida, 6; Georgia, 14; Kentucky, 13; Louisiana, 10; Mississippi, 10; North Carolina, 12; South Carolina, 9; Tennessee, 12; Texas, 20; Virginia, 12.

These twelve states, with their 139 electors, are certain for Davis. In addition, I think he will carry Missouri with 18 electors and Oklahoma, with 10. Of the two, Missouri is more dangerous from the democratic point of view than Oklahoma. Adding these 28 electors gives Davis 167. Beyond this, Davis has the best chance to carry New Mexico, with 5 electors, making 170. From now we enter the territory where it is difficult to be certain.

Has Chance In Indiana.
I said in the beginning that Davis has a chance to carry Indiana, and he has, although my judgment is that Coolidge is a little more likely to carry the state. On the state ticket the republicans are fairly certain to lose Indiana. They are likely to lose also in this net at least one congressman in the state. But as between Davis and Coolidge, Coolidge is a little more likely to carry Indiana.

Another state that Davis has a chance to carry is Nebraska. If we should concede these two states, Indiana, 15, and Nebraska, 8, to Davis, we have a total of 193. This seems likely to be the outside extreme of Davis' strength.

Turn now to La Follette, the six states that La Follette is most likely to carry, and in the order of their likelihood are:

Wisconsin, 13; Washington, 7; Nevada, 3; North Dakota, 5; South Dakota, 5; Minnesota, 12.

Totals 45 Electors.
These six states, with an aggregate of 45 electors, are the probable limit of La Follette's strength. I should not be surprised to see him lose both Minnesota and North Dakota to Coolidge. I have already said he is likely to lose Iowa to Coolidge. One of these so-called La Follette states, as to which most observers are in doubt, is South Dakota, with five electors. South Dakota is the one state between Johnson was able to take away from Coolidge when he tried for the nomination last spring. Nevertheless, I think Coolidge is more likely to carry it than La Follette.

As to all these northwestern states, much depends on so small a matter as whether the weather next Tuesday is such as to bring out both the farmer vote and the town vote, or the town vote only. With respect to all these northwest states doubtful as to whether to assign each state separately is now much more than a refinement of figures. The truth is, there is a territory in the northwest in which the La Follette following takes in close to half of the electorate. Any political expression of these states as a group in congress, for example, is as likely to be progressive as republican.

Coolidge May Get 321.
Returning now to the 290 which is the minimum of Coolidge's strength, let us list the following states which are most nearly doubtful states between him and Davis: Indiana 15, Missouri 18.

And the following which are most nearly doubtful as between Coolidge and La Follette: Minnesota 12, Washington 7, North Dakota 5, South Dakota 5.

Here are 62 electors. They are in a group of states in which the average Coolidge vote is as much likehood of success as Davis in two of them, or as La Follette in the other four. If we concede to Coolidge one-half of these electors, or 31, and add them to the 290 already conceded to him, we have 321 as a number for which Coolidge may reasonably hope.

As respects the senate, the republicans will gain one in Massachusetts, where Davis, a democrat, is most likely to be defeated. As against this the republicans are likely to lose one senator in Delaware. Again, they will gain one senator in Montana, where Davis, a farmer-laborer, in Minnesota. They are likely to gain another in Oklahoma, for, although Oklahoma is a democratic candidate for United States senate will run behind him. The net gains of the republicans in the senate are not likely to exceed 2. In terms of the republican party, but of the conservative point of view.

Walsh declared that 75 per cent of all contributions reported to date "have come directly from the representatives of the great corporate interests."

Examination of the lists of contributors, he said, disclosed that officers or directors "in every great industrial and financial combination in the country" were included. Of individuals making contributions of more than $1,000 Walsh said more than 92 per cent were listed in financial manuals and directories "as officers or directors in large industrial and financial corporations."

"Even more shocking," Walsh declared, "was the fact that contributions are listed from numerous individuals directly interested as defendants in anti-trust suits, prosecutions for fraud upon the government, and persons directly interested in tax refund cases, oil leases, flexible tariff adjustments and other proceedings now pending either in the courts or in the executive departments at Washington."

DECISION ON REPORT OF PROBE DELAYED.
Washington, November 1.—Decision as to whether the senate committee investigating campaign funds will submit a partial report before the election on the testimony produced at the hearings in Washington and Chicago was 1-3 in abeyance tonight pending a conference between members of the committee, probably Monday.

Chairman Borah said tonight that although he had "ever positive ideas" based on the testimony and thought a statement should be issued for the benefit of the public, he did not feel he should issue a statement until he had obtained the views of the other members of the committee. He reached Washington late today from Shipstead, farmer-laborer, Minnesota, heard testimony concerning campaign finance.

Senator Caraway, of Arkansas, and Senator Bayard, of Delaware, both democrats, who conducted the Washington section of the hearing, were both of the city today.

The investigation will be resumed after the election, Chairman Borah said, but not "immediately after."

tortured her tender flesh. A verge lifted her from the floor. Cruelly suffering, the "Red Virgin" was taken to a hospital, where it was announced that she probably would live. When she is better, perhaps Germaine will tell the true story of her love for Philippe and hatred for his father and of the impassioned moment when the youthful lover pledged himself to complete the task she had begun—to kill Leon Daudet.

The royalist leader scorns the theory that his son had accepted anarchism. Philippe was killed, the father says, by anarchists or communists who sought revenge in that way. Philippe was his father's source of inspiration. His death, whether it was suicide or murder, was the most cruel blow the elder Daudet's enemies could have devised.

Her Nickname Unsettled.
Mme. Leon Daudet, mother of Philippe, has received a letter from Germaine, in which the girl intimates that she had been Philippe's mistress. Forlorn without the boy, Germaine explained, she had knelt at his grave to die.

This dramatic gesture of the wayward, temperamental, half-crazed girl in which she pathetically wrote to the distinguished royalist society woman just as one woman to another, the disgraced Paris from the island to the forts.

The implications of her affair with Philippe render inappropriate the "Red Virgin" nickname with which she was hailed in the underworld. In the popular mind Germaine was conceived as a tempestuous, erratic girl who scorned the advances of her immoral associates; one who had become a bride of anarchism as other French maids become brides of the church.

there is hardly likely to be any gain whatever. If the republicans beat Magni Johnson with Thomas Schall, they will have a senator republican in name, it is true, but as likely to be identified with Brookhart as with the regular republican organization.

In South Dakota a conservative republican is retiring. The republican will probably elect his successor. But this successor also is of the type most likely to follow the leadership of La Follette than that of Senator Lodge.

O. P. to Lose in House.
As respects the lower house of congress, the republicans will probably suffer a small net loss. There are several states like Ohio, Indiana, Minnesota and Pennsylvania, where the republicans seem destined to lose from 3 to 5 congressmen in each. As against this, there are a few states like New Jersey where the republicans are likely to make gains similar in number. Viewed in terms of the line-up between conservative spokesmen on the one side and the other radicals or progressives, the complexion of the new congress is not likely to be greatly different from the complexion of the present one. Of the present 435 members of the lower house, exactly 400 sought re-nomination at the primaries last summer and spring. Out of these 385 were re-nominated. Of the 25 republican members of the present house, 208 sought re-nomination and 196 were re-nominated.

See the nominations of the two pairs for the coming congress in the districts where they prevail are so nearly identical, it is a loose, but nevertheless fair, inference that such changes as occur will more or less cancel each other, and that the essential complexion of the new congress will not differ from the present one. To be specific, what is most likely is that the new congress will probably have much the same attitude toward the Mellon tax bill, for example, as the present congress had when it considered it last winter.

General O'Ryan Will Make Address on Armistice Day

Commander of 27th Division in World War To Speak Under Legion Auspices.

Details of the Atlanta celebration on November 11 of Armistice day, have been completed, and it is announced that Major General John F. O'Ryan, commander of the New York national guard on the Mexican border in 1916 and the Twenty-seventh division in Belgium and France in 1917-18 is to be the principal speaker.

General O'Ryan is to speak under the auspices of the Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs, which, with the Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs, is jointly in charge of the Armistice day celebration. The celebration will be held at the Baptist Tabernacle, beginning at 7:45 o'clock, Tuesday night week.

Women Will Preside.

Mrs. Archibald P. Brantley, president of the Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs, and Mrs. T. T. Stevens, president of the Atlanta Federation, will be the presiding officers. The celebration will be called to order by Mrs. Brantley. Music for the occasion will be furnished by a military band. A procession and a recitation by the audience of the "Pledge to the Flag" are to be features of the program.

Dr. M. Ashby Jones will deliver the invocation. This will be followed by addresses of welcome by Mrs. T. T. Stevens, J. B. Conyers, commander of the Argonne Post No. 1, American Legion; Governor Clifford Walker, and Mayor Walter A. Sims. Mrs. Brantley will then present state officers and distinguished guests to the audience.

Legion Takes Over Program.

Following this presentation, the program will be turned over to the American Legion, which will conduct the following program: Unfurling of the Gold Star flag by Color Bearer Maurice Alexander; eulogy by Rev. B. Lacy, Jr.; "Soldier's Rest," by the Yarnall Chanters; introduction of General David Shanks by Commander J. B. Conyers; introduction of General John F. O'Ryan by General Shanks. General O'Ryan will then deliver his address, after which the celebration exercises will be closed with pronouncement of the benediction by Father J. A. Hovens.

General O'Ryan received his LL.B. degree from New York university in 1898 and his LL.D. from the same institute in 1919. He is also a graduate of the Army War college. He began his military career in the national guard of New York, and from the ranks of this organization he rose to the grade of major general.

Has Many Citations.

General O'Ryan received numerous citations for bravery during the world war. He was awarded the Distinguished Service Medal, was designated a Knight Commander of the Most Distinguished Order of St. Michael and St. George, and Commander of the Victorian Order (British); was made a Commander of the Legion of Honor and awarded the Croix de Guerre with palm (French), and was made a Commander of the Order of Leopold and awarded the Croix de Guerre with palm (Belgian).

Since the war, General O'Ryan has been counsel for the senatorial committee investigating the veterans' bureau; a member of the New York state transit committee and chairman-general of the citizens' committee on the Mellon tax reduction plan. He is also a member of the executive committee of the League of Nations Non-Partisan association.

CHOSEN SPEAKER ARMISTICE DAY

GENERAL JOHN F. O'RYAN.

EXCITING SESSION EXPECTED MONDAY

resolution. He said that demoralization has been brought about deliberately in the police department, and that conditions made necessary "an immediate investigation to place responsibility for these conditions where they belong."

Will Charge Irregularities. He probably will charge that the committee has acted irregularly on several occasions, and that "crime has increased and prosecutions grown lax since the demoralization methods have been put into progress by the police committee."

Dr. Aven has denounced the police committee in several statements since that body transferred a number of police officers on October 1, and has threatened an investigation that will "shake the department, and the police committee with it, to the very roots."

In his resolution, he probably will refer to the grand jury presentations, which severely criticized the department for laxity, and charge that criminals are being protected by police officers. However, the detective department, which is headed by Captain A. J. Holcomb, instead of being mentioned unfavorably in the jury presentations, was lauded for its fine work, especially in recovery of stolen automobiles.

Fight Bitter Against Resolution. While it appears that Dr. Aven's resolution will be adopted and an investigating committee appointed, it is certain that a bitter fight will be launched against it, sponsored by members of the police department. Dr. Aven and Councilman E. H. Inman, chairman of the police committee, clashed on the floor of council several weeks ago when Mr. Inman, following attacks on the committee by Dr. Aven, invited the latter to "take his threats and go to hell with them."

Another bitter argument is expected on the ordinance, introduced two weeks ago by Councilman R. F. Pennington, which would increase to 12 the number of members of the fire, police, waterworks, hospitals and charities, parks and sanitary committees.

ATTENDED BANQUET OF FOOD DEALERS

The ordinance was introduced at the last session of council, a motion to place it on second reading being defeated when a majority was obtained, but the number of votes fell a few short of the required two-thirds.

Majority Will Pass Ordinance. However, the measure automatically will come up at Monday's meeting, and a majority will secure its passage. Administration members of council mustered enough votes to defeat placing the bill on second reading at the last meeting, but its sponsors claim that a majority can be obtained easily Monday night, when necessary, two-thirds of the vote could be secured. It is possible that if the bill is passed, it will be vetoed by the mayor, in which case another fight would ensue when a motion to override is made.

Because of the Pennington measure, no reports will be made Monday by the special committee headed by Councilman John A. White, and providing for abolition of several committees and consolidation of others.

The committee's report will affect several committees mentioned by Pennington's measure, and will be held up pending council's action on the House Monday.

Another feature of Monday's session will be election of an aide man from the tenth ward to fill the unexpired term of Alderman L. N. Hagdale, who resigned two weeks ago in order to become a candidate for the Fulton county board of commissioners.

Carl Dolvin nominated as aide man from the tenth ward at the city democratic primary in September, will be nominated for the remainder of Mr. Hagdale's term, and is not expected to have opposition. Mr. Dolvin's regular term will start January 1.

Another Candidate Likely. More than one candidate, however, probably will be nominated. W. E. Moore on the board of trustees of Carnegie library from the twelfth ward, made vacant by resignation of I. E. Brannan, W. D. Hall will be nominated by Councilman R. F. Pennington, and while no other candidate has announced yet, an opponent probably will be named Monday.

Payment of $21,925 to the Peck & Gregg Hardware company will be recommended Monday by the bond commission to reimburse that concern for expenses incurred when the building was altered to permit widening and extension of Fairlee street, when the Spring street viaduct was built.

The hardware company originally requested $26,483, but the claim was slashed approximately $5,000 after the bond commission had heard each explanation.

Paving Contracts Considered. Council also will be asked to ratify award of contracts for paving of Ponce de Leon avenue from Peachtree to the tracks of the Southern railway, in addition to five other paving contracts.

Recommendations also will be made Monday on either refusal or acceptance of Fulton county's offer of $45,000 for Beall park, located at Woodward avenue, Washington street and Brown place. The park committee of council will meet before the general council session to decide what recommendations will be made, and indications are that a hot fight will develop at the committee meeting. It is understood that the body is divided on the project, and a minority report is certain.

Purchased for $35,000. The land was purchased for $35,000 about five years ago, when the city planned to build a grammar school on the site. However, the property was turned into a playground this year and approximately $5,000 worth of equipment installed.

Members of the committee who oppose the sale claim that a playground is the only one in that section. Those advocating sale of the land contend that the equipment can be moved to any other park, and point out that the city will realize a $10,000 profit if the city accepts the offer, county authorities plan to build a $200,000 country high school on the site and to buy the remainder of the block for use as a playground.

May Discuss Landing Field. There also is a possibility that Atlanta's municipal airplane landing field may be taken up in council Monday. Dr. C. C. Aven, chairman of the special committee designated to investigate proposed sites, stated Saturday that the committee may recommend that the city obtain an option on the Nichols property on Brown's Mill road, with the privilege of purchasing it for $65,000 after the first of next year. He added that every site offered for a landing field has been investigated thoroughly, and that the Brown's Mill property is the most adaptable in every respect.

Convicts Rebel Against Labor For Republicans. Washington, November 1.—A statement given out tonight at democratic headquarters declared that "the quadrennial slush fund collection in West Virginia by republican campaign committees" has "brought on 'strikes' of 900 convicts in the Moundsville penitentiary."

"For years past," said the statement, "the republicans have been assessing the contractors who are utilizing West Virginia's convict labor for the manufacture of convict-made goods."

"Every time the republican slush fund collectors squeeze a large campaign tribute out of the contractors, the contractors recoup themselves by squeezing more work out of the convicts."

"It is alleged that the republicans, in their effort this year to outdo all republican campaign collections, have exacted from the penitentiary contractors $50,000 and from officials, guards, etc., at the penitentiary another $25,000, with the result that the contractors this year have been forced to increase their prison output to a point beyond the ability of the convicts to perform."

LA FOLLETTE RESTATES OPPOSITION TO KLAN. Washington, November 1.—A telegram from Senator La Follette reaffirming his stand against racial discrimination was made public today by his campaign headquarters here. It replied specifically to a statement by Louis Marshall, of New York, with reference to a senate document containing criticisms of the Jews.

"Throughout my entire public career as representative, governor and United States senator," said Senator La Follette, "I have consistently opposed racial discrimination and religious intolerance."

"I was the first presidential candidate to declare my position as unalterably opposed to the Ku Klux Klan." Senator La Follette explained that the senate document referred to was inserted in the congressional record at the behest of a senatorial colleague, when he did not have the opportunity

Cars Recovered By Detectives; 4 Are Arrested

Members of the Atlanta detective force, assigned to the squad to recover stolen automobiles, captured two cars Saturday, arrested two white men, and recovered a stolen machine for Alabama authorities while in Anistion, Ala., to bring two alleged thieves to Atlanta.

Richard and Andrew Johnson, negroes, were arrested in Hartwell, Ga., and brought back to Atlanta by Detective A. Lamar Poole and S. A. Smith, while the automobile stolen from H. P. Minor, of 10 Ruxley drive, was recovered. Both negroes were indicted for larceny of the car by the Fulton grand jury.

Detective Smith and Officer G. E. Williams, whose automobile was stolen last week, returned from Anistion Saturday with Williams' car. A man named Walter Jolley is held on a charge of suspicion in connection with the theft. Another man, W. T. Whitehead, will be brought to Atlanta from Anistion in connection with the same theft, after he has completed serving a term there for larceny after trust.

FOUR DESPERADOES SLAIN IN FIGHT

killing, according to word reaching the sheriff's office here. Ashley, known as the Jesse James of the south, had been cleverly eluded officers. For years the sheriffs of six south Florida counties had sought the bandit, who invariably sought refuge in the Everglades when pursued.

After forces numbering hundreds had unsuccessfully pursued Ashley, Sheriff of this county, learned from the agents yesterday afternoon that the force would attempt to escape northward over the Dixie highway. Immediately dispatched five deputies to beat south Florida's main exit to the north.

The Ashley gang, notorious for more than fifteen years along the coast from St. Lucie county to the Florida Keys below Miami, and across the Gulf stream in the Bahamas, are charged with a long list of crimes ranging from bank robbery and piracy on the high seas down to "moonshining" and petty thievery.

Banks at Stuart, Homestead and other places, robbed by armed and masked men, were said to have been held up by the Ashley gang. The robbery of the bank at Pompano several weeks ago was believed to have been accomplished by the gang.

The Stuart bank was robbed about two years ago, and Sanford Mobley and two other members of the gang were taken. The trio were removed from the Palm Beach county jail to the Broward jail at Fort Lauderdale, where Mobley and one companion made their escape.

In the attempted robbery of the Homestead bank several years ago one of the Ashley gang was killed. Another time in the Palm Beach county jail John Ashley was shot and lost the sight of one eye in a successful head-on assault.

Several months ago when Ashley led a "moonshine" camp in the Everglades, sheriff's deputies from the Palm Beach office sought out the bandits. A deputy sheriff was killed and members of the gang arrested, but Ashley, Mobley and others most sought.

Among other crimes charged to the gang, who have terrorized the coast, was raiding of liquor stores and moonshining on or near the Bahama islands about two years ago. The British government has sought them for piracy on the high seas.

Highway robberies were laid at their door by victims who professed to recognize members of the gang as their assailants.

Fifth Audience Rehearsal For Big Symphony Concerts

"Onlooker," "listener," and orchestra assembled—enthusiasm is at its highest—the first concert of the second season is to be given. Leide steps forward—the "rehearsal" is interrupted by thunderous applause—an ovation for our conductor.

Date for second concert is November 9. Audience and orchestra make use of the extra rehearsal.

Leide has selected for this 14th concert played by the Atlanta Symphony orchestra the popular or the familiar program. The form of the compositions will be the opera, song or tone-poem, folk air and folk dance.

A search for the origin of the opera leads back to a time long antecedent to the beginning of the Christian era; the story of its infancy may be gathered from the "history of ancient Greece; it is as old as the drama itself. To define the opera, it is the largest musical form, a drama set to music for solo voices, chorus and orchestra. Its component parts are, libretto, score, overture, entr'acte (intermezzo), chorus, concerted music, solo in the orchestra, and orchestra.

Leide presents the overture, grand fantasia and intermezzo. The overture is simply the "get ready" for the orchestra. The grand fantasia is the entire opera condensed. Fantasia is the Italian word meaning fancy. It is a remarkable product of an original theme. A species of music in which the composer yields to his imagination without regard to those restrictions which other productions are regulated. The intermezzo, or entr'acte is the musical interlude between the acts. Sometimes this has a direct connection with both the preceding and the following acts, and is only an independent composition with no bearing on the opera.

A song may be defined as a short metrical composition whose meaning is conveyed by the combined force of words and music. The song belongs equally to poetry and music. The song deals with emotion. The tone-poem is the music without the words. The folk air and folk dance is the simple song and dance popular with the common people. The air, tune, neighbor to neighbor. Dance rhythm has exerted the most powerful influence on music from prehistoric times till the present day. Composers of all schools have accepted the dance as the invaluable accessory to their art. Figures from national or folk dance and tunes have been employed by the famous composers, disguised to suit their individual style and to give the music a national flavor.

On this program we will "rehearse" with Thomas, Liszt, Gounod, Leoncavallo, Mascagni, Grainger and Thomas distinguished himself as a dramatic composer.

Liszt, whom we met at the concert last week, is always thought of as the founder of the modern instrumental school and a remarkable teacher. Gounod, the greatest genius of the modern French school, originally intended to enter the church and his imagination was reflected in his style of composition. The production of "Faust" absolutely established his

PLEASANT SUNDAY IS PROMISE MADE BY WEATHER MAN

Another pleasant Sunday is in store for Atlantans according to the forecast made Saturday by C. F. von Herrmann, in charge of the local office of the United States weather bureau.

"Fair, little change in temperature," is the official prediction. October, the month just closed, has been remarkable for the sunshine and clear skies which have featured it throughout. Only two days, last Sunday and Monday, witnessed any rainfall. Every other day in the month was clear and warm, with temperatures averaging slightly above normal.

While October in Atlanta always is a pleasant fall month it has set a record of delight for 1924 which stands out as exceptional in recent years.

reputation. Leoncavallo in "I Pagliacci" achieved universal recognition. It is said by some critics that he is too theatrical and sensational in his art to be considered as a remarkable genius.

Mascagni won his first fame as an opera composer with his "Cavalleria Rusticana." This success had a serious effect on his later works, for he has not again equaled the strength of his first opera.

Grainger is one of the young school of English composers who is devoting his attention to the development of early English folk music.

Guion stands in a group of famous American composers searching for the foundation of the future national school of America among the folk songs of our land.

The next "rehearsal" will be the story of the program.

Officers Depart To Get Promoters Of Beauty Contest

Armed with requisition papers, and warrants, charging larceny after trust, County Officers W. A. Riley and Ed West left Atlanta Saturday, the former for Philadelphia to bring back Lee Manchell, and the latter for Martinsburg, W. Va., to bring back W. J. O'Brien, promoters of the beauty contest held in connection with the recent Southeastern fair.

The two men are said to have absconded with money belonging to contestants and fair officials.

Following a nation-wide search for the pair, representatives of the Burns Detective agency located O'Brien at Martinsburg last Thursday. Manchell was arrested in Philadelphia Saturday morning, according to a telegram received from the Burns agency.

O'Brien is alleged to have absconded with $2,000 belonging to participants in the beauty contest, while Manchell is charged with having left town with $300 in cash belonging to officials of the Southeastern Fair association. Warrants for their arrest, charging larceny after trust, were taken out in municipal court last Thursday. O'Brien's bond being set at $2,000 and Manchell's at $600.

The two promoters, according to officials of the fair, left Atlanta at the conclusion of the beauty contest in a roadster, carrying with them the money belonging to the contestants and the fair officials.

About one-third of the 75 women who have been ordained as ministers in the Congregational church in the United States are in sole charge of the churches.

FUNERAL FOR MOORE WILL BE HELD TODAY

Funeral services for Robert Frederick Moore, 68, prominent Atlanta business man and secretary of the Southern States Insurance company, who died Friday at his home, 24 Eighth street, will be held at 3 o'clock this afternoon from All Saints' Episcopal church. Rev. W. W. Meminger will officiate and interment will be in West View cemetery, with H. M. Patterson & Son, funeral directors, in charge.

Palbearers will be Wilmer L. Moore, Sr., Charlton B. Bidwell, Charles D. Atkinson, Ernest V. Moore, James B. Nevin and Cyril B. Smith.

Mr. Moore was born in Middlesborough, England, in 1856, moving to America in 1890, when he became connected with the Bankers' Life Insurance company of New York. He came to Atlanta in 1906 to become general secretary of the Southern States Life Insurance company. A few years later he became secretary of the company.

McCLATCHY RAISED TO VICE PRESIDENCY

Announcement was made Saturday of the election of Marvin B. McClatchy as vice president of the Mortgage Bond and Trust company, which took place at a recent meeting of the board of directors. At the same time C. J. Lewis was re-elected president; Frederick W. Patterson was re-elected vice president; Charles M. Jerome was re-elected secretary-treasurer, and S. W. Forence was re-elected assistant secretary.

Elevation of Mr. McClatchy to a vice presidency of the organization comes as a well-deserved recognition of his splendid business qualifications and native ability. He is a member of a prominent Georgia family and is one of the best known and most highly respected executives among the leading business men of the city. For a number of years he has been successfully engaged in the real estate and mortgage loan business in Atlanta, and in that connection he has become well and favorably known all over the state.

Other officers of the company have been identified with the concern for many years and have been largely responsible for its rapid and substantial growth to its position as one of the strongest and most progressive financial institutions in Georgia.

'Lost' for Years Woman Is Found By Constitution

Through a news story in The Constitution last Thursday, Mrs. Bessie Nix, of Chattahoochee, Ga., located relatives in Atlanta Friday after a seven-year search. Mrs. Nix had lost all trace of relatives after frequent changes of residence of both parties and in a last effort wrote the letter to The Constitution explaining the circumstances and asking for help. Mrs. Emma Smith, of 110 Simmons street, Mrs. Nix's sister, upon reading the news story, communicated with Mrs. Nix.

"We've been lost for seven or eight years now," Mrs. Smith declared, "and I had given up all hope of ever hearing from my sister again. We had thought of asking your paper to aid in a search for her, but somehow we hadn't, and we had just come to consider her lost."

"Now we are all so happy to have found my sister and I want to thank The Constitution from the bottom of my heart."

With Mrs. Smith at 110 Simmons street, reside her husband, Taylor Smith; their son, Louis; Mrs. Smith's father, James Payton, and her brother, Harold (Pete) Payton. They have lived in Atlanta for about 20 years, Mrs. Smith said. Another married brother lives on Bellwood avenue, she said.

Mrs. Smith explained that Mrs. Nix lived in Atlanta as a girl, but moved from the city after her marriage to Mr. Nix. Mr. Nix's health was poor and he took his wife to various countries to live, Mrs. Smith said.

The families corresponded for several years and then after seven or eight years, after frequent changes of residence, they lost each other's address, Mrs. Smith declared.

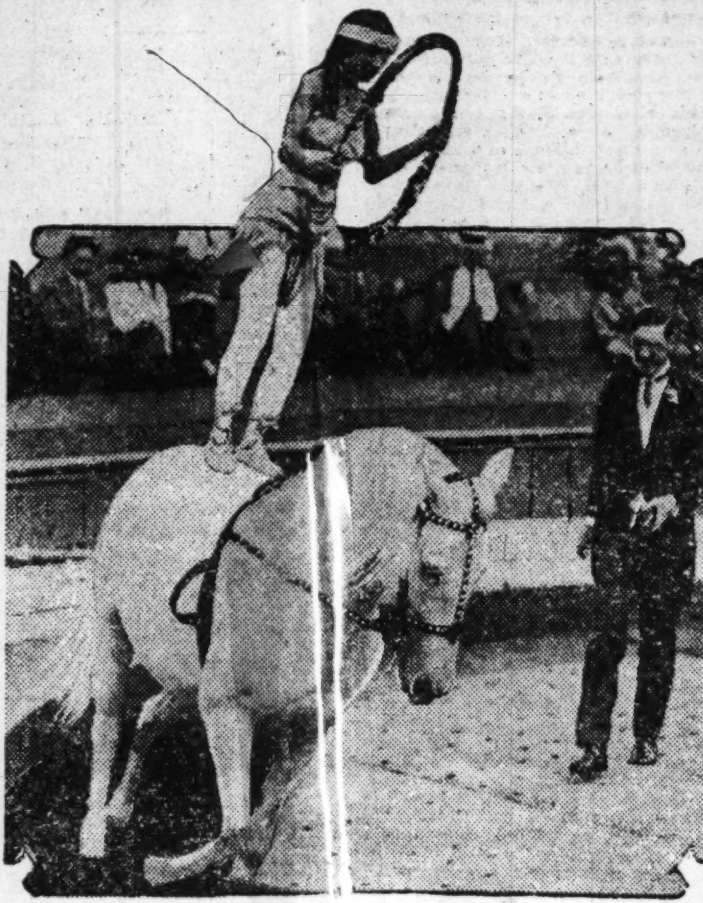

Hope of again hearing from her sister had been practically abandoned. Mrs. Smith declared Friday, until members of her family noticed the story in The Constitution.

CHATHAM CANDIDATES WILL RECEIVE REFUND

Savannah, Ga., November 1.—(Special.)—Candidates who ran in the recent state primary for Chatham county officers—winners and losers—will receive a refund from money paid as entrance fees.

The executive committee, after doating $500 to the democratic campaign fund for Davis and Bryan, has nearly $4,000 left in the treasury.

Numerous Popular Acts In Grotto Charity Circus

Miss Edith Costello, one of the world's most famous young women riders, who will be seen here November 5-15 in the big charity circus at Spiller's park.

The circus world has its aristocrats, and the Grotto Charity Circus is no exception. It is a colorful realm of the big top, its men and women who have been reared in the traditions of the circus as handed down through generations.

One such of these aristocrats is Miss Edith Costello, who will appear in Atlanta with the charity circus to be presented by Ararat Grotto at Spiller's park November 5-15. Miss Costello, an equestrienne with a wide fame among circus performers, has known nothing but the world of the circus into which she was born and in which her great-grandmother was a tight-rope walker with Lord George Sanger's circus in England many years ago. One of her uncles was a jester in the court of Queen Victoria. Many of the family have been bareback riders.

With all this eminent ancestry, Miss Costello is a native southerner. She was born in Henderson, N. C., of its families she takes pride in being a native. She and her brother David, who is regarded as the premier southerner of the profession, are well known and popular among their own people.

Miss Costello has just returned from a tour of South America and Europe, in many of which her brother David accompanied her. Her brothers appeared years before, also, and she is eager to welcome the circus to Atlanta on his way to Savannah, on the efforts of J. E. Conwell, president of the cotton association, the former chief executive of Illinois was induced to make an address in Atlanta on his way to Savannah, on the cooperative movement and what it means to producers and business generally.

Cooperative Leader.

Governor Lowden is a greater interest in cooperative marketing during the past 18 months than the former governor of Illinois who was through the efforts of J. E. Conwell, president of the cotton association, the former chief executive of Illinois was induced to make an address in Atlanta on his way to Savannah, on the cooperative movement and what it means to producers and business generally.

Although tendered these honors he refused them mainly for the reason that he has been actively engaged in plume wheat and cotton producers organized into cooperative marketing associations, it is said.

Under his leadership, as chairman of the national advisory committee for

Adolph S. Och Gives $1,000 To Stone Mountain Memorial

G. F. Willis, campaign director of the Stone Mountain Confederate memorial, Saturday announced a "Rounders' Roll" contribution of $1,000 to the memorial by Adolph S. Och, publisher of the New York Times and the Chattanooga Times, and the outstanding leaders in American journalism.

Mr. Och has ties both to the Union and the confederacy. His father was an officer in the Union army. His mother, reared in Mississippi, was naturally a strong confederate sympathizer. This being a monument to the heroes of the confederacy, Mr. Och therefore dedicated his contribution to the memory of his mother.

"Robert E. Lee was her idol," Mr. Och wrote in sending his contribution. "She was proud of her membership in the Chattanooga chapter of the United Daughters of the Confederacy and the emblem of the order was pinned to her shroud. So I take pleasure in herewith enclosing my check for $1,000 in memory of my mother, that her name may be inscribed in the monument to her beloved Robert E. Lee and the Confederacy."

Gift Due to General Shanks.

Mr. Willis stated that the contribution of Mr. Och was obtained through the efforts of General David C. Shanks, U. S. A., commanding the Fourth Corps Area, with headquarters in Atlanta.

Being a Virginian by birth and a strong admirer of General Stonewall Jackson, General Shanks is very much interested in the memorial and has rendered every assistance in his power to the cause. Recently on a trip to New York, he called on Mr. Och, discussed the memorial with him, and called his attention to the "Rounders' Roll."

A day or so later, General Shanks received from Mr. Och a letter, expressing his interest in the memorial and enclosing his check for $1,000 as a "Rounders' Roll" contribution in memory of his mother. Her name will be inscribed upon a bronze tablet on the wall inside of the great Memorial hall which is to be set up in the heart of the mountain.

Spent Youth in South.

Mr. Och spent his boyhood in Knoxville, Tenn., and in that city began his newspaper career as a carrier and later a printer's apprentice. From that he graduated to the newspaper composition room. In 1878, at the age of 20, he became publisher of the Chattanooga Times. His success with that newspaper, in the management of which his brother, Milton B. Och, was associated with him, was outstanding. In 1896, he became the principal owner and publisher of the New York Times.

Although his home since that time has been in New York, Mr. Och has never lost touch or sympathy with the south. He has retained the Chattanooga Times through the years and has taken a keen interest in all enterprises for the upbuilding of the south.

WOMAN'S DIVISION OF CHAMBER MEETS ON MONDAY NIGHT

The regular monthly meeting of the woman's division of the chamber of commerce will be held Monday in assembly hall No. 2, where dinner will be served.

Captain of the recent membership drive held a final meeting Friday night, when reports were made. Miss Eula Lang's team is still in the lead, and Miss Lois Manning has secured the largest number individually. Reports of the results of Saturday and Monday will be made before the meeting Monday night and prizes will be awarded to those bringing in the largest number of new members.

A quintette of musicians, under direction of Kimo Kalohi, Hawaiian guitarist, will give several numbers in costume. Miss Florence Willis will give several humorous readings.

City Builder Offers Prizes for Papers On Atlanta's Needs

The current issue of The City Builder offers a prize of $25 for the best paper of not more than 500 words setting forth the greatest need of Atlanta for 1925. The paper must be in the hands of the editor of The City Builder by November 20. A committee of citizens will select the best paper and award the prize. The best three papers will appear in the December issue of the magazine.

In speaking of this offer of a prize for the best paper submitted, the editor of the magazine says that "The City Builder believes that Atlanta should be interpreted by Atlantans and that ever and anon we should seek to know what are the goals of our common good. Just as the human body needs an occasional check-up to insure against some insidious malady that may be doing its deadly work, so a growing city should watch its blood pressure, its pulse beat, its temperature. More than that, we should take an inventory of our actual stock. We should know what are our failures as well as our successes."

Those who wish to submit manuscripts in this contest should address the editor of the magazine at 317 Palmer building.

LOWDEN TO SPEAK TO GEORGIA FARMERS

Frank O. Lowden, former governor of Illinois and one of the leading exponents of the cooperative movement for marketing farm products, will speak in Atlanta on November 17, at 11 o'clock, in the hall of the house of representatives at the state capitol.

The subject of his address will be "Cooperative Marketing for Farm Products." He is making this address in Atlanta by invitation of the Georgia Cotton Growers Cooperative association.

Governor Lowden is one of the most forceful and eloquent speakers in this country and because of his known activity and interest in cooperative marketing members of the Georgia Cotton Growers Cooperative association are expecting a tremendous crowd to hear him.

MUNYON REMEDY CO. INCREASES CAPITAL

By action at meetings of the board of directors and stockholders held recently, the Munyon Remedy company, whose principal offices and laboratories are in Scranton, Pa., have completed arrangements for greatly increasing the capital of the company. Since its formation in 1892 the capital stock issue has consisted of 825 shares of a par value of $100 each, making a total capital of $82,500.

The company will now issue 120,000 shares of common stock without nominal or par value, and which will be sold at a price that will make the total capital over $1,000,000.

The company is incorporated under the laws of Pennsylvania, and from the time of its original charter in 1892 until four years ago, its offices and laboratories were located in Philadelphia. In July, 1920 the business was moved to Scranton, and since that time the volume has increased to such an extent that about a year ago the concern was compelled to seek larger quarters, and purchased a large building containing about 25,000 square feet of floor space. This greatly increased facilities for the laboratories and offices.

marketing wheat, a number of the midwestern states already have formed cooperative associations.

He is a member of the Arkansas Cotton Growers Cooperative association and markets his crop annually, which consists of several hundred bales of cotton, through that association.

SCHOOLS TO EXHIBIT WORK AT FOOD SHOW

Displays by domestic science departments of the Atlanta high schools and an exhibit of a model kitchen will be features of the Atlanta Food Show which will open November 17 at the city auditorium for a six-day run.

Announcement of this was made Saturday by J. H. Merritt, chairman of the food show committee of the Atlanta Retail Merchants' association, under whose auspices the show will be staged.

Mr. Merritt also announced that a special meeting of the committee would be held Tuesday night at the Chamber of Commerce to iron out all kinks in plans for the show.

The model kitchen will be in charge of Mrs. Newton C. Wing, prominent Atlanta clubwoman and expert on homes. Mrs. Wing recently won national attention as chairman of the Atlanta Better Homes committee, whose exhibit in the National Better Homes show was awarded second prize.

Just what form the school exhibits will take has not yet been indicated, Mr. Merritt said. He added, however, that assurance that the schools will have displays has been made. "A number of other features equally as attractive as the school exhibits and the model kitchen display have been assured, but we are unable to announce them now," Mr. Merritt said.

Gas On Stomach Makes People Nervous

Mrs. Cook Nervous 12 Years Due to Gas

"For 12 years I suffered from gas on the stomach and was nervous and short of breath. Adierka has done me more good than anything." (Signed) Lena Cook.

Intestinal Evacuant.

There is now offered to the public a liquid preparation which is not only a wonderfully effective and QUICK intestinal evacuant, but which also seems to stimulate the glands of the intestinal tract and to cause expulsion of flatus (GAS). This preparation, known as Adierka, is a valuable agent for the purpose of cleansing the bowels of matter which has been in the system a long time and which either less effective means have been unable to dislodge. It is often astonishing the great amount of matter Adierka draws from the intestinal canal—even right after a natural movement it sometimes brings out unexpected quantities of additional matter. Many times it brings out such GAS, thus relieving pressure in the abdomen. Adierka is especially valuable when PROMPT action is necessary or to encourage the elimination of noxious poisons through the bowels.

In slight disorders such as occasional constipation or gas on the stomach and headache (when due to bowel inaction), a single spoonful of Adierka often produces surprising and gratifying results. In cases of obstinate constipation or stomach trouble, 30 drops of Adierka does not bring relief in 24 to 36 hours the advice of a reputable physician should be secured along without Adierka.

Reports From Physicians.

"I congratulate you on the good effect from Adierka since I prescribed it." (Signed) Dr. L. Langlois.

"I prescribed Adierka in my entire 25 years' experience." (Signed) Dr. G. Eggers.

"I prescribed Adierka with highly satisfactory results." (Signed) Dr. A. C. C. (Name given on request.)

"I can get along without Adierka." (Signed) Dr. W. H. Bernhart.

"J. E. Puckett (in case of Adierka) writes: 'After taking Adierka I feel better than for 20 years. Haven't language to express the medicine because of its REAL and QUICK action. Sold by leading druggists everywhere.'"

REAL PIONEER TELLS OF CITY'S FIRST DAYS

Memories of Early Atlanta

BY H. M. PARRISH.

Frequently one reads of some pioneer citizen of Atlanta who has resided here since the city was a town, a very small town—but such accounts usually are notices of the death of the old citizen. It is quite a different thing when one is able to see and talk to a man whose childhood hunting grounds are now sites of towering skyscrapers in the heart of a great metropolis, and whose little creek from which he snatched unwary minnows are now pulsing arteries of traffic and paved boulevards along which speed high-powered automobiles. But then different things sometimes happen—and such a man has been talked to.

J. S. Thrasher is the name of the man. He shall not be designated as a "pioneer," for that term has come to mean an old resident; rather shall he be called a "founder," for it was his father, John Thrasher, who built the first house in the city of Atlanta, and himself was an Atlanta when there was very little Atlanta. Mr. Thrasher will be 80 years old in January.

Confederate Hero

Mr. Thrasher is a Baptist minister, and a hero and ex-captain of the Confederate army, whose countenance radiates sympathy and understanding. These were the impressions he made on a young reporter, and he so impresses youth, which somehow is so fair in its judgment not so keen in its appreciation of the sagacity and blessedness of age, then he must, in truth, be a grand old man.

Mr. Thrasher was born in 1845, on his father's farm, near the heart of what is now Atlanta, on a road now known as Marietta street. He attended Orr's school, a "pay-school," as he termed it, in the neighborhood of what is now Spring street, where he scratched his state and sat at a rough desk hewn from a tree with rough implements, no concrete boulevard, and automobiles carried pupils to the one-room school. They trudged through veritable forests and learned their "readin', 'ritin' and 'rithmetic" while scratches frisked about just outside the door.

Civil war broke out when he was 16, and he shouldered a musket and went off into the thick of the fray as a private in company K, Davis' infantry. At Charlottesville, Virginia, the young soldier was stricken with pneumonia and was given up by army physicians to die. His father was notified, and with two negro slaves, went to Charlottesville and brought his son back to his fireside. Under the tender care of home, the boy fought off the disease and recovered. He had been honorably discharged from the Confederate army with no hope for his life was held, but he had the cause of the south at heart and immediately began preparations to get back into active service.

Organized Company. Thrasher was instrumental in organizing company A, 64th Georgia regiment, and with this outfit went to Florida. He was a lieutenant in this company. In Florida, during the battle of Ocean Pond, Thrasher was wounded in the left leg. His wound healed, but left its impress on the boy who today, an old man, is more than 60 years of age that battle, walks with a slight limp.

From Florida the young lieutenant was transferred to Petersburg, Va. It was while stationed there that the city was blown up.

Following this tragedy, Thrasher was promoted to captaincy. After the war Thrasher came back to his home in Atlanta and farmed his father. Shortly thereafter he married Miss Lillie Wilkes, daughter of Dr. Wilkes, a prominent physician and der of Brenau college.

About this time Atlanta was beginning to "stretch its wings," and houses and stores were being built in increasing numbers. Mr. Thrasher's father had considerable property in West Georgia, his holdings extending along in now Marietta street. He had with George Adair, concerning the real estate and, according to him, it was during these negotiations that the name of Atlanta, as New York of the South, was given.

The building activity and influx of people was making evident and it was these things which prompted the prediction, Mr. Thrasher said.

Mr. Thrasher is now living with his daughter, Mrs. Mary Ellison, of 18 West Baker street. He is the father of seven children, three sons and four daughters. The aged man, with his combed mustache and silver hair, are the only living members of his family.

Mr. Thrasher's father, who died at the age of 84, built the first building in Atlanta on what is now Ashby street. During the civil war the "Yankees" destroyed all but the brick walls of the building. These walls, after the war, were built into another house, which, according to the son, is now standing. The house was sold to the Connally family and is now occupied by Dr. E. L. Connally. The Ashby street number is 58.

Sin to Bob Hair. Mr. Thrasher's views on present-day questions are somewhat critical, but he believes every word in the Bible and always will, he said, although it may conflict with certain modern ideas. Along these lines he is convinced that it is a sin for a woman to bob her hair or to don man's apparel.

Woman was made for the glory of man, and man for the glory of God," Mr. Thrasher declared, lapsing into his ministerial mood. "And woman cannot be a glory to man when she is deliberately cutting her hair and wearing man's pants in defiance to the teachings of God's word."

"People may say I am just as fussy as old Baptist preacher, but those sentiments and beliefs are the teachings of the Bible, and I will not vary from them as long as I have life."

Fashions were not altogether approved of by the retired minister. "Fashions are conceived in hell, born in Paris, fathered by the devil and followed by the foolish people of the world," he said.

"Well," interrupted the reporter, "never mind," Mr. Thrasher broke in, "it's what I believe, and that's what I stick to."

This reporter does not write the heads for pictures, but if he did, under this one would be the title, "A Grand Old Man."

HENRY GRADY HOTEL

OPENS NOVEMBER 25

A tribute to Henry Grady, statesman, journalist and builder, will feature the formal opening of the Henry Grady hotel on Tuesday, November 25. The event will assemble a gathering of the leading civic, social and business interests of the city.

The Atlanta chapter, U. D. C., will sponsor the event. The program will embrace a reception, banquet and ball. In the receiving line will be members of Mr. Grady's family, officials of the Daughters of the Confederacy, and many dignitaries of the city and state. Governors who have occupied the old mansion house, on whose site the palatial hotel now stands, together with the present governor, will be guests of honor.

Dinner will be served in the group of rooms on the mezzanine. There will be no elaborate list of speakers on accounts of the entertainment program, but a short tribute will be paid Grady by a leading citizen of the city who will dedicate the hotel to the ideals of service for city and section which dominated his famous name.

A touch of the old south will be introduced immediately following the grand march, when a group of beautiful young dancers will take the floor in a minut in costume. Then will follow a square dance, after which modern dances and the younger social set will hold sway.

The new building will be turned over to its owners on November 10, by Gude and company, contractors. Many of the upper floors of the building have been turned over to owners already and carpets have been laid and furniture installed. Kitchen equipment has been ordered and the past week, and within the next few days the big boilers in the sub-basement will be fired up and all the completed machinery and refrigerating will be put in motion.

Because of the advanced stage of the finishing work, the hotel will be able to open its doors informally within a few weeks to receive its first guests members of the North Georgia Methodist conference. Many of the special features of the hotel, particularly the spectacular mezzanine floor, will not be available until later.

The placing of the opening date two days before Thanksgiving will permit the management to care for many of the thousands who are expected to pour into the city on Wednesday in preparation for the annual Tech-Ag football classic which comes on Thanksgiving.

Each evening after the grand opening to the end of the week will witness special entertainment events, ending with the inauguration of the Henry Grady's Sunday evening dinners de luxe.

Buffalo steak sizzled merrily and appetizingly over a coal fire of the Lewis and Clark, famed explorers, on their pathfinding trip from the Missouri river to the Pacific coast in 1804-5.

Today, 124 years later, buffalo meat again "tops" a menu card—this time on the Northern Pacific dining cars, which railroad follows the Lewis and Clark trail to the north Pacific coast. The prime meat is served as either steaks or roasts, according to the announcement by A. W. Thomson, superintendent of dining car service, and trans-continental travelers are finding it a happy addition to the menu suggestions.

The meat comes from the Montana national bison range established near Ravalli, Mont., in 1909 for the preservation of the buffalo or bison. Thirty-seven head were used in the range October 17, 1909. The herd now numbers 500. Each year, it is explained, it is necessary to dispose of a number of the animals in order to keep the herd within the food capacity of the preserve.

The national movement for the preservation of buffalo, according to the Atlanta States biological survey, began in June, 1904, with the enlistment of support for the project by Ernest Harold Baynes, President Roosevelt took interest in the project. The American Bison society was formed and in January, 1908, recommended that a site be purchased situated along the Northern Pacific railway, at Ravalli, on the Flathead Indian reservation north of the Jocko and east of the Flathead rivers, consisting of a minimum of 20 square miles.

"Martyr to Art"

Keeps Cell Tidy And Wins Praise

New York, November 1.—Earl Carroll, whose address has fluctuated up and down Broadway since he emerged into prominence as the boy producer of "girl shows," isn't at all disconcerted at getting his mail in cell 118, the Tombs, and to prove it today he tidied up his barred enclosure so neatly that Warden Hanley rationed him a special bit of toast and coffee.

While the warden looked on Carroll posted a couple of coppers down from the ceiling, patted the bedding of his cot into shape and polished the massive gridded door that separates him from the runway.

For 300 paltry dollars Carroll could be free. That bail was fixed for him "he awaits trial for attracting Broadway crowds away from stilled automobiles and windows full of gimcracks to the lobby of the Music Box theater where hung pictures of young women, nude and unadorned."

Carroll insists that his pictures are art. The municipal authorities who seized the offending sketches along with the producer's person believe them to be merely vulgar.

Monday morning the young producer of "Vanities" will have a long hearing. Meantime he says he will remain in jail for the sake of art, not forgetting that publicity has never hurt anybody and "Vanities" is getting plenty of it since Carroll entered his cell.

URBAN LEAGUE

WEEKLY BULLETIN

The Atlanta Urban League has been requested to extend the Opportunity school to South Atlanta. Dr. J. W. E. Bowen, vice president of Gammon college, has been asked to extend the board of directors of the Atlanta Urban League, a few days ago and made an earnest request of the board to extend the privileges and other phases of the Urban League's activities to the citizens of South Atlanta. Dr. Bowen brought out in his appeal the fact that South Atlanta is a section of the city which is getting plenty of social welfare activities are carried on by the colored people. A committee consisting of Dr. George D. Delle, Dr. Ernest Hall, Field Secretary Jesse O. Thomas, were appointed to make investigations and report to the board at the next meeting the exact status of the situation and in their judgment what the board ought to attempt to do.

At a meeting of citizens of South Atlanta, representing the various churches and business organizations, held Tuesday afternoon at 3 o'clock at the South Atlanta library, it was voted to organize an advisory committee to take over the management of the proposed extension work of the Opportunity school, cooperating with the board of directors of the Atlanta Urban League.

Exhibits from the different classes in the Opportunity school will be displayed in the room, formerly occupied by the Atlanta State Savings bank in the Old Fellows building, November 1-10. Citizens of Atlanta are requested to inspect these exhibits, so that they may have a clearer knowledge of what the Opportunity school is doing.

A committee composed of Drs. E. P. Johnson, J. W. Jackson, J. T. Dancy, W. E. Strickland and Deacons Thomas Gossy, representing the board of directors of the Atlanta Baptist Preparatory institute, took up the final note of $1,426.84 on the property occupied by this institution. This leaves the property free from debts, so far as the ground constituting the campus is concerned. It is expected that the school will be able to move effective work because of being freed from this obligation.

Flag-raising at the Ashby Street Public school Thursday, October 30, was a unique and impressive exercise. The order of program as rendered follows:

Song—"America," sung by the sixth grade pupils.

Invocation—Rev. A. F. Bailey.

Introductory remarks were made by Principal Hattie L. Green.

Remarks were made by Field Secretary Jesse O. Thomas.

Brief remarks were made by Mrs. J. E. Mellichamp and Mrs. J. E. Andrews.

Presentation of flag to the school by Mrs. Mellichamp, representing W. H. Johnson.

Response on behalf of the school was made by Moses Ballou of the sixth grade. This was followed by a well-executed military drill by the sixth grade boys. The program was concluded by singing the Star Spangled Banner by the entire student body.

This flag and flag pole was presented to the Ashby Street school by Henry E. Ford, in recognition of the cooperation of the Urban League and the Junior Order of the United States American Mechanics.

On Friday morning there was a flag-raising at the Yonge Street Public school. The program for the Yonge Street school follows:

"History of the Flag," by Herbert Speale Roland.

Address was made by Mrs. J. C. Mellichamp.

Address was made by Mrs. J. E. Andrews.

Presentation of the flag by Mrs. J. C. Mellichamp.

Response was accepted on behalf of the school by Letta Calloway.

"America's Creed" was recited by the school.

"America's Beauty Flag" and "Star Spangled Banner." Introductory remarks and instruction of speakers were made by Principal C. E. Eley. Prayer and benediction was offered by Dr. Ernest Hall.

Announcements have just reached the office of the local league of the Urban League that the national Urban League will be held in Cleveland, Ohio, from Tuesday, December 2, through Friday, December 5.

The following subjects will be discussed by leading white and colored students of the problems of race relations and city life: "Problems of Administration," "Cooperation Between Social Agencies," "Industrial Problems," "A Standard Local Industrial Program," "A National Industrial Program," "Inter-Racial Cooperation," "Publicity Methods."

We are anxious to have the members of the board of directors of the local league throughout the nation to attend this meeting. Also social workers and representatives of other social work agencies.

Y. W. C. A. Notes.

Dr. Smart of Emory university, will conduct the Bible class from 7 to 8 o'clock every Friday evening. The class in lamp-shade making will be conducted every Monday at 6 o'clock. A class in shirt sewing has also been organized. The public is cordially invited to attend all of these classes.

SON OF JAP EMPEROR PLANS EUROPEAN TOUR

Tokio, November 1.—(By the Associated Press.)—Prince Chichibu, second son of the emperor, plans to make an extended tour of Europe and remain there for three or four years studying military affairs, according to a report here today. The prince is expected to leave Japan in 1925, but the date of his departure has not been fixed officially.

his company. Mr. Minter states that the Minter Homes company, by its method of financing home owners, practically every deserving man can own his own home, because of the cash payment in which does not take a lot of money to build a home. If any one owns a lot the Minter Homes company will build and finance a home on a long-time payment plan, which is similar to paying rent.

The company has a large yard at Krog and Lake streets with Glenn Marchbanks, as general manager, and Keller F. Melton, as sales manager.

Stolen as Owner Is Eating Dinner

While she was dining with members of her family in an adjoining room burglars entered the bedroom window of the apartment of Miss Sarah Taylor, at 405 North Boulevard early Saturday night and carried off her purse and $109 in cash, according to the story she told detectives.

Miss Taylor left the purse containing the money lying on the bed before entering the dining room, she told detectives, and when she returned it was gone. The window had been raised.

Girls

It's Easy

ONLY 4 NEW <sup>{ Daily and Sunday }</sup> SUBSCRIPTIONS NEEDED

THE ATLANTA CONSTITUTION makes it possible for thousands of boys and girls in Georgia and especially the city of Atlanta and suburbs to possess The "Constitution Express."

This smooth-running, balloon-tired COASTER WAGON wins its way into the heart of every child that sees it. It's the dandiest COASTER WAGON ever given away by any newspaper. It has a large-sized hardwood body (16x36 inches) finished with glistening varnish and brilliant paint. Heavy steel bolsters front and rear are extra braced. Silent running roller bearings and extra heavy single disc wheels make this the fastest and handsomest COASTER WAGON that you have ever seen. Tires are solid rubber and are of the full one-inch balloon type.

Strong---Swift---Silent

You cannot surpass this handsome "CONSTITUTION EXPRESS" wagon for strength and durability. No old-fashioned wood bolsters to split and crack—The "CONSTITUTION EXPRESS" has bolsters of heavy steel. Wheels have roller bearings, just like the big automobiles, and the full one-inch balloon-type tires make the coaster whiz by almost without a sound.

Read These Instructions:

FOUR DAILY AND SUNDAY NEW SIX-MONTHS' SUBSCRIPTIONS.

That's all! Just four new Daily and Sunday six-months' subscriptions are required to earn one of these beautifully finished "CONSTITUTION EXPRESS" wagons. You are not to collect any money.

IT'S EASY WORK!

It will take you only a short time to get four new subscribers to The Constitution, because every one knows that The Atlanta Constitution is Atlanta's outstanding newspaper. Besides helping you earn your "CONSTITUTION EXPRESS," the people who sign the agreement or contract for you are receiving the news of the world, interesting reading articles and features for every member of the family for six months.

Start right out now! It's more like fun than work. Get a contract book, secure from good, reliable, financially responsible subscribers, "signature of each," bring or send it to The Constitution office. After the subscriptions are verified and found "O. K.," the wagon is yours.

Read These Instructions Carefully:

Out-of-town workers must turn their coupon book of subscriptions, after it has been filled out with the required number of subscriptions, each signed by the subscriber himself, over to the local Constitution dealer for his acceptance of the new subscriptions.

Newsdealer will indicate his acceptance by writing on the back of the subscription agreement "O. K., accepted by me," and sign his name. Then the book with required number of accepted subscriptions to be sent to The Constitution.

COASTER WAGONS will be shipped by express (collect) to out-of-town workers. Those who live in Atlanta and suburban towns will get the wagons at The Constitution office.

EDITORIALS SLUR IN GEORGIA

Hal M. Stanley, commissioner of commerce and labor for Georgia, announced Saturday that he had received a letter from W. F. Bigelow, editor of Good Housekeeping, which promises that figures published in that magazine in regard to child labor conditions in Georgia, which have been shown to be grossly exaggerated, will be retracted promptly.

Mr. Bigelow, in his letter, states that the report that "80,000 child workers between the ages of ten and 15, most of whom are employed in cotton mills," which he used in an editorial in regard to child labor in Georgia, were taken bodily from a New York morning newspaper.

"I was very much distressed," he writes, "when I learned that they could not be verified; that, as a matter of fact, they were grossly exaggerated over the figures that even the most rabid anti-child labor workers would ever put out. Needless to say, therefore, the figures as published will be retracted."

Commissioner Stanley also stated that complete investigation and comparison of statistics on child labor conditions in Georgia, as compared to other states, had been made and he was able to officially refute the statement made by Esther Lee Rider, child labor inspector for Alabama, that many Alabama children daily "crossed the Chattahoochee" to labor for long hours in Georgia. The children referred to, he said, were about 75 who came from Alabama to Columbus, Ga., every day to attend Columbus schools.

Latest available statistics, said Mr. Stanley, show that 96 per cent of all children in Alabama under 14 years of age are engaged in gainful occupations, while in Georgia the percentage is only 7.6.

"If the good lady shed tears over the conditions in Georgia," said Mr. Stanley, "they should have been much more copious with reference to conditions in her own state. Take the figure ten to 15 years of age, as another example, and it is shown that 24.8 per cent of the children living in Georgia are engaged in gainful occupations, while in Alabama 21.1 per cent are so employed. The lady inspector in Alabama had better first clean up in her own state before pointing the finger of scorn at Georgia."

'SANE INVESTMENT' WEEK IS PROCLAIMED

Governor Clifford Walker Saturday issued a proclamation setting aside the week of November 16-22 as "Before You Invest—Investigate" week. In his proclamation he calls upon banks, merchants, newspapers and business organizations of every kind to cooperate in the campaign being waged by the Georgia Securities Commission to educate the people of the state to exercise proper care in making investments in order to reduce losses in this state from fraudulent securities and speculation in land and other offers.

The securities commission, it was stated Saturday, had this plan for this special week under consideration for some time past in order to most effectively meet the activities of unlicensed and unscrupulous dealers in lands and promoters of fraudulent security offers who are coming into the state in large numbers.

Under the state laws all dealers in lands lying outside the state are required to apply for a license before they can offer their properties, or securities based thereon, for sale in Georgia. While some of these dealers in lands lying outside Georgia have applied for a license to sell, they did not do so until after they had opened offices in the state, and the commission, it was stated, has also been informed of various dealers now operating without licenses. These unauthorized dealers will stand in little chance of securing a license now, according to T. B. Connor, chief examiner for the commission, inasmuch as they have had ample opportunity to inform themselves of the legal requirements.

Prisoners' Help Favored by Board Of Soldiers' Home

General R. DeT. Lawrence, chairman of the board of trustees of the Confederate Soldiers' home, has called upon members of the state prison commission and informed them that trustees of the home do not want state convicts now acting as servants at the home withdrawn, it was made known Saturday.

General Lawrence called on the prison commission in person, it was said, and stated he was expressing the sentiment of a majority of the membership of the board.

It also was stated that the prison commission has been supplied with copies of a resolution adopted at the last meeting of the board of trustees, in which the board goes on record as favoring retention of the services of prisoners assigned to the home.

Copies of the resolution were not made public.

General Lawrence declared that one of these prisoners saves the home about $500 in expenses every month, and that prisoners render better service than would be obtained from the class of help the home would be forced to employ on its present state appropriation.

Veterans at the home generally are pleased with conditions there, General Lawrence said, advancing in support of this statement the fact that while 28 of the inmates have died within the past year, the number of residents there is greater now than on January 1, 1924. He also said that while several veterans have asked for furloughs or discharges in every instance they returned to the home within two weeks after leaving.

Error in Church Notice.

Officials of St. Philip's cathedral, who erroneously announced that American Legionnaires would be guests of the church Friday, have asked The Constitution to state that the date should have been Saturday, November 9. Members of the Legion are expected to attend the morning session at 11 o'clock on that date. Rev. Thomas H. Johnston, dean, will preach.

Atlanta Society Leaders Lend Support to "Pandora"

Miss Virginia Futrelle, popular Atlanta star, will play the leading role in the coming presentation of the dramatic opera, "Pandora," at the Auditorium, December 1-6, it was announced Saturday. She is the daughter of the late Jacques Futrelle, novelist, who went down with the Titanic. Probably never before in Atlanta has a dramatic society enlisted greater cooperation or commanded more general interest in its particular enterprise than the Coeur de Lion Commandery No. 4, Knights Templar, assisted by Atlanta Federation of Women's clubs and Atlanta chapters of the Order of Eastern Star, have secured for this interesting presentation.

Commercial Art Exhibit Plans Nearing Completion

The commercial art exhibit, the first ever held in the United States, which opens on November 29 at the Ansley hotel, is expected to be one of the greatest successes in the history of such efforts, according to prominent Atlantans in charge of arrangements. Exhibits of every nature are arriving daily and the world's most famous artists will be represented in the collection to be seen here.

Leading advertising agencies, foremost painters and outstanding business houses will join in making the first representative exhibit in this country, the success of which has attended similar exhibits in other nations. The Atlanta Ad club is sponsoring the local undertaking.

Equally interesting will be the Maxfield Parrish paintings, executed especially for the General Electric company.

Work of Great Artists.

George Ripley, Jr., who has been appointed by the Ad club to receive all exhibits, made public a partial list of artists who will be represented at the Atlanta exhibit. It includes Norman Rockwell, Lowell, the Friedrichs, Ralph Denninger, Edward Davenport, C. W. Swenson, Ethel G. Hoyle, C. A. Federer, the Reeses, Harry H. Hines Dunn, George Hollbrook, M. M. McComb, Thomas Patterson, Clarence Underwood, Henry Olive, Maud Tansley Fanzel, Lynn Bell and Joseph E. Chenoweth and others.

Lithographers who have sent in extensive displays include the following: Chicago, Potomac, Rusling

Macon Editor Outlines Value of Reforestation

Proper reforestation in Georgia, intelligently directed, will bring millions of dollars to the state in additional wealth and will in 20 years restore the state to a leading position in lumber production, says V. T. Anderson, editor of The Macon Telegraph, in an interview published in "The Week," official publication of the Utilities Information committee of Atlanta.

He believes that opportunity is hammering at Georgia's doors with sledgehammer force. Going beyond a general discussion of Georgia's chances of maintaining a position in the forefront of states, he talked specifically of one big thing which can be done in the future which will bring millions of dollars in wealth and will restore a mighty industry which will do its part in the reforestation of this section of the south industrially. This one thing is to provide at once means whereby reforestation can be carried on intelligently along a fixed program which in 20 years will put Georgia back among the leading timber producing states of the union.

Georgians "Sleeping."

"Want an opportunity our people are sleeping on," Mr. Anderson says. "The possibility of growing timber on idle lands in Georgia is unlimited in its scope. Two billion dollars can be added to the wealth of this state in 20 years and 20,000,000 acres of unused wild land can be made to produce money for our people, whereas at present it is doing nothing but a liability. The project is staggering to the mind but with intelligent effort, with the necessary machinery provided by the state legislature there is nothing to prevent the addition of this enormous amount of money to the aggregate financial resources of our people."

Mr. Anderson pointed out that this is but one of the things that can be done to restore Georgia to a dominant place in the sisterhood of states. He said he would content himself with discussing this one question with a view toward placing it before the thinking people of the state for their consideration.

"For years and years nature has been trying to replace the trees that ruthless white of the buzz saws have destroyed. We have not been assisting nature but on the contrary have been opposing her. We have grossly neglected the protection of our vast timber resources. We have even gone so far as to set fire to the woods, destroying all chances for the trees to reproduce themselves. We have even cut to the limit every tree and every sprig which had a chance for further seeding. We have not protected in any degree one of the state's greatest potential assets although we have established departments to protect the game, the fish and other industries of far lesser importance than the timber industry."

Legislation Involved.

Mr. Anderson said the legislature should take up seriously the question of reforestation as soon as possible. He said there are 37,000,000 acres of land in Georgia, of which 10,000,000 acres are in cultivation. He declared that of the 27,000,000 remaining at least 20,000,000 acres consist of idle lands which are valued at less than $1 an acre, which are producing no crops and are affording no pasturage but which are lying stump-covered and devastated as a blight on the entire state.

"Think of being able to restore this land in 20 years to a point where it will bring a minimum of $100 an acre in lumber. Twenty years is not a long time. In 20 years Georgia could become again the leading lumber producing section of the country. The numerous towns and cities built up on the lumber

Mrs. John Marshall Slaton, chairman of the patron committee, will be assisted by several hundred prominent Atlantans. Seminars and dancing and dramatic art schools are represented in the cast under the charge of a committee of ladies of which Mrs. R. K. Rambo is chairman, and Mrs. Samuel Lumpkin, vice chairman.

In "Pandora" there is not only presented exquisite and spectacular scenery and dramatic art schools are represented in the cast under the charge of a committee of ladies of which Mrs. R. K. Rambo is chairman, and Mrs. Samuel Lumpkin, vice chairman.

Proceeds will be used for the benefit of the Masonic Orphans home, the Tallulah Falls mountain school and the commandery. Mrs. W. M. Kapp and Mrs. Julia J. Turner, representing the Eastern Star chapters, and Mrs. Thomas Terry Stevens, Mrs. Siewer, Arkist and Mrs. John K. Otley representing the Atlanta Federated Women's clubs, have enlisted the hearty cooperation of the leading citizens of Atlanta.

A new train of the Southern Pacific lines, the "Sunset Limited," offering service between New Orleans, Los Angeles and San Francisco, which is declared to be on a par with service in the east and across the country, began operation Saturday. The train is said to contain every improvement that is offered on the best trains in any other part of the country, and to have one feature—an oil-burning locomotive—which is not found on the cross-country limited.

This new train will make the trip from New Orleans to Los Angeles in 37 hours, spending only two nights on the roads, and from New Orleans to Los Angeles in 71 hours, spending three nights, it is said by officials of the Southern Pacific company.

The train is a "de luxe" means of transportation in every sense of the word, being equipped with parlor car, observation platform, dining cars which boast unexcelled service, miniature barber shop, and facilities for clothes pressing. There are also tub and shower baths for men and women. Charges for all services are very reasonable, it is revealed in the "Sunset Limited" handbook which explains the various features of the train.

Stop-over privileges will be allowed passengers on the "Sunset Limited" to allow trips to points of interest along the route.

New Campaign Against Speeding's Launched

TIME IN STOCKADE OR STOP DRIVING, ULTIMATUM GIVEN

Fine and Suspended Sentence To Be Assessed on First Conviction Before Judge Holloway.

MORE SEVERE TERMS ON SECOND OFFENSE

Recorder Pro Tem. Will Enforce Plan Rigorously in Effort To Curb Speeding in City.

A new campaign against speeding and reckless driving of automobiles in Atlanta—one which will rid the city of what is termed its "greatest menace to life and happiness"—has been launched by Murphy Holloway, new recorder pro tem.

Under the plan inaugurated by Judge Holloway, reckless drivers will be presented with the choice of either ceasing to drive autos or do time in the city stockade.

"I am determined to stop this speeding and recklessness," the recorder pro tem. said Saturday, "and I have at last worked out a plan by which the menace may be relieved altogether."

Plan in Practice.

Friday Judge Holloway put his plan into practice. A young man—the son and sole support of a widow—was brought before him, charged with reckless driving. The case was an "aggravated" one. The young man was ordered to pay a fine of $50 and to serve a stockade sentence of 30 days. The stockade sentence was suspended on condition that he would not operate an automobile within the city limits for a period of six months. The terms of probation were readily accepted by the young man.

For six months the 30-day sentence will hang over him. If he is caught operating an automobile in Atlanta he will be arrested and forced to serve the full extent of the sentence.

This is the method by which Judge Holloway believes he can put an end to reckless speeding in the city. Aggravated cases are brought before the recorder every day. In most instances, Judge Holloway declares, the cases are examples of "wanton, miserable recklessness."

Against Licensing Reckless.

"Men who get behind the wheel of an automobile and drive like they don't care whose child they maim or kill should not be licensed to drive," Judge Holloway declared. "But a city magistrate has no power whatever to revoke a license issued by the state."

"We do have the power, however, to place prisoners on probation and to place whatever terms we deem fair and reasonable. My plan is to deal with other cases as I have in this young man's."

"When cases of speeding are brought before me, I will consider them solely on their elements of aggravation. If it is a plain case of recklessness or intoxication, I will assess a fine and, in addition, a stockade sentence. The stockade sentence will be suspended provided it is agreeable with the prisoner, on his promise that he will not operate an automobile under any circumstances within the city limits of Atlanta for a specified period of time. One variance from his terms of agreement will result in his arrest and service of the sentence."

Punishment Is Severe.

"To the casual observer, taking the right to drive an automobile away from a man may seem mild punishment. But when it is considered that the man has become accustomed to having a car at his command, to serve him whenever he desires, and is suddenly deprived of this convenience, the view changes."

Judge Holloway declared that he believes this plan will end speeding and reckless driving in Atlanta. It will be put into effect and automobile drivers are put on warning.

The names of the men under these terms of probation will be furnished every member of the police department, who will be instructed to be on the alert for the driver who seeks to break his agreement.

Columbus, Ohio, November 1.—Lieutenants Ralph G. Carr and Sam A. Weisall, reserve officers, were killed at Norton field here today when their plane crashed from a height of 200 feet. Both lived here.

ODOR OF BREATH AND FLOWERS TOO DIFFERENT; JAIL

New York, November 1.—On each of the many occasions on which Frank McIntosh, 53, has been arrested for drunkenness, he has had a bouquet of flowers in his hand and was on his way to attempt the conquest of a feminine heart.

A policeman remembered this when he saw Frank approaching, flowers in hand. The policeman smelled Frank's flowers and then Frank's breath. There was quite a difference.

Judge Gorfinkel found Frank guilty of intoxication and will pronounce sentence later, when the scent of both flowers and bootleg have passed from him.

G. O. P. WARFARE IN SOUTH MISSES ONLY TWO STATES

Louisiana and South Carolina Only Ones Untouched by "Some Kind" of Republican Fight.

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.

Washington, November 1.—In all southern states except South Carolina and Louisiana, assaults in one form or another will be directed at the so-called solid democratic south, in the election Tuesday.

Contests for the United States senate are being waged in five states, in eight there are one or more contested districts for the house of representatives and republican tickets have been filed for state offices in four states. Several states elect few state officers at this time.

In South Carolina the democratic ticket for United States senator, seven members of the house and the full state ticket will be elected without opposition. There is no state election in Louisiana and the congressional ticket of the democrats is unopposed.

Although no republican candidates are existent for state offices in Georgia, an independent, H. B. Baylor, is announced as a candidate for governor.

Tennessee Has Two Tickets.

Only in Tennessee are claims made for other than the Davis-Bryan electors, a campaign having been vigorously conducted for both democratic and republican national tickets in the Volunteer state.

Tennessee is also in the midst of an emphatic contest for governor, senate and house. L. D. Tyson, democratic nominee for the United States senate, is opposed by H. B. Lindsay, republican. The race for governor is between Austin Peay, democratic incumbent, and T. F. Peck, republican. The other state office to be filled is that of railroad commissioner. In the race for congress there are contests in five of the ten districts. Opposition is found to republican incumbents in the first and second, while democratic representatives are facing contests in the third, fifth and tenth districts.

North Carolina will have a race, in that the democratic nominee for governor, Angus W. McLean, is opposed by a republican opponent, Isaac M. Meekins. Senator F. M. Simmons' seat is contested by A. A. Whitener, republican, and all congressional districts have two candidates entered.

Florida finds full democratic and republican state tickets, John W. Martin being the democratic nominee against W. R. O'Neal, republican. Contests appear in three of the four congressional districts.

Glass Has Two Opponents.

Senator Carter Glass has two opponents for reelection in Virginia. W. N. Donk, republican, and Carroll Livingstone Riker, independent. Opposition is found to congressional

VOTERS' INTERESTS CENTERS TUESDAY IN NATIONAL FIGHT

Eight Proposed Amendments to Constitution and Several Local Contests Hold Second Place

PARTY LEADERS URGE CITIZENS TO BALLOT

Five Presidential Candidates in Field With Davis Conceded Winner by Usual Majority.

When Georgians go to the polls in the national election of Tuesday, their interest will be centered chiefly in the presidential candidates. In fact, in so far as the state-wide election is concerned, the only contests to be decided are those between the five candidates for the state's support for the presidency, the contest for the governorship, and the fate of eight constitutional amendments, passed by the last general assembly and now to be ratified or rejected by the people themselves.

Candidates for the presidency who have qualified in Georgia and whose names will be found on the official ballot, are John W. Davis, democrat; Calvin Coolidge, republican; Robert M. La Follette, progressive; Gilbert O. Nations, American, and Herman P. Paris, prohibitionist.

"Vice-presidential candidates running in double harness with would-be presidents, are Charles W. Bryan, democrat; Charles G. Davis, republican; Burton K. Wheeler, progressive; Lee Anderson, American, and Marie C. Brehm, prohibitionist.

Governor Opposed.

Governor Clifford Walker, seeking reelection, is the only candidate for the state's highest office on the regular democratic ticket, though H. Redinger Baylor, of Atlanta, is running as an independent democrat, not having entered the party primaries held in September. Mr. Baylor is listed on the official ballot as "Independent party."

In 68 Georgia counties the Australian ballot system has been adopted, following recommendation, as required by the law, by two successive grand juries.

In these counties the official ballot furnished by the state will be used, while in the remaining 92, which still operate under old election laws, ballots will be furnished by respective local authorities.

In each of these counties, however, sample copies of the official ballot have been furnished and it is probable that the same form will be followed in practically all.

Ballots Explained.

The question was raised Saturday as to how a voter who desired to split the ticket could mark his ballot so as not to lose his vote. In the office of the attorney general it was pointed out that the simple rule to follow would be to scratch out the names of all candidates on the ballot for whom the voter did not desire to vote. Thus, if a man wished to vote the democratic ticket for state and local candidates, and the republican ticket for the presidential and vice-presidential races, he would scratch out the names of the democratic candidates and electors in the national election, leave the democratic candidates for state and local offices, and leave the republican presidential candidates and electors after scratching all other party tickets in the presidential race.

Similarly, if a voter desires to support the democratic ticket in every department, he would not scratch out any names.

Mr. Garrett and I are good friends," he said. "If I should happen to get more votes than I would like to accept the office."

He later telephoned the same message to Garrett.

Many women of Macon are taking a leading part for and against the nominee. The vote Tuesday will be the heaviest ever cast in this county in a national election.

The Jones faction is expected to take out a writ of mandamus Monday to compel the managers to count votes cast for him.

Ordinary C. M. Wiley insists that because Jones did not enter the race until days before the election, he is disqualified.

"Tell me," Wiley said, "what entries must be filed 15 days before the election, and he has instructed all election managers not to count any votes that may be cast for Jones."

State Affairs Postponed As War Dog Sees Coolidge

Washington, November 1.—"Stubby," BATTLE-SCARRED VET, WELCOME VISITOR :: his eye caught three service stripes and a wound stripe. Corporal J. Robert Conroy, of New Britain, Conn., the vet's chief buddy, explained that "Stubby" was wounded by shrapnel at Seicheprey and left for dead on the battlefield. Later he was gassed, but that did not prevent him from participating in the four big American offensives, Alsace-Marne, Champagne-Marne, St. Mihiel and Meuse-Argonne.

"Stubby's" origin, like those of the war in which he served, are a matter of some dispute. But he looks like a Boston bull terrier of about nine summers.

At any rate, he turned up as a stray cur at the Yale bowl in September, 1917, and then went to war. Since then he has divided his time between parades, conventions, calls on the great, blinking at news photographers and feature writers and co-starring with Mary Pickford in the movies.

As a life member of the "Y" he carries a card "good for three bones a day and a place to sleep."

Washington, November 1.—The president rose with a smile of welcome as the illustrious canine, escorted by secret service men, came into the executive office. "Stubby" refused to be embarrassed, for meeting the great old stuff with him in his blanket is a special gold medal, bestowed by General Pershing, commander of the A. E. F. When the president stooped down to examine the medal-covered blanket,

EFFORT TO UPSET GEORGIA PRIMARY IS LAID TO KLAN

Solicitor Charles Garrett, Nominee in Bibb Circuit, Charges Attempt To Name Independent.

Macon, Ga., November 1.—(Special.) Charges that the Ku Klux Klan in Georgia is attempting to overrule the white primary and elect independent friendly to that organization were made here tonight by Solicitor General Charles H. Garrett, of the Bibb circuit.

The charges were based on messages from friends in Atlanta that Klan officers there had passed out word to members to strike his name from the ballot in the election Thursday and substitute the name of Edward E. Goddard, of this city. Solicitor Garrett is the nominee in the recent primary.

Garrett's name, along with that of others nominated in the primary in the districts in which they will serve, will be voted on by the whole state. It was pointed out that hundreds of Georgians do not vote in the election, since it has been considered a matter of form for many years, and that the Klan might be able to defeat primary nominees distasteful to them if a majority of Klansmen voted.

Garrett in Disfavor.

Solicitor Garrett served in an advisory capacity in the prosecution of flagging cases here recently, and was named as one of the lawyers in the defense. Garrett is said to have aroused the antagonism of the Klan by his advice to leave.

Members of the Bibb county executive committee this afternoon were aroused over the reported effort to violate the primary and thus upset the machinery of the democratic party, and directed their efforts to assure the election of successful candidates in the primary.

Carlton C. Jones bolted the primary Thursday and announced as an independent against Sheriff J. R. Hicks, the democratic nominee. This, Solicitor Garrett charges, is only a small part of the fight being waged by the Klan in Georgia.

Garrett said this afternoon that he did not know of any Klan move to defeat Garrett.

Would Refuse Office.

"Mr. Garrett and I are good friends," he said. "If I should happen to get more votes than I would like to accept the office."

He later telephoned the same message to Garrett.

Many women of Macon are taking a leading part for and against the nominee. The vote Tuesday will be the heaviest ever cast in this county in a national election.

The Jones faction is expected to take out a writ of mandamus Monday to compel the managers to count votes cast for him.

Ordinary C. M. Wiley insists that because Jones did not enter the race until days before the election, he is disqualified.

"Tell me," Wiley said, "what entries must be filed 15 days before the election, and he has instructed all election managers not to count any votes that may be cast for Jones."

FINAL COUNCIL IN CHEST DRIVE SET FOR TUESDAY

All Workers To Assemble at Dinner on Eve of First Fund Offensive.

BLACK WILL OUTLINE CAMPAIGN METHODS

Complete Organization for Annual Charity Work Has Been Mapped by Leaders.

A meeting of all workers for the Community Chest campaign, preceding the opening of the campaign on Wednesday, November 5, will be held at 6:30 o'clock Tuesday night at the Kimball House.

At the dinner, workers will be given their final instructions and will be enabled to become acquainted with other workers in the campaign. It is pointed out that in this way the workers will better realize the scope of the Community Chest campaign than during the previous years when they met in various small groups. It is planned to hold regular luncheons at 12:30 o'clock at the Kimball House each day of the campaign for the purpose of cooperation and formulating of any additional plans necessary.

At the meeting Tuesday night, workers will be given literature for distribution; quotas will be allotted, and reports of special committees will be made. All details necessary to the opening of the campaign will be discussed and decided upon and workers will be prepared to enter actively into the work Wednesday.

$705,481.31 Budget.

The Community Chest budget for this year has been announced as $705,481.31. This amount is expected to be raised by workers who are representatives of many civic organizations of the city. One hundred workers have been furnished by the Atlanta Rotary club, and practically every member of the Masonic club has agreed to aid in the drive for funds.

At the closing of the odds were: Ten to one on Coolidge, 25 to 1 against La Follette and 2 to 1 on Governor Smith to win in New York. These were the longest odds that had prevailed since the campaign opened.

According to the firm of J. S. Fried & Co., the greater part of the million dollars is represented by wagers on the gubernatorial contest in New York and by "break" bets of various descriptions.

Practically all the Davis money in evidence at the close of the week, according to Fried, came from people who had bet on President Coolidge early in the campaign at the then prevailing odds of 2 to 1 and 3 to 1 and who were desirous of hedging on the present big odds on the republican candidate.

Many "Point" Bets Wait.

There was unlimited money to bet on Coolidge, and the odds of 10 to 1 are said to be the highest odds ever offered on a presidential candidate three days before the election.

Fried & Co. reported having, among others, the following commissions to place on the presidential race: Seven to one that the selection of a president will not be thrown into congress by reason of a deadlock; even money that Coolidge will receive 300 or more votes in the electoral college; 5 to 7 that he will get 340 or more votes in the college; 7 to 1 that the president will carry New York state; even money that he will carry it by 62,000 votes; and 3 to 1 that Coolidge will carry California.

In addition to the foregoing, the

ASSERTS JOHN D. HASN'T ENOUGH GAS TO GET TO HEAVEN

New York, November 1.—John D. Rockefeller has a new joke which he enjoys telling his friends. He relates it as follows:

"I was up in the central part of the state this summer to visit some of the spots where I spent my childhood. My car had stopped and I was looking around when an old farmer came up to the car and started to talk to me."

"He didn't know who I was. We chatted together for about five minutes and then asked me where I was going."

"I'm going to heaven," I replied with a smile.

"Get out," he said "you ain't got enough gas."

MILLION IN BETS AWAITS DECISION OF TUESDAY POLL

Coolidge Is Favorite at 10 to 1 on Wall Street Books—Smith Gets 2 to 1 Edge on "T. R., Jr."

New York, November 1.—At the close of business in Wall street today, one million dollars resposed in the laps of betting commissioners, representing wagers that have been put up on the outcome of Tuesday's voting in New York state and the nation.

In the financial district, where men reputedly toss away millions in the interval between their 10 o'clock breakfast and lunch, there is some tendency to apologize for this figure. It represents the season's election betting in these parts and is smaller than might be expected, the stakeholders explain, because there has been less betting in this election than in any other presidential contest in years. It is explained that Davis money has been shy and the odds on President Coolidge have risen to practically prohibitive figures.

2 to 1 on Smith to Win.

At closing (inter) the odds were: Ten to one on Coolidge, 25 to 1 against La Follette and 2 to 1 on Governor Smith to win in New York. These were the longest odds that had prevailed since the campaign opened.

SPALDING CONCERT
ON NOVEMBER 8

Albert Spalding, great American violinist, will be heard here on November 8, at the Woman's Club auditorium, under auspices of the Atlanta Music club, as the first attraction of the Series Intime. The Series Intime—or little series—offers three attractions, the other two being the English pianist, Myra Hess, and the Florentine quartet.

Officials of the Music club state that while Spalding is commonly called America's greatest violinist, the foremost critics ranking him among the greatest violin virtuosos of the world. He has played in practically every musical center of the country, and upon Spalding the man, as Spalding the incomparable artist, have been showered encomiums unstinted. Spalding made his first American concert tour as soloist with the Dresden Philharmonic orchestra. Since then he has appeared with ever first-class symphony orchestras in America and in continental Europe.

He is the only American violinist—and one of three violinists—who ever had the honor of being invited to appear as soloist with the famous Paris Conservatoire orchestra. The other two were Kreisler and Ysaye.

Only five of the world-renowned violinists have appeared at the famous La Scala Opera house in Milan, and of these one was Albert Spalding, American.

There will be no reserved seats for the Atlanta concert. Those holding season tickets will seat with those holding the door for the single performance.

ESSAY PRIZE WINNERS NAMED FOR GEORGIA

Winners in the essay contest on cooperative marketing of farm products, prizes for which were offered by a number of banks in the state, have been announced by the committee of judges consisting of T. R. Bennett, state superintendent of banks; S. G. McLeod, secretary of state, and Edwin Camp, editor, Atlanta newspaperman.

T. E. Smith, Jr., of Macon; Mildred Collier, of Coner, and Roy M. Patrick, of Gore, won prizes of $100 in gold each. T. E. Smith, Jr., won the prize for writing the best essay of any high school student. Mildred Collier won the prize for writing the best essay of any college student. Roy M. Patrick wrote the best essay of any student in the elementary grades of a rural school.

Students in a number of counties entered this contest, the subject of the essay being "The Value of Cooperative Marketing Associations for Farm Products." The $300 awarded winners were contributed by something like 30 banks in different sections of the state.

ANNUAL PRAYER WEEK TO BE OBSERVED HERE

The annual week of prayer, promoted by the Woman's Missionary society of the Methodist Episcopal church, South, will be observed at Duval Hills Methodist church by the following program, beginning Sunday, November 2, with a special sermon at 7:30 o'clock and a regular meeting of Woman's Missionary society Monday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock.

The program for the remainder of the week follows: Tuesday, all-day meeting—Morning session, 10:30—Bible lesson, Mrs. Comer Woodruff; "Prayer, Power, and Promise," Mrs. W. M. Thurman; "The Orient," Mr. Ono, of Japan; "Brazil," Albert Station.

Friday, 3:30 o'clock—"Prayer and Gifts," program by the young people, in charge of Mrs. W. M. Thurman. Devotional, Miss Anna Thurman; dialogue, Miss Elizabeth Steed and Aurelia Taylor.

Special music has been planned for each of the programs. The first half hour of the Thursday and Friday programs will be devoted to intercessory prayer.

WAX-LIKE PERFORMER
PUZZLE TO THROGS

Attention of Saturday's throngs was attracted to windows of Franklin & Cox's, better known in theatrical circles as "Waxo," was conducting a series of pantomime demonstrations for the Frank E. Block company. Waxo, during his performance in which he demonstrates the famous "Goober Goodies," does not wink his eye or change his expression. Years of practice have enabled him to put himself into a self-imposed hypnotic condition in which he can remain for hours.

The shadow background for his performance was arranged by Mr. DeLamater, display manager for Franklin & Cox, who also lends his assistance during the demonstration.

Though he is only 16 years of age, Miss Helen Fillmore, of Plymouth, Mass., acted as judge at the recent Marchfield fair.

Atlanta Dollars Aided in Construction
Of Magnificent Building in Washington

Above is shown the $2,500,000 building recently completed in Washington, D. C., as a home for the National Chamber of Commerce. Leading cities in the United States subscribed the building fund, Atlanta's quota being $6,000.

Atlanta dollars—$6,000 of them to be exact—subscribed through the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce and contributed to a $2,500,000 fund for the erection in Washington, D. C., of a home for the National Chamber of Commerce, a part in the beautiful building shown in the above picture.

B. S. Barker, secretary of the local chamber, has returned from a meeting of the national body—the first in the new building—and speaks in interesting fashion of the beauty of the new home which Atlanta dollars helped to build in Washington.

Dream of Twelve Years.

The project of establishing at Washington national headquarters for American business, inaugurated by the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce, has come to fulfillment on October 1 when the Chamber of Commerce of the United States took possession of its new $2,500,000 home overlooking historic Lafayette square, according to Mr. Barker.

The structure, which is of the same monumental character as many of the more modern public buildings housing government institutions and departments, not only typifies the extraordinary developments of associational activity on the part of trade and commercial organizations, but will serve as a national gathering place for more than 1,000 of these organizations of the national chamber. It will be jointly their permanent home at Several Atlanta Masonic lodges have been invited to attend a special service at the Barnett Presbyterian church at 11 o'clock this morning. Among the lodges which have accepted the invitation is the John Rosier lodge No. 608, F. and A. M., members of which will attend the services in a body.

Rev. W. L. Latham, pastor of the church, is active in Masonic work. The Barnett Presbyterian church is located at the corner of Hampton street and Bradley avenue.

NATION TO HONOR
Heroic Wounded
On November 7

Preparations under way for the past several weeks for Atlanta's observance of "Forget-Me-Not" day, November 7, are practically complete, according to Mrs. Marcus Beck, wife of the supreme court justice, who stated Saturday that a group of leading matrons and pretty girls will aid in the sale of tags on that day.

Proceeds from the sale will go to the Disabled American Veterans of the World War and will be used in providing aid and necessary luxuries for men in hospitals and for dependents of disabled men, according to Mrs. Beck. The day has been designated officially by President Coolidge, with governors in all states and mayors of leading cities adding additional proclamations to call to the attention of the nation the significance of the day.

Pretty Girls Help. Pretty Atlanta girls and young matrons will be stationed at downtown points to receive contributions from persons who wish to give small amounts for the aid of wounded service men. The disabled veterans' fund is not included in the Community Chest, leaders point out, because it is not an organization which can be classed as a nature to fit into the chest.

Money derived through the sale of tags and hand-made flowers one day and other items is deposited in the Atlanta and Lowry National bank and dispensed by a special committee only after every item has been checked to determine its worthiness, leaders assert.

Club Women Active. Mrs. C. H. Kittrell, president of the Twelfth District Federation of Women's Clubs and head of the tag day plans for that district, advised Saturday that plans for the day are named in every city in the district and that plans are going forward for a successful day.

In other sections, officials state, plans have been perfected and Georgians will be confronted with appeals in practically every city on November 7.

Mrs. Irving Thomas, Mrs. Sam D. Small and other leading Atlanta club women have interested themselves in "Forget-Me-Not" day plans. It is planned, and are lending valuable assistance to state officials.

the national capital and expressive of the common purpose and interests of all branches of industry and commerce.

With this in view the new building has been designed to afford to member organizations facilities for meeting at the capital, in which respect it differs from any other of the buildings typifying special fields of national activity centered about the seat of government. The entire main floor will be devoted to the concourse of organizations of the chamber. The floor contains a series of halls a conference rooms suitable for a gathering of any size up to 1,000 persons. These are ranged about an open court or patio, arched on two sides, with a central fountain—one of the most attractive features of the building. The chamber, chamber or auditorium, with a seating capacity of 1,000, extending along one side of the court, is designed for the use of larger conventions. Adjoining this is a large room with a seating capacity of 400.

For smaller meetings there are hall which will accommodate 500 people, a conference room, 20 and three committee rooms. An unusually spacious entrance hall affords direct access to the court and auditorium.

The three upper floors are now occupied by the administrative staff and research division of the national chamber, which make provision also for meetings of the board of directors and for committees.

Has Famous Site. The new chamber of commerce, fronting on Lafayette square and Connecticut avenue, occupies the site of the old red brick mansion which was known for many years as the "Webster house," the residence of Daniel Webster. It marks the gradual change in the environment of the square, the "front yard" of the white house round which the homes of prominent and the social activities of the city have been centered since 1800. The old house, still bearing a part of the statefulness of a period since gone by, have either disappeared or have been given over to other uses.

The new building was designed by Albert W. Noyes, who also designed the treasury annex, which is facing the southeast corner of Lafayette square. It is of classic design, the most striking characteristic being the use of the Doric order on each facade with Corinthian columns and entablature—a design adopted upon by the federal fine arts commission for all buildings of a public character to be erected around the square.

The first meeting to be held in the building will be that of the National Chamber of Commerce, which will be followed by the mid-year meeting of the eastern division of the National Chamber of Commerce, which will bring together several hundred business men from the seventeen states and eastern states. In addition, the high type jobs that have been awarded to the Decatur Plumbing company are: The new building of the Decatur Bank & Trust company, both heating and plumbing being installed in that structure; Pythagoras-Masonic Temple, heating and plumbing; the plumbing in the new Fourth National bank branch, and jobs of plumbing in Scottsdale, Ingleside, Cross Keys, school house, plumbing and heating in the home of Mrs. B. L. Farris, on East Lake-wood road.

This concern, it is pointed out, accepts contracts upon a strict assurance of efficient service, and its schedule is adhered to in practically every instance, making it possible for the heating and plumbing to be out of the way for other construction on time.

The Decatur Plumbing company has been in business in Decatur for 15 years, and has the following leaders: G. A. Blackstock, proprietor, A. J. Shuford, superintendent of construction, and J. N. Hardin, secretary in charge of the other work that have been awarded to the Decatur Plumbing company are: The new building of the Decatur Bank & Trust company, both heating and plumbing being installed in that structure; Pythagoras-Masonic Temple, heating and plumbing; the plumbing in the new Fourth National bank branch, and jobs of plumbing in Scottsdale, Ingleside, Cross Keys, school house, plumbing and heating in the home of Mrs. B. During the past year the number of students in Y. M. C. A. educational courses in the United States and Canada numbered more than 90,000. The Y. M. C. A. seeks to select its teachers with a view not only to their technical ability, but to their Christian character and quality of leadership. In touch with such leaders come large numbers of young men who have not been able to obtain adequate educational advantages during school years, or who desire to pursue some new line of training.

Service, not profit, is the purpose of these schools. They seek men of all kinds, native and foreign, educated and illiterate. Practically every large city, and many small ones, have one of these schools. The subjects range all the way from the most elementary to engineering, law, dentistry, pharmacy and the liberal arts. The educational department of the international committee gives expert service to the various associations in the development of educational courses of study; assists the local associations in organizing, promoting and conducting educational work, and develops methods for training instructors.

All students in association schools are members of the Y. M. C. A. in which the school is located. Every student has absolute freedom to participate or not in the social, recreational and character-building activities of the association.

For those whose hours of work or places of residence make attendance in classrooms impossible, correspondence courses are available. In addition, the international committee, reported during the past year, has organized a series of correspondence courses in this field of service than ever before.

One of the best established and equipped dealers around Atlanta is the Decatur Buick company, located on the Court House Square in Decatur. This dealer has handled the popular Buick car in DeKalb and Fulton counties and has built up a large business both in the sales and service departments.

Dorris is proprietor of the company and is assisted in conducting the business by an efficient organization of salesmen and service men, all of whom have been with the company several years.

The sales room is of ample size and well lighted and affords an ample display for the various Buick models, an assortment of which are kept on hand at all times when available.

The service department is thoroughly modern in construction and equipment. The garage has a side entrance and rear exit and is easily accessible to get in to the cars. The building is equipped with the latest tools and equipment, so that it is equipped to handle any class of Buick repair work.

Mr. Dorris has been connected with Buick organization for the past twelve years and has operated the Decatur agency for the past five years.

A branch receiving station for the convenience of patrons has been opened by the C. & O. Parcel Delivery Service, Inc., at the corner of Madison avenue and West Hennessey street, under the Spring street viaduct.

Miss Nell Reynolds, of 71 Lindsay street, was badly injured and bruised early Saturday night when she was struck by an automobile driven by E. Bishop, 22, of 37 Krog street, while she was attempting to cross the street at the corner of Fryer and Decatur streets, according to police.

The young woman was carried to Grady hospital, where her injuries were treated. A case of reckless driving was made against Bishop and he was released under $100 bond.

4th National Has Fine Building
In Decatur, Ga.

The handsome new building recently completed and occupied by the Decatur branch of the Fourth National bank is not only a distinct feature of the business section of the city, but also a fine evidence of the unusual banking facilities which Decatur and DeKalb county enjoy.

Decatur is almost unique among cities of its size in having advantage of the facilities of a bank large and as widely and favorably known as the Fourth National, which has resources of more than $35,000,000, and is recognized in banking circles throughout the country as one of the south's foremost financial institutions.

The Fourth National began business in 1886, and the men who lead its list of officers today, Captain J. W. English, chairman of the board; John K. Ottewill, president, and Charles L. Ryan, vice president, have been continuously associated in its management since its organization. The bank has enjoyed a steady and rapid growth, and is now one of the most progressive of its kind in the south.

Marks Opening of New Bank
As Leading Realty
Man in Decatur

The Decatur Bank and Trust company has just completed its beautiful new building on the southeast corner of Sycamore and McDonough streets.

The building is a two-story structure and completely modern in design with every modern requirement necessary for a beautiful bank home. On next Wednesday, November 5, the new building will be opened to the public in a very splendid manner. A very cordial invitation is extended to all banking circles throughout the city to be present for a big attendance. The bank officials promise all visitors a very cordial welcome.

The Decatur Bank and Trust company, which was organized in 1920 by the state of Georgia. This bank, whose name was changed in 1920 to the Decatur Bank and Trust company, has been continuously associated in its management since its organization. # A WONDERFUL GROWTH IN DECATUR

By PAUL JONES.

Decatur's reputation as the "Ideal Home Town" has become more than ever fixed during the building wave that has swept over the south, when hundreds of splendid homes have been erected in this beautiful city. Many prominent business men and women of Atlanta maintain their homes in Decatur, commuting to and from the city on the two excellent trolley lines, or driving in the six miles in autos over the finest paved roads in the south.

Decatur is also famous as a center of learning, being the capital of DeKalb county, within whose borders are located Emory university, the greatest institution of learning in the south, perhaps, for men; Agnes Scott college, a splendid college for the education and training of young women, and the famous Oglethorpe university, a short distance removed from Decatur.

Decatur is known throughout the country for its balmy climate and its delightfulness as a resort. Hundreds of people choose this little city as their abiding place during the rigorous months in the north, as well as during the hottest season of the year, when many other portions of the country suffer from intense heat.

The fine soils of DeKalb county, varying to the extent that practically every class of fruit, garden truck and vegetables may be raised here, are also the source of much wealth and the basis of much enterprise in Decatur, which is served by many first-class roads running to Atlanta and other sections of the state. These highways, which are kept in the best of condition at all times, provide facilities for reaching the markets in Atlanta, where much of the DeKalb produce is consumed. Decatur is the center of a rich farming section also, almost every farm product flourishing in DeKalb county.

The huge vein of granite, which was forced up from beneath the surface of the ground, perhaps by the cooling process millions of years ago, creating Stone Mountain, extends to other parts of DeKalb county, affording a mammoth industry in paving and building stones and other granite products. This big industry adds to the importance of Decatur as a business center.

Hundreds of new residences have been erected during the building period that has been in progress since the world war, and among the new homes in Decatur will ound many of the finest city and suburban estates in South.

DECATUR, GA., THE LAST TEN YEARS

Within the past ten years Decatur has experienced rapid progress, one of the most notable public improvements being the magnificent court house, which stands in the center of the city as a monument to its civic enterprise. This beautiful building, one of the handsomest in the state, may be seen from all directions many miles before the city is reached.

The streets of Decatur, like the highways of DeKalb county, are smoothly paved, lined with handsome elm and forest trees. The streets are maintained in a state of evenness and cleanliness that renders a drive through the city a most comfortable and pleasant event. A drive over the streets of Decatur shows, in addition to the many beautiful homes, the famous Agnes Scott college, the Methodist orphanage, which has been an institution of this city for many years, and the battleground where General Thomas fought General Hood on the evening of July 20, 1864, the Confederate leader retiring after a sharp battle.

Among the business commercial institutions of note that have stood for the progress of Decatur, and which have been looked upon for years as fortresses of strength to the business institutions and to the farming element of the county, are the two splendid banks, one of which is a state institution and another a branch of one of Atlanta's strongest national banking systems.

Big State Banks.

The Decatur Bank and Trust company, which operates upon a state charter, is looked upon as one of the strongest state banks in north Georgia, its capital and resources considered. This bank is headed by Col.

Howell Green, one of the most prominent attorneys of Atlanta for many years, who retired to Decatur, the city of his home, and entered the banking business.

The Fourth National bank, one of the best known national banks in the south, which has branches in several portions of Atlanta, has just completed a magnificent new building for its Decatur branch. This is said to be one of the most beautiful little banking houses in the state and it has been equipped with every device and equipment known to modern financial houses, it is declared.

La Follette's Charge That Railroads Are Owned by Organized Banking Interests, and the Reply of Daniel Willard, President of the B. & O.

New York, November 1.—In going to the mat this week with La Follette, on the charge just made by the leader of the third party in the pending presidential election campaign that the railroads of the country were owned by the "organized banking interests," Daniel Willard, president of Baltimore & Ohio, makes a statement of great interest to the public, quite aside from politics.

Referring to the phrase credited to Senator La Follette, the organized banking interests which own the railroads Willard says. "While I do not know exactly what is meant by that phrase, I assume that Senator [McKellar] is referring to the fact that the railroads are controlled by combinations among bankers which own sufficient railroad securities, including, of course, railroad stocks, to control the management. In this connection I can speak with personal knowledge concerning the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad. The Baltimore & Ohio rests primarily with the 34,000 shareholders who own the capital stock. The management of the railroad is being exercised through a board of twelve directors chosen each year by the stockholders at their annual meeting.

For more than twenty-five years the banking houses of Kahn, Loeb & Co., of New York, have organized the fiscal agents of the Baltimore & Ohio railroad but neither of them at the present time.

any holding whatever of Baltimore & Ohio stock, nor is any member of either of the firms above mentioned a stockholder of record or director of either of them. Neither of the firms above mentioned controls the Baltimore & Ohio. The president of the company is responsible to the board of directors, and they in turn are responsible solely to the 34,000 stockholders. The statement, therefore, that 'the organized banking interests own the railroad and presumably control them, is definitely untrue. It is not true that it is owned by the Baltimore & Ohio.

Many people expect La Follette to get his facts mixed to the point of making misleading statements; but that is not generally expected of the president of a great railroad like Willard when he is talking about his own company. It is not surprising, therefore, that the speaker, talked over a number of times with the president of the Baltimore & Ohio, the owner brand of bunk that Willard in the foregoing statement.

NEW HIGHS MADE IN BAKING STOCKS

New York, November 1.—Continued evidence was given in the market on the euro exchange today of the urgent buying that developed in yesterday's rally. New high records were attained in the baking companies and a large number of public utility securities.

This was a sensational advance in Cities Service which opened with an overnight gain of 61.2 points selling at $4 with the following transaction record:

Symbol	High	Low	Open	Close	Volume
PRIO	4.12	3.98	3.98	4.00	17,000

Prairie Oil moved up 3 points from the day's low and higher quotations ruled in the other issues of that group.

Advances were also noted in domestic industrials and in many of the names submitted to the widely scattered shareholders. Note upon the annual election of directors of the proxies printed and sent out by the management.

Mr. Willard knows perfectly well the importance of the banks and the firms named resigned as directors of Baltimore & Ohio several years ago when the law was passed prohibiting interlocking directors. Kuhn, Loeb & Co. was one of the directors of Baltimore & Ohio board of directors

The oil stocks were the widest since trading has been conducted on the curb exchange under present conditions. Ward Baking, which has the most interest during the last half of the week when United Bakingeries which had been in steady demand, for a long time, advanced 1/2 cent in two days, crossing 140 and Ward Baking B, advanced more than five points, crossing 40, both those stocks selling at the highest prices touched in their history.

Paul M. Warburg, while Speyer & Co. have a representative on the Baltimore curb, in Henry Ruhledner & Co. of New York, until recently a partner in the firm of Kuhn, Loeb & Co., Ruhledner until recent years was a partner in the firm of Speyer & Co.

La Follette is right in his charge that our railroads are controlled by bankers. That is true of every great railroad in the country with one exception.

Strength was shown in a number of other industries including the coal stocks. Pittsburg Terminal coal moved up four points and again of two points. The oil stocks were also strong with high levels and inter-annual record also made a new high record.

There were wide movements in a number of the oil issues. Prairie Oil the power of having the say as to who shall and who shall not be directors of the company, and on the other hand, of being able to state that no member of the banking firms of Kuhn, Loeb & Co. or Speyer & Co own stock in Baltimore & Ohio, he should be able to point to the fact that these bankers are not lawfully directors of the stock. In this bankers who should

THE ATLANTA REAL ESTATE REVIEW

CONDUCTED IN THE INTEREST OF THE DEVELOPMENT OF ATLANTA AND THE SOUTH

Pine Crest Sale Promises New Residence Community

A sale of large residence tracts in Pine Crest on a large north side parcel, which has been cut into large-sized home sites, is said by the Logan Realty and Trust corporation to be a pioneer effort toward the establishment of a new and attractive community of homes of the more pretentious type.

Within a short time, stated James L. Logan, "who conducted an auction Saturday afternoon on this property," the people of Atlanta will witness a most remarkable growth in this beautiful section, which lies on Power's Ferry road, just at the junction with Mt. Perian road.

A sale was conducted on this property Saturday of last week, stated Mr. Logan, and at that time many of the large lots were taken by purchasers who recognized their value as sites for suburban homes or small country estates.

The situation of the parcel is said to be all that could be desired, natural advantages considered. There are plenty of handsome forest trees, many of which are stately pines, a gracefully undulating surface that will permit of artistic landscaping; a pretty dale or ravine, through which a crystal woodland stream ripples, and many other natural attractions that add to the beauty of the tract.

Its location on Power's Ferry road, one of the most prominent highways of the county, and its proximity to Mt. Perian, another famous Fulton highway, also adds value to the lots.

The auction held Saturday afternoon was an important event and a large crowd of Atlantans took advantage of the company's invitation to enjoy the occasion. There was a splendid Georgia barbecue, served with all the "trimmings," and under practically ideal weather conditions. Other features of the program added to the enjoyment of the occasion, it was stated.

"Pine Crest," said Mr. Logan, "bids fair to become one of the loveliest residential sections within Atlanta's metropolitan district, and we are convinced that it will become a community of high-type homes within a short time."

THOMPSON REPORTS BUSINESS ACTIVITY GOOD.

With many profitable sales consummated during the past few days, and with others in the making, it was stated, the John J. Thompson company, of the Candler building, is highly optimistic regarding the situation in Atlanta.

REALTY MEN TO HAVE NORTH GEORGIA OUTING.

Without announcing just who the lucky members of the party will be, the heads of the Evans & Davis Realty company gave it out the latter part of the week that several members of the company's staff will be granted leave-of-absence the coming week for a trip to the mountains of north Georgia. Business has been good, it was declared, and it was decided that a fox chase would perhaps serve not only to reward the hustling members of the staff, but would imbue them with renewed enthusiasm on their return to the city.

BUSINESS ACTIVE WITH THE HILL COMPANY.

"Business has been decidedly good with our agency during the past few weeks," said a member of the B. H. Hill Realty company, "and we feel justified in making the most optimistic predictions with reference to future activity in the Atlanta real estate market."

CONSTITUTION ADS AID IN RENTING BIG APARTMENT.

Giving credit to the efficiency of the A. B. C. classified system used by The Atlanta Constitution, H. S. Copeland, of the Purdette Realty company, says that he has experienced much success in filling the handsome units of the big new apartment, for which the Purdette company is sole agent. "We find these advertisements highly effective," said Mr. Copeland, "and we use them freely because of the splendid results given by them."

OLIVER DOLVIN EXPERIENCES SUCCESS WITH ADS.

Using the classified advertisements of The Atlanta Constitution profusely with reference to property listed for both rental and sale, Oliver Dolvin, of the Dolvin Realty company, stated last week that the returns of the agency have been highly gratifying. "We are in every way," Mr. Dolvin also states, "that the present activity of the local real estate market bids fair to continue for several months."

PROMINENT LUMBER MAN TO BUILD IN DRUID HILLS.

Stephen J. West, executive of the West Lumber company, plans to build a home in Druid Hills at an early date. He has just bought a lot on North Decatur road, opposite the Walter Candler home in Druid Hills. The lot selected by Mr. West has a frontage of 120 feet with a depth of 390 feet, the purchase price being $5,400. Mr. West plans to build a home on this lot, commencing at an early date, and it goes without saying that he will use excellent lumber. He also plans to build a large building materials in the structure. Doubtless he will also purchase most of this material from West Lumber company.

IMPORTANT SALE OF FORREST AVENUE CORNER.

Announcement has been made of the sale of the former Crumley home on the northeast corner of Forrest avenue and Courtland street, the transfer having been made by Southern Dental college. The property, which was owned by Crumley Investment company, had a frontage of approximately 100 feet on Courtland street, running back about 200 feet on Courtland street; together with a lot 50x200 feet on Courtland street in the rear.

FRED JETER MAKES BUSINESS TOUR.

Fred J. Jeter, junior head of the Jeter company, well-known real estate and renting company, and one of the outstanding figures in the Atlanta business world, was out of the city several days during the past week on business, it is understood, for the firm.

SHAFFER HONORED BY ARCHITECTURAL FORUM.

A signal honor was conferred upon Fred Shafer, executive secretary of the Atlanta Building Owners' and Managers' association, by the editor of The Architectural Forum, one of the foremost and most interesting trade journals of the country. Mr. Shafer was named a member of the advisory committee of the editorial department of this magazine along with a number of prominent men of the United States, with whom he has been associated in his connections with the office building management. Other members of the advisory committee for the present issue are: J. Clyde Cushman, chairman, New York; Earl Shultz, Chicago; William M. MacJachian, Detroit; William M. Ellis, Chicago; George D. McGowan, Cleveland; and Fred Shafer, Atlanta.

FORMER HOME OF COLONEL L. Z. ROSSER HAS BEEN SOLD.

Announcement has just been made that the home, formerly owned by the late Luther Z. Rosser, prominent Atlanta attorney, situated at No. 30 Cheshire road, has been sold by Adair Realty & Trust Co. to Dr. Charles M. Barnwell, Jr., prominent Atlanta dentist. The house, which was built of tile and stone, occupied a lot 100 feet wide and 400 feet deep. It was sold for a consideration of $25,000. Dr. Barnwell and family

Hughes Defends Navy Pact Wheeler Lashes G.O.P. Slush As Reply to Davis' Charges And Predicts Success at Polls

New York, November 1.—Secretary Hughes wound up his campaigning "It tonight with the declaration that his opponents of President Coolidge had started out with an attempt to "campe" the country with "ill-measured attacks upon reputation" but had found their efforts vain.

"Long after his detractors have been forgotten," he continued, "the memory of Calvin Coolidge will be cherished by the American people."

"Let violators of the law be punished, whoever they may be, but it would be extraordinary to assert that the misdeeds of a few men are being duly prosecuted, affords any reason why we should adopt free trade."

Mr. Hughes declared statements made by John W. Davis as to unemployment during the Harding-Coolidge administration showed a "lack of knowledge of the true state of record."

The republican administration, he said, had inherited a crisis from its democratic predecessor, "and with it 4,000,000 unemployed" due to the failure of the democratic administration to prevent post-war inflation.

The secretary again dealt at some length with aspects of the Washington arms limitation conference, which was opened by Mr. Davis in recent speeches.

"I confess that I am mystified," he said, "in one breath he (Mr. Davis) is all for disarmament and peace he waxes conferences and many of them. In another, he disparages the only conference of late years that has been reasonably successful."

New York, November 1.—(By the Associated Press.)—In a hurried last-minute skirmish for votes, Senator Wheeler, independent vice presidential candidate, got in three speeches in the New York area. He invaded New Jersey at Hoboken, early in the evening, but returned in time to make the final talk of the day in New York city.

It was his third appearance in New York, but 14,000 miles of western travel and seven weeks of time had intervened between his former appearance, and he declared that his audiences made during the interim had convinced him that west of the Mississippi the La Follette fight had been won. He said, likewise, that the electoral struggles in central states of Illinois, Michigan and Ohio had given himself and his principal a chance for straight-out election, regardless of deadlock possibilities in congress.

Hurling Questions at Coolidge. In platform plays, rehearsed during scores of western stump appearances, Senator Wheeler asked his audiences to consider President Coolidge seated in an empty chair, which he jerked to position beside him. To the imaginary occupant of the seat he fired a series of campaign questions, as to conduct of the national government, bank deposit of state funds in Massachusetts, and declared that the answers were "the usual silence emanating from a white house."

Here in the city of New York there are men who believe they have already written your election story for you, with the checks they have written, the $5,000 checks, the $25,000 checks, their $50,000 checks, he declared, "they believe their money has determined the result of the election and they believe their money will come back to them many times increased during the next four years. It remains for you to say, your pencil stubs in the voting booths against their fountain pens in their bank offices."

People Too Partisan. "In the past the political intelligence of the private interests has been greater than the political intelligence of the plain people. The people have been republicans, democrats, socialists, even voting as Baptists and Catholics and Ku Klux Klansmen, but the bankers have voted as bankers; the steel manufacturers as manufacturers; the railroad operators as railroad operators. The wealth of your nation has drawn ever into fewer and fewer hands."

"If I thought for one moment that you were not strong enough to throw off this habit in this enlightened year, I should not be here tonight. But this year, in my opinion, the people are roused and ready. There has been a shameful chapter of national shame."

The Elgin Machinery company was given permission to demonstrate a street sweeper on Atlanta streets on 30-day trial, and if the machine proves satisfactory, it will be purchased by the city, according to decision of the finance committee Saturday.

The Elgin company and the Austin West Machinery company, of Atlanta, were the only bidders on the machine. The board also appropriated $5,000 to the construction department for street repairs, and instructed Alderman W. B. Duval, acting chairman, and City Comptroller B. Graham West to attempt to find an additional $5,000 for the same use.

Chief of Construction Hanson told the committee that his entire appropriation is exhausted, and that all street repair work would have to be discontinued for the remainder of the year unless further appropriations are made.

Gann Realty Co. Makes Important Real Estate Deals

An important lease of business realty in the downtown section of Atlanta was recently announced by R. M. and Archibald Gann, whose offices are in the Atlanta Trust Company building.

The property involved is a large building, Nos. 50-61-63 Garnett street, which was leased for the O'Keefe Realty company to a client for a term of years at an aggregate price of $52,500. No further information was given regarding this property.

The same agency also announced the sale of two parcels, containing five houses, for the J. M. Stephens estate, the consideration being $9,500, it was said.

Laurens Agent Buys Carload of Blooded Cows for Farmers

Dublin, Ga., November 1.—(Special.)—County Agent J. F. Hart is at Union Point, where he has gone to purchase a carload of milk cows to be brought to Laurens county.

He has secured some choice cows already, and is now preparing to finish out the car with others and bring them here. One herd of nine cows, which he purchased Saturday, was of a very high grade. He had offered the owner some time before that, an average of $75 per head for 10, and at a sale Saturday he purchased the same herd for a smaller figure.

This saving in price will be passed on to the farmers in Laurens, as the sale is to be made for only the expense of putting the cows in Dublin.

Mr. Hart is very much elated over the especially high-grade stock he will have in this second car of the past month and expects to see this county in the front ranks in Georgia's dairy counties in a few months.

Tallapoosa Nimrods Are Invited To Chase Foxes in Alabama

Tallapoosa, Ga., November 1.—(Special.)—Fox hunters from this section of Georgia have been invited to attend the field trial events to be held in Cleburne county, Alabama, next week, sportsmen having arranged to leave their homes and spend three days in the mountains of that section.

The Alabama Fox Hunters' association has planned for a three-day period, beginning Tuesday, and several hundred packs of hounds from that state will take part in the hunt. The hunt will be directed by State Senator W. H. Howle, of Cleburne county, through whose efforts the field trial events have been brought to Cleburne.

SOUTH SIDE BUILDER NEW FULTON MAGAZINE

An attractive publication bearing the title, "The South Side Builder," has come to the desk of The Real Estate Review. In this attractive magazine there are many well-written boasts for College Park, East Point and Hapeville, the three of Atlanta's most popular and enterprising suburban cities. The editor announces on the "flagstaff" that the publication is gotten out in the interests of the south side of Fulton county, and this entire territory is well covered in the news items throughout the magazine. On its advertising pages the big industries of the South Side are well represented.

Among the interesting stories from the standpoint of real estate, industrial and civic development, is one telling of the many improvements that are being made by city fathers of College Park. There, it is declared, is a potential building boom, with a handsome and costly city hall in prospect, a number of new residences and other public improvements. A handsome Methodist church and several high-type homes have recently been completed. A splendid Baptist church is now in course of construction, which will be modern in every sense.

The municipal improvements contemplated for College Park, it was stated, include additions to the water service, the city having grown to such an extent that its water plant no longer fills the needs of the people.

The South Side Builder covers Fulton South Side in a most comprehensive way and is looked upon as sure to make a hit with the enterprising people of Hapeville, College Park, East Point and other hustling communities.

FLORIDA REALTY MEN OPEN LOCAL OFFICE

W. A. Bland, of the firm of Bland & Driggers, real estate operators, of Ft. Lauderdale, and C. L. Chancy, prominent attorney, also of Ft. Lauderdale, Fla., are in the city, guests at the Ansley hotel.

Mr. Bland's firm, recently made a sale of some ocean-front acreage south of Cocoa Beach, Fla., for Gus C. Edwards, president of Cocoa Beach Development company, 37 North Forsyth street. The property was sold to a Boston capitalist for $130,000. Mr. Chancy, as attorney for the purchaser, and Mr. Bland, representing the firm, came to Atlanta for the purpose of closing the transaction with Mr. Edwards through the Citizens and Southern bank.

M. L. Thrower Speaks To Christian Laymen Today in Pittsburgh

Following the recent election of Marvin L. Thrower, well-known Atlanta realtor, to the presidency of the Evangelical Laymen's association of the nation, Mr. Thrower has been invited to address the national gathering in Pittsburgh. He left Atlanta Friday in order to reach the Pennsylvania city in time for the speech Sunday morning.

Mr. Thrower became active as a militant Christian layman during the revival held here in 1917-18 by Billy Sunday, the famous baseball evangelist. He has been highly honored not only by the local members of Christian lay organizations, but he has received signal honors from both state and national bodies.

Recently in Columbus, Ga., where a meeting of the National Association of Christian Laymen was held, Mr. Thrower was chosen to lead that body during the current year. This honor, it was stated, came as a recognition of the splendid service Mr. Thrower had done in connection with the work at home and in other states.

Mr. Thrower, aside from his well-known efforts connected with religious and civic work, is looked upon as one of the outstanding real estate and business men of Atlanta. He has been instrumental in securing the permits for the proposed extension of South Broad street through the four blocks that stand between it and the junction with Whitehall street at East Fair, Forsyth and Whitehall streets.

Mr. Thrower will be absent from his office only a few days, it was stated, having nothing to prevent his early return to Atlanta.

Co-operate With YOUR Furnace!

In selecting a ready-made home, or when planning the one of your dreams, remember that the efficiency of your heating plant is not half as important as the matter of what proportion of the heat you conserve.

During the summer, folks dress as lightly as possible to permit of a free circulation of air, to produce bodily comfort, and during the winter they thoroughly INSULATE themselves to conserve the body heat.

But a house once built has only one raiment for all seasons. In ordinary construction the summer heat penetrates inward through the walls and the roof, and likewise outward during the winter.

You can have a home insulated with CLIMAX BOARDS that will absolutely resist the passage of heat, cold, sound and moisture. You will save 25% to 50% on your annual fuel bill, and by the same token, assure a comfortable temperature within during the summer.

This unique combination product can be installed in your new home at no additional cost. And we gladly inform you fully, without any obligation whatsoever, if you will phone

AT FETTER

Statesboro, Ga., November 1.—R. H. Chance, a prominent citizen of Jenkins county, was yesterday afternoon convicted of manslaughter and sentenced to from one to two years in the penitentiary. Chance was charged with the killing of Watson Allen, Christmas day, 1920. This was the fifth time Chance had been tried; four times convicted and having one mistrial.

The trial has been a picturesque court case. Allen was killed following a neighborhood dispute over a private road. Allen had bought the place through a private road extended. At the end of this road was the rural free delivery mail box of the Chance family. Allen, it was contended, stopped the Chance family from crossing his road to reach their mail box.

On Christmas morning, the day of the slaying, Chance called on Allen. The meeting was brought abruptly to an end with a fusillade of shots and Watson Allen fell, mortally wounded. Chance, Gray Rowe and Sidney Rowe, neighbors of Chance, and Willie Lewis, related to Chance by marriage, were members of the party that went to see Allen. Gray Rowe was sentenced to eight years and Sidney Rowe six years and a plea of guilty; Willie Lewis received a sentence of two years.

Ringling's Circus This Year Gives Colorful Picture

BY RALPH T. JONES.

Ringling Brothers and Barnum & Bailey, that mammoth of all circus organizations, came to Atlanta yesterday, gave two performances and then, in the dark of the moon, folded their tents and slipped away to pastures new, leaving behind a picture of a half-dozen locomotives.

Of course, all know what the performance is, but what is new is the picture of a half-dozen locomotives. The circus is a picture of a half-dozen locomotives. The circus is a picture of a half-dozen locomotives.

And, behind it all, the tan haze of dust from the circus rings and the white glare of the arc light's flaring above it.

There are half a dozen performers whose names are known wherever the circus has gone. Lillian Lietzel, the greatest of all May Day equestrienne extraordinary; Bertie Beeton, who dances better on a thread of wire than on 99 per cent of a dance on a ballroom floor; there are hosts of other, more famous names in the circus world, but whose names are known only to the thousands who wander as they go.

There is a peculiar charm about any circus and this, of course, is accentuated with the biggest of them. That is the kaleidoscope of the constant succession of pictures that are the perfection of natural art as the human body is silhouetted against the background of night and haze. Then, superimposed on this, is the constant mental marvel of the equestrienne, the machine-like rhythm which fits every cog—human, animal and mechanical—into its exact groove, so that there is never an error, never a slip in the performance.

Color, rhythmic movement, perfect-movement performance. So big that one can see only a part of it, but beyond argument that part that this spectator saw last night was good.

RICHMOND VOTERS PASS BOND ISSUE FOR NEW SCHOOLS

Augusta, Ga., November 1.—(Special.)—Late returns tonight from all precincts in the county show that the Richmond county school bond issue will be carried by an overwhelming majority. The issue is for $350,000, supplemented by $100,000 by the board of education, which will be used towards building a new Richmond academy to replace the one now in use.

SPARTA BIBLE SCHOOL ATTRACTS STUDENTS

Sparta, Ga., November 1.—(Special.)—Much interest is being manifested in the Bible school, which was inaugurated a few weeks ago by Rev. Frank Morgan, pastor of the Presbyterian church here. Rev. Morgan is a son of Dr. Campbell Morgan, considered one of the world's best authorities on the Bible. The school will continue with weekly sessions throughout the winter.

STORE FIXTURES
NEW AND REBUILT

OUR new merchandise is made by the Atlanta Show Case Company. You are fully protected on each article by the factory guarantee. WE carry a complete line of fine slightly used fixtures, including show cases, wall cases and cabinets of all kinds. These are no the usual "second-hand" goods, but all are carefully inspected and chosen by Mr. Lennox, who has the reputation of selecting simple and tasty goods. These rebuilt fixtures are as good as, in fact, in many cases, better than a new article.

REGARDLESS of our many handicaps during the past 15 months at our old location, we now point with pardonable pride to our business as the largest of its kind in the South.

MR. MAURICE L. LENSON, at the head of this concern, wishes to express his deep gratitude to his many friends and clients for their past influence and patronage and assures them that he is now in a position to serve them in a bigger and better way.

500 ACRES 500

Sub-divided Into 5 to 75 Acre Tracts
Two Residences Four Tenant Houses
COOPER AND BENNETT PROPERTIES
ONLY 8 MILES FROM THE CITY
CAMPBELLTON ROAD, BEN HILL, GA.

Thursday, November 6th, at 10 A. M.

ON THURSDAY, November 6th, beginning at 10 o'clock, we are going to sell at absolute auction, the Cooper and Bennett Property at Ben Hill consisting of 500 acres of good land, two residences and four tenant houses. The property has been sub-divided and will be sold in tracts of five to seventy-five acres to the highest bidder.

LOCATION

THIS PROPERTY lies south of the Campbellton and Fairburn roads right at Ben Hill, Georgia, and the major part of it faces along concrete highways. Right in the midst of some of the best farms in Georgia, this property presents an opportunity to the prospective home-owner who wants a small tract for trucking, gardening, chicken raising, and the like. All parcels are well watered.

HOME SITE AND LAKE

ON TRACT to be offered is an ideal home site. Water from the springs on this tract has been analyzed and it is an excellent quality of mineral water. There is also a beautiful lake well stocked with game fish. This place could be converted into a veritable paradise with a small outlay of money.

ADVANTAGES

AT BEN HILL there is a community center of stores, an excellent school, and church. This is an opportunity for those who prefer suburban life. The property is only eight miles from the city and all roads are paved with concrete.

BARBECUE AND MUSIC

COME OUT and spend the day with us. We are going to have a brass band to entertain you and at 1 o'clock we are going to serve an old-fashioned barbecue absolutely free. Come out and be our guests.

TERMS

THE TERMS are one-third cash and the balance in one and two years, at the legal rate. Remember, you name the price and we deliver the property. Don't overlook this opportunity of securing a suburban place at your own price.

Thursday, November 6th, at 10 O'clock

BY ORDER OF THE COURT

500 ACRES 500

Sub-divided Into 5 to 75 Acre Tracts
Two Residences Four Tenant Houses
COOPER AND BENNETT PROPERTIES
ONLY 8 MILES FROM THE CITY
CAMPBELLTON ROAD, BEN HILL, GA.

Thursday, November 6th, at 10 A. M.

ON THURSDAY, November 6th, beginning at 10 o'clock, we are going to sell at absolute auction, the Cooper and Bennett Property at Ben Hill consisting of 500 acres of good land, two residences and four tenant houses. The property has been sub-divided and will be sold in tracts of five to seventy-five acres to the highest bidder.

LOCATION

THIS PROPERTY lies south of the Campbellton and Fairburn roads right at Ben Hill, Georgia, and the major part of it faces along concrete highways. Right in the midst of some of the best farms in Georgia, this property presents an opportunity to the prospective home-owner who wants a small tract for trucking, gardening, chicken raising, and the like. All parcels are well watered.

HOME SITE AND LAKE

ON TRACT to be offered is an ideal home site. Water from the springs on this tract has been analyzed and it is an excellent quality of mineral water. There is also a beautiful lake well stocked with game fish. This place could be converted into a veritable paradise with a small outlay of money.

ADVANTAGES

AT BEN HILL, there is a community center of stores, an excellent school, and church. This is an opportunity for those who prefer suburban life. The property is only eight miles from the city and all roads are paved with concrete.

BARBECUE AND MUSIC

COME OUT and spend the day with us. We are going to have a brass band to entertain you and at 1 o'clock we are going to serve an old-fashioned barbecue absolutely free. Come out and be our guests.

TERMS

THE TERMS are one-third cash and the balance in one and two years, at the legal rate. Remember, you name the price and we deliver the property. Don't overlook this opportunity of securing a suburban place at your own price.

Thursday, November 6th, at 10 O'clock

St. Augustine Apartments

787 Ponce de Leon Ave.
Just Completed

THIS very attractive, new building is located in the prettiest and most fashionable sections of Ponce de Leon Avenue, sitting on an elevated corner lot it will give its occupants an excellent view of its beautiful surroundings. It is of semi-fireproof construction, having hollow tile walls with an outside finish of stucco and big porches break the monotony of the usual straight walls. The inside finish is very pleasing, all the walls, except the kitchen, are papered and the woodwork is beautifully finished in cream. The building consists entirely of four-room units in an arrangement that has proven exceedingly popular with the small and medium size families. Murphy In-A-Door beds are standard equipment throughout. We would suggest today as an excellent time to look them over, and prices may be secured from our office.

Two Teams Sent In For Ga. Petrels Play Inspired Game Defeating Sewanee

Thrilling Moments in Oglethorpe's Win Over Sewanee

Kilgore Puts Over Only Marker

Doug Wycoff Big Star For Tech

BY MARCUS BRYANT.

Athens, Ga., November 1.—(Special.)—It was a great day and a great game on the part of the red-and-black-shirted Georgia Bulldogs here Saturday, when the throngs of visitors and alumni were present to celebrate homecoming, and to see the Bulldogs perform with such dazzling perfection as they rolled up a 33-0 victory over the Tennessee Volunteers.

Coach "Kid" Woodruff was not on the bench with the Georgia squad and did not see "his boys" perform. The Bulldog mentor was at the bedside of his brother, Harry Woodruff, of Columbus, who is in a critical condition following an automobile accident near Athens Friday night, when he was journeying to the lair of the Red and Black for the game today.

Those present at Sanford field Saturday saw for the first time in the history of the university an entirely new team substituted. Under Coaches Thomas and Mehr, Georgia started the game with what might be termed a second varsity and this team battled the Vols during the first quarter. When the whistle blew for the close of this period, the second stringers were replaced by eleven other stalwart grid sons of Georgia.

Great Class Displayed. The Bulldogs showed great class in every way Saturday and out-mustered the invaders at all stages of the battle. The Georgia machine reached its stride and pushed over touchdowns in every quarter of the game. In the final period the Bulldogs crossed the Vol chalked line on two occasions.

It was mighty pleasing to watch the Red and Black in action. The line held nicely, charged well, and allowed the visitors only "three first downs, while they were annexing a total of seventeen. Surpassing the work of the forward line was the galaxy of backs of the Athenians. Former grid stars of Georgia proclaimed the Bulldogs as unusually good.

Interference of the Bulldogs showed its peak on Sanford field this year, and to say it was beautiful would be putting it mildly. Georgia has gathered this season the largest array of gridfield material for the past few years, and one which stands out in the south. Sweeping runs were numerous and their attack was dreaded by the Tennesseans.

Hollis returned Campbell's punt late in the first period 23 yards, which placed the ball on the opponents' 43-yard line. This started the first Bulldog score. Hatcher made four yards at tackle and Morton hurried a pass to Hollis, which netted nine yards and first down. Two line backs by Holland carried the ball over and Hollis missed his attempt for the extra point.

Start Great Drive. Georgia started a determined drive for touchdown in the second quarter after Moore returned a punt to his own 45-yard line. Kilpatrick made five yards at tackle, but the play was called back and Georgia was penalized five yards. On the next play Kilpatrick went through his own left tackle for 22 yards. This play was followed by another run of 14 yards and three backs by Thompson carried the ball to the 15-yard line, where Sherlock went through a beautiful hole at left tackle for the score.

Moore dropped-kicked the goal. Line backs by Randall and Nelson and a forward pass from Moore to Nelson added the Georgians in their third six-point play. The ball on the invading 14-yard line, Nelson made a nice run of 13 yards before he was downed out of bounds and on the next play carried the pigskin over. Moore failed in his effort to kick goal.

Several gains by Sherlock and the line plunging of J. D. Thomson were instrumental in the fourth touchdown. The latter, on a cross-back, shot off his own right tackle for 11 yards and a touchdown. Hollis' attempt at goal was successful.

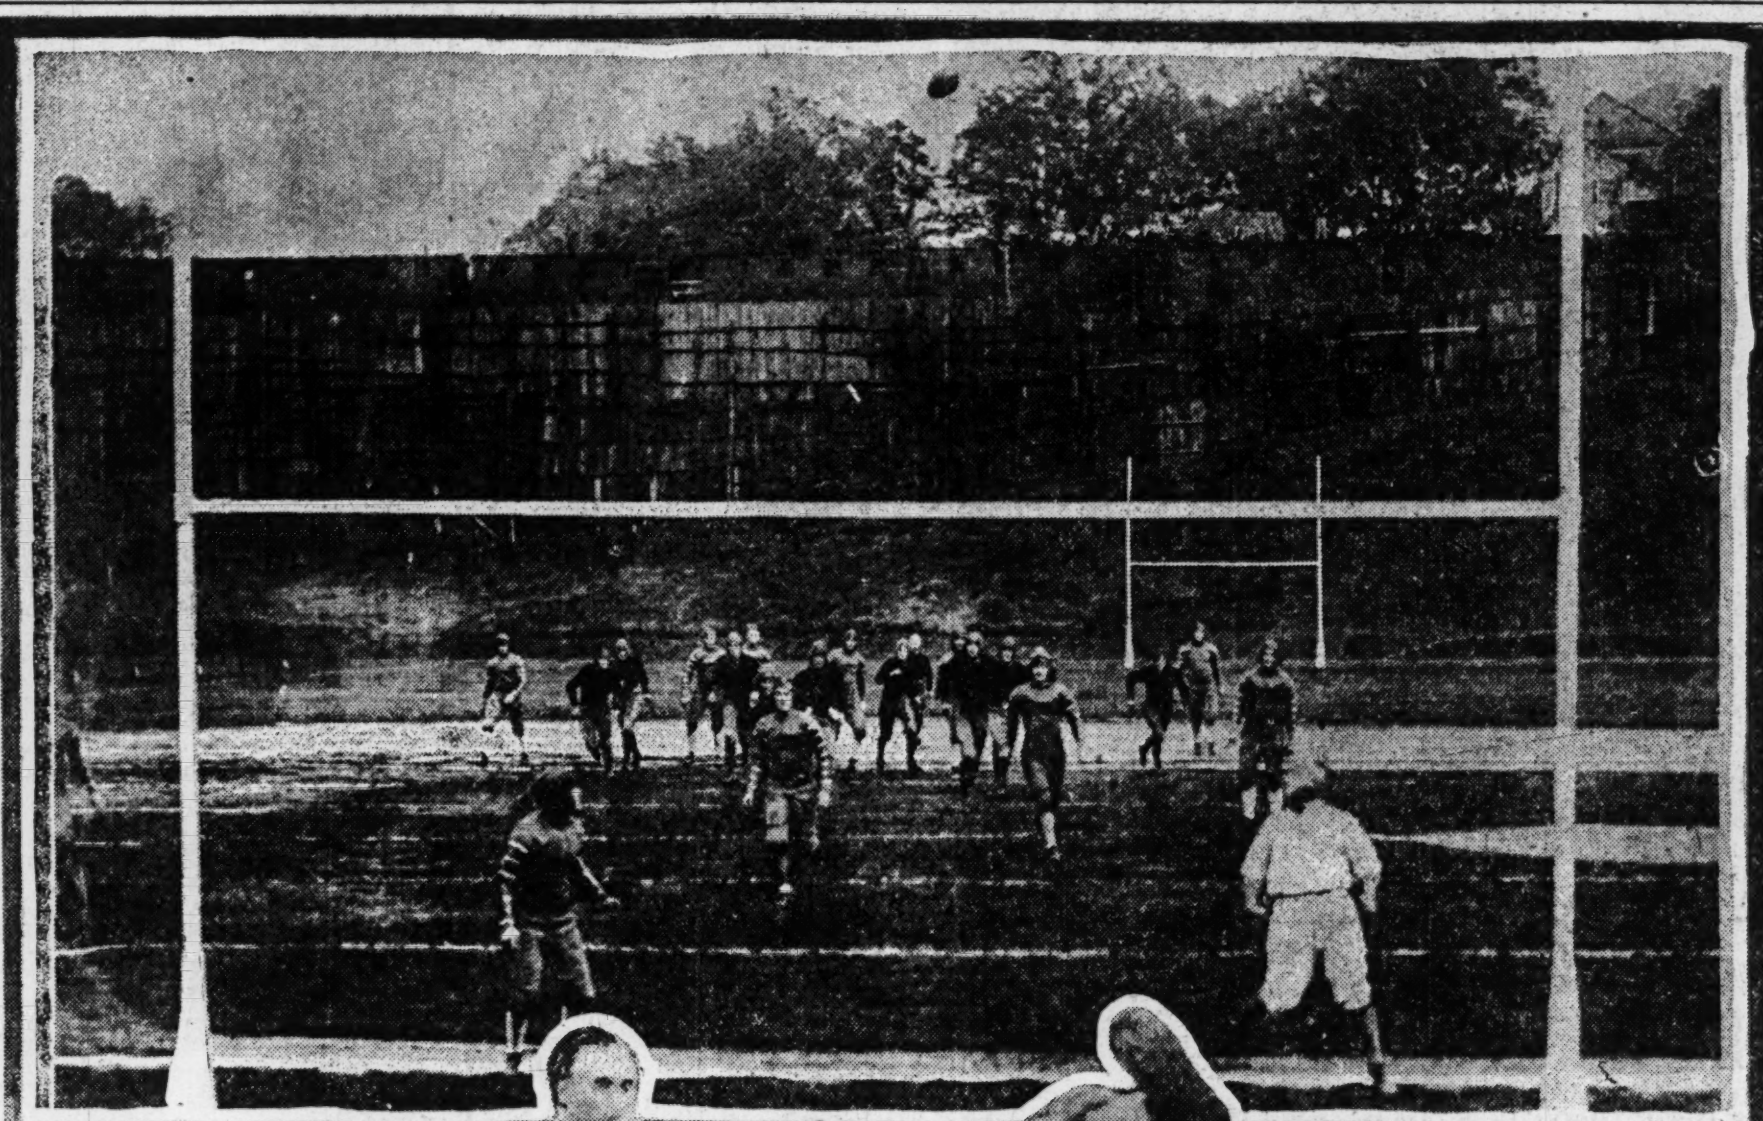

A run of 31 yards by Hollis after catching a punt placed the ball on the Vol 20-yard marker. "Wee Willie" Hatcher on the next play spiraled and twisted his way around his left tackle for the fifth Bulldog touchdown, and Hollis kicked goal. Stars for the Bulldogs were numerous and every player deserves credit. Jim Taylor played his last game on Sanford field.

HASKELL BOWS TO BOSTON

Boston, November 1.—(Special.)—The football mantle of Carlisle of old, the Haskell Redskins from Kansas filed into the east today—and bit the dust in glorious defeat.

They succumbed to the scrapping Dartmouth college team by a score of 34 to 7.

ALLIGATORS EASILY BEAT SOUTHERN

Gainesville, Fla., November 1.—Southern college from Lakeland, showed surprising strength and fight here this afternoon, holding the University of Florida to a 20-0 score. The "Fighting Gators" counted three touchdowns in the first half but were outplayed during the second half and while they held the Methodists scoreless, their exhibition was ragged.

Two thousand fans saw the listless battle which found the Gators forced to use many reserves, the squad being badly crippled.

After Pittman had crashed the Southern line for a 25-yard gain, Murphy tossed to Brown for 20 yards and touchdown. The second and third touchdowns were scored by Florida in the second period. Long gains on off-tackle plays by Chaplin and Brown enabled the latter to count, while the third touchdown was registered on a long 35-yard pass, Jones to Murphy, the latter running ten yards to goal.

Brown's broken field run of 48 yards turned in Florida's fourth tally. Southern uncovered a brilliant aerial attack in the latter half and swept down the field but were unable to cross the Florida line.

DARTMOUTH BEATS BROWN

Hanover, N. H., November 1.—Dartmouth's varsity football eleven, with the same power that tied Yale and defeated Harvard, disposed of another threat today in winning from Brown, 14 to 3.

The Green team outplayed the visitors in all but the last period, when Brown several times threatened the Dartmouth goal line.

LANIER HIGH IS DEFEATED

Savannah, Ga., November 1.—(Special.)—In a hotly contested game on the local gridiron, Fairview park, Savannah High school's eleven defeated Lanier High team from Macon, this afternoon, the final score being 14 to 0.

The top picture shows Nutty Campbell, scrappy little Petrel quarter, attempting to drop-kick a field goal from Sewanee's 40-yard line in the first quarter of their encounter at Poncy Saturday, which the Petrels won, 7 to 0. The bottom picture shows Harris, Tiger quarter, diving over the line, only to be blocked by one of his teammates.

Haughton System, Minus NITTANY LIONS BEAT MIDDIES 6 TO 0

Ithaca, N. Y., November 1.—Fourteen thousand Cornell rooters screamed encouragement to the Red team. A thousand Columbia men and women looked on incredulously while they called for a rally for the sake of Haughton.

The Cornell tackles and ends covered Koppisch and Pease, the New Yorkers' two backfield threats. At no time did either seriously threaten the Cornell goal line. Even the dazzling Columbia aerial attack loosed in the fourth quarter did no more than throw a momentary scare into the Cornell camp.

Columbia's best chance to score came at the very opening of the game, when the New York eleven forced Cornell down to their goal and closed in sharply on Whetstone as he kicked to safety from behind his goal posts.

Wind Favorable. Columbia with wind behind her back forced the fighting in the first quarter. Then came the break. Evans and Affeld of Cornell recovered Pease's fumble of a punt as the second period got under way. Immediately Whetstone called on Molinet, who three times pierced the Columbia line. The last effort scored a touchdown.

Whetstone Scores. After the midline intermission, Pease attempted a forward pass. Isaly and again Molinet plunged with the ball to the goal posts. Whetstone called himself through the line and scored.

WHITE STARS AS V. M. I. WINS

Lexington, Va., November 1.—(Special.)—V. M. I. was victorious in its game with Hampden-Sidney on Alumni field by a score of 25-0. White, of the Flying Squadron, broke through the line for a 50-yard run and touchdown.

In the first few minutes of play three line plays, gaining 18 yards, were followed by Caldwell's plunge through right tackle for seven yards and the second touchdown. V. M. I. was twice penalized for holding in the second quarter. The cadets worked the ball up the field by means of passes, runs and line hucks.

The last touchdown was made by a 32-yard pass, White to Barkley. The formidable playing of the Tigers prevented any scoring in the left half. Starting for Hampden-Sidney were Brinser, Adkins, Tavson, Saeger and Jones. For V. M. I., White, Harrelling, Caldwell, Clements, Yates and Barkley.

S. C. DEFEATS N. C. ELEVEN

Chapel Hill, November 1.—(Special.)—The University of South Carolina mixed forward passes and end runs with amazing skill here today and defeated North Carolina, 16 to 7.

North Carolina made seven first downs compared to four for the visitors; each team lost only 15 yards through penalties. The Tar Heels attempted eleven forward passes and completed their first two this season. The Gamecock attempted five and completed two. South Carolina's passes netted 55 yards, compared with 12 for the Tar Heels.

Cuban, Whetstone changed tactics and carrying the ball himself cut through the right side of the New York line for Cornell's second touchdown.

Captain Koppisch and his Columbia charges fought desperately in the closing quarter to save the spirit of Haughton from the sting of defeat.

Kilgore Puts Over Only Marker

BY BILL MORROW.

An inspired band of Oglethorpe gridgers, bloody and exhausted, fought and out-scored Sewanee's powerful eleven yesterday afternoon at Ponce de Leon park, the Petrels upsetting the dope as they rolled up their greatest victory of their gridiron history by a 7-0 score. Doped to lose by from two to four touchdowns, a rejuvenated Oglethorpe line met a smashing attack from a ferocious quarter of Tiger backs and, though battered and scared, stopped the Sewanee offense cold.

The laurels of the afternoon go, not to a side-stepping, twisting back, first to two lines that grappled through 90 minutes of play, neither asking nor giving ground. Sewanee with her backfield of fast-stepping stars, Oglethorpe with her illustrious Maurer were unable to penetrate each other's defense consistently as the rival forces battled for supremacy.

The Oglethorpe touchdown, the winning counter of a hectic battle, came in the first quarter after Oglethorpe had won the toss and elected to kick. Parshis booted the pigskin 30 yards to Boston, who fumbled but recovered. Two attempts failed to advance the oval and Mahoney muffed ten yards, out of bounds. The Petrel backs also found the going rough and after attempting to pierce the Sewanee defense, little "Nuttie" Campbell attempted a drop-kick from Sewanee's 40-yard line. The try was short and Oglethorpe grounded the ball on Sewanee's 1-yard line. Mahoney, kicking from behind his own goal line, lifted the pigskin to Oglethorpe's 45-yard line.

Offenses Fail. The Petrel offense failed to advance the pigskin the required distance, Oglethorpe getting control of the oval again a minute later when the Sewanee backs were also lacking in this department. The Oglethorpe backs were unable to advance the oval and Mahoney muffed ten yards, out of bounds. The Petrel backs also found the going rough and after attempting to pierce the Sewanee defense, little "Nuttie" Campbell attempted a drop-kick from Sewanee's 40-yard line. The try was short and Oglethorpe grounded the ball on Sewanee's 1-yard line. Mahoney, kicking from behind his own goal line, lifted the pigskin to Oglethorpe's 45-yard line.

Game Ends on 1-Yard Line. Two yards from the Notre Dame goal line, three husky Irishmen swung into Wycoff and, according to the referee, the ball was grounded on the 1-yard line. That was good enough with time to buck the ball over, but just as the Tech men huddled for orders the whistle ended the fray.

It was the kind of whitewash flash that betrays a great game. Although Tech lost, the sight of Oglethorpe's men as they charged down the field, cutting through her attack and straight-arming there and ways refusing to be downed until progress was absolutely blocked, was inspirational.

Coach Rockne used between thirty-five and forty men in directing the attack against the Tornado. The second and third quarters played most of the game, the noted combination of three of "The Four Horsemen" going into the fray only in the second quarter.

At only one time did Tech have the edge on the Rock men, and for a quarter the Jackets held. After scoring their first goal the Jackets were like a stone wall and Tech's attack for the rest of the period, and when the quarter ended Tech was leading by a score of 3 to 0. It was Tech's day until the second quarter.

Just before the end of the first quarter, Captain Adam Walsh with two broken hands, sent a punt to replace Maxwell, who started. When the second quarter started, the signal was given for the "Horsemen" to take the field. Don Miller, who was left, at half positions were the great Don Miller and Crowley and "Red" Edwards took over the generalship of the team, relieving Scherer.

"Horsemen" Enter Fray. Sixty-six yards from the Jacket goal line, the first great offensive of the Rockne boys started after taking the ball on the first play, cut out around left end for 32 yards. Crowley cut through right tackle for 15 yards and then a second time for four yards more. Crowley went out of bounds on Tech's 12-yard line. Miller followed with a five-yard gain for the first down and then a later two yards nearer the Jacket goal line over center.

For a moment the Jackets were invincible. Wycoff, sent the match of the great Miller, cut the first Irish halfback down for a one-yard loss and Crowley was thrown for a two-yard loss. It was the only halt in the march down field and then a later forward pass, Crowley to Miller, sent the ball over the Tech goal line.

When Crowley booted the ball over the goal line, the Irish crew had the touchdown. The speed of the play in that game today is largely indicated by the number of first downs made. There were 27, 19 which went on the Notre Dame side of the summary. Tech made the other eight by some of the best offensive work the Jackets have shown this season. Wycoff easily out-punted the booters of Blue and Gold, by averaging 45 yards to his opponents' 35 yards.

The battle field, a moment later, the stands on all four sides of Cartier field. From almost every state in the union, old grads were back on the Notre Dame campus for their homecoming celebration. It was a crowd of a color equal to that of the Tech-Auburn Thanksgiving crowds in Atlanta. There were the fairest and best natured crowd we have ever seen at a 1-2, intersectional football game. The cheering for Tech only once was as loud and lasted as long as that for Don Miller's first touchdown. Notre Dame people were a particular liking for Tech people, even when Tech people are ahead in the game of football.

Tech Tackling Weak. Tech's most apparent weakness in this game in which the Jackets were vited against the conquerors of the Army and Princeton, was in the defense of the "Horsemen" as they tore loose from Yellow Jackets to count off another five yards. At any rate, not one man of Notre Dame's frequently-varied backfield was downed until he was stretched out flat on the turf from head to foot.

Doug Wycoff Big Star For Tech

BY GEORGE CONGDON.

(Sporting Editor, Constitution.) South Bend, Ind., November 1.—(Special.)—A driving, tearing machine with the speed of lightning and the ramming power of a locomotive, sent Georgia Tech's Golden Tornado to a 34-0 defeat on Cartier field here this afternoon. It wasn't a stinging defeat. It wasn't a defeat that would take the heart out of a man for the luck that was in it. There wasn't any luck. And there wasn't a smidgen of dark tactics. Tech simply was beaten by the Notre Dame "wonder team" of great Knute Rockne, and fell gloriously.

The Yellow Jackets started with a drive that was successfully concluded when Ivan Williams drop-kicked goal from the Irish 25-yard line early in the first quarter. When the final whistle blew the Alexander team was huddling to buck the pigskin over the Notre Dame goal from the Irish one-yard line. It was a grim fight that the Jackets staged from the first whistle to the last. The finish of the game was one of the most spectacular we have ever witnessed, although at best it could have meant only an increase of six or seven points in the Tech score, and it would have taken 30 for the Jackets to have tied the count of points.

Reese, quarterback, punted the ball from the vicinity of the Notre Dame goal line and Barron, received on Notre Dame's 35-yard line. Barron fumbled and for a moment it seemed that the Rock men bearing down the field at break-neck speed would recover, but, racing from behind Barron, Douglas Wycoff, the greatest fullback Tech ever had, snatched the ball, struck out toward the left boundary line and held a foot over the Irish goal line.

BRAY OF ARMY MY MULE EQUALS BARK OF BULL G

Yale Takes Advantage Of Breaks To Hold Own After Being Outplayed

Mississippi Aggies Spill Tulane Chances

Captains of Five Varsity Teams at Georgia Tech

Greenbacks Are Beaten 14-6

New Haven, Conn., November 1.—The Army bray and the Eli back proved of equal strength today when the football eleven of Yale and West Point met in their 24th annual contest at the Yale Bowl, the game resulting in an incisive 7-7 tie. Eighty thousand persons saw the game.

Outplayed by the powerful toe of Eli Wood and outgassed at times by the Army generals, Yale managed to keep the final score even by taking advantage of every break and by closely following the ball, frequently losing it to the Army players.

The Yale touchdown was made by "Ducky" Pond after a sensational 45-yard run in the first quarter through the entire Army team. At no other time in the game did the Yale threaten the Army line except through the air.

Lack Final Drive.

On the other hand, the Army was almost constantly menacing the Yale goal line only to find itself blocked by a stubborn defense or handicapped by poor handling of every break.

It was not until the final quarter that the Army cashed in on its strength and by sheer power of attack battered its way to and across the Yale goal line. It was the even-advancing form of its blonde halfback, Harry Wilson, which gave the Army its touchdown, after which Captain Garbisch booted the goal for the extra point, tying the score.

Yale tried desperately in the final quarter to break the deadlock but its efforts were futile. Twice a Yale place kick loosed its way toward the Army goal posts but failed to register a count.

The Army backfield, as a unit, proved far more formidable than the Eli backfield, Gilmore, Wood, Wilson and Yocumans, piercing the Yale line almost at will except when the Bulldog was backed up to its own goal line.

Honor Haughton.

Tribute was paid to the late Percy D. Haughton between the halves when an Army bugler sounded taps while the 80,000 spectators stood with hats doffed. The ceremony terminated when the Yale band played "Auld Lang Syne."

Captain Garbisch, of the Army, was slightly injured just before the game ended and was taken out.

JACKETS LOSE TO NOTRE DAME

A sensation everywhere and the crowds of South Bend today hold a deep respect and admiration for him. He was the one man on the Tech squad who did not show this inclination to give. As a result he was the one man who was sudden death to a Notre Dame runner every time he snatched his only against them.

The interference that carried those Notre Dame runs for the field for 5, 10, 15 and 20 yards at a time was a revelation. It was magnificent. No one could watch those racing gridiron races, every one a man, without admiration and an involuntary word for the mind of Rockne, the peerless mentor who drilled them into the outstanding team of the United States today.

"Horsemen" Shine.

The glimpse that Rockne gave the homecoming crowd of Don Miller, Crowley, Elmer Layden, the three who ran the Notre Dame team, and their fourth comrade, Harry Stuhldreher, was like a peek at the work of the perfect backfield. And the work of Captain Layden, who was the only one of the Irish who added the finishing touch to the picture the blue-jerseyed Irish made.

Keeping up the pace with the strategy of Coach Rockne in constantly freshening his line-up Coach Alexander made frequent substitutions. When the game started, Coach Alexander had five different backs working from that he started. Hut-fines, Irvine, Kline and Glenn were in the line when Uary, Marshall, Nabelle and Pool started.

In the backfield Coach Alexander used Wilton, Wycoff, Williams, Barron, Sam Murray, Parrish, Farnsworth and Conner in different combinations. But where Coach Alexander could make only this many substitutions, Coach Rockne was sending substitutions into the game. A list of substitutions read like the matriculation roll of the university.

The second team that Rockne started wasn't the same. When the Jackets for scoring purposes and Wycoff and Williams were effective against it for some of the best runs they have made since when the last half of the game was in session and things popping at full tilt, Williams and Wycoff were still battering their way through the Irish line. Five, ten and fifteen yards of interference was better in this game than it has been in previous games, and the clash with the greatest team in the country this year, showed what can be accomplished when the gaining ability of Wycoff and Williams is seasoned with just a little interference.

Intercept Passes.

Twice the Irish intercepted passes from Wycoff. The first was a ball down almost out of the hands of Marshall. The other pass that was intercepted was taken by Rigeli, playing end for Notre Dame. Tech showed defensive possibilities stronger, probably, except for the actual tackling, than it has shown in any other game this season. Larry, Captain George Gardner, Wilton, Wycoff, Williams and Nabelle were tearing through the line of scrimmage beautifully, but were stopped by the interference of the fleet "Horsemen" or they flew into the runners and were thrown on their backs.

Notre Dame scored 21 of its 34 points in the second quarter when the "Horsemen" were running wild over the Tech men. The "Horsemen," however, did not lead in the point scoring for the second time the majority of touchdowns. Notre Dame also was held scoreless in the third period, as in the first, but came back in the final quarter for 13 points. It was on the final touchdown that the Irish boys to add the extra point. The boys who made most of Notre Dame's touchdowns were Miller and Crowley and Layden. Outstanding among these were Roach, Livergood, Connelley and Houser.

At the start of the game Connelley received O'Boyle's kick-off on Tech's 35-yard line and cut through a mass of Notre Dame men for an advance of 20 yards. It was from Tech's 30-yard line that Wycoff lighted on that great sprint down the field, dodging, careening, wheeling and throwing off one or two ambitious Irishmen who broke through the interference. Roach Irish quarterback, stopped Wycoff on the next play, but the fullback came back for four-yard gain a moment later. Connelley made another three yards at left tackle and Wycoff came through with a yard through the line. From the 25-yard line Williams attempted his placement kick and the pigskin sailed between the goal posts for those three points.

Notre Dame started down the field for the second touchdown after the Irish got the pigskin on their 43-yard line from Wycoff's punt. Don Miller started the advance by whipping off around left end for 18 yards. Crowley followed by cutting down the distance to goal by 15 yards through left tackle. Layden totaled seven yards on two backs through the line and the ball was on Tech's 10-yard line. After a yard gain by Don Miller, Layden carried the ball on an off tackle play to Tech's three-yard line. Crowley advanced two yards, and right guard and Layden bucked through center for the touchdown. Crowley kicked the goal for point after touchdown.

"Horsemen" Go Out.

Shortly after this, Herndon went in for Miller and Roach, a young man who played on last year's third team, made his first game this year by going in for Crowley. Livergood replaced Layden before this switch in the halfbacks was made.

It was with this new backfield combination that the Irish pushed over their third touchdown of the game. A 35-yard run around right end by Roach started the Irish on their march to this six-point counter.

Roach's beautiful run around right end and he was sent in to carry it over the line on buck through right guard. Roach substituted quarterback, kicked goal.

It was the spectacular work of Livergood, substitute fullback, that brought Notre Dame its first fourth quarter touchdown. Livergood, with the ball over center, through tackle and around the ends and never once failed to gain some yardage. Generally, he got through from five to 10 yards. The touchdown finally was accomplished on a pass from Tech's 10-yard line. The whole line was well over to the right of the goal posts and far over on the left were Scherer and Roach, with a clear field. Scherer shot the pigskin to Roach, who was on the five-yard line. He was over the line and the ball was in the air. Roach kicked goal and the score was 28 to 3 in favor of the Irish.

Final Score.

Intercepting a pass from Wycoff, Rigeli, Notre Dame end, started the advance to the final score of the game. Rigeli sprinted from Tech's 30-yard line across two bars to the 20-yard line, where he was intercepted by Wycoff. Wycoff, who followed by a 35-yard punt by Reese. Kerry Miller went five yards around left end. Livergood hit right tackle for five yards. Reese went five yards through left guard and Livergood was sent in to carry the ball over. He only made three yards on this play, but a touchdown. Reese tried to drop-kick goal, but failed, and the final score was marked up, 34 to 3.

Just after this touchdown was when Wycoff, Notre Dame side of middle, snatched up the ball after Barron's fumble, and raced down the field and across the goal line, to pull back to the one-yard line by the referee. On that final play Wycoff had an interference that outshone anything Tech has shown in this game. He was stopped by the interference of the fleet "Horsemen" or they flew into the runners and were thrown on their backs.

McTigue Afraid to Meet Real Contenders for Title

BY ROBERT EDGREN.

Mike McTigue continues to travel a rocky road. The light heavyweight champion has been barred for one year by the New York State commission because of a fight with a boxer named Gene Tunney. McTigue is a middleweight pure and simple and hanging on to the light heavyweight crown required some fast work. Tunney and other heavier challengers.

McTigue won the title from Battling Siki when the Senegalese was just about through. Returning home Mike was bombarded with challenges. Bill Gibson, acting for Tunney, sent the new champion a challenge in every mail. Mike should have been doing to take chances, but instead he went out in the country and boxed with set-ups.

McTigue finally agreed to a match with Paul Berlebach, but the latter didn't fancy Gibson's terms for Tunney in the event he won from McTigue. This jockeyed off Mike back to the starting point—Gene Tunney. As McTigue continued to back down on this arrangement the New York State commission decided to withhold a license for one year and now the light heavyweight champion finds himself in a deeper hole than ever.

While Mike is in wrong for twelve months in the Empire State, the ban will likely be lifted if he will change his mind and agree to take on Tunney.

Should Defend Title.

A boxer willing to fight for a title should be equally willing to defend it. There's entirely too much safety-first matchmaking on the part of champions who appear satisfied to go against a man who is not a contender. Money without endangering their titles.

In McTigue's case the penalty seems rather drastic, but the action should serve as a warning to certain champions to end their vacations and get busy with the defense of their titles.

Lots of good fighters started with a hankering for the fast and clever stuff, and it may be a good foundation for a fighting career. But it doesn't win championships. Benny Leonard was known as the "feather duster boxer" in the first year or two at the old Fairmount club. Then Billy Gibson took Benny aside one afternoon and said: "Benny, you can be a champion if you learn how to punch. I want you to work with the idea of punching hard and forget everything else."

Leonard was smart enough to see the point. He began developing a knack of putting in hard blows. A few weeks later he met Joe Mandot, of New Orleans, one of the best light-

RIDING SCHOOL FLASHY STARS SUBSTITUTED FOR TEAMWORK--CAMP WILL STAGE FOX HUNT

AN event of unusual interest in the form of a fox hunt will be staged on Thanksgiving morning by the Ponce de Leon Riding Academy. It is planned to start the hunt from the academy's stables on Ponce de Leon avenue, through Piedmont Park and the wooded sections beyond.

Good trained horses are available at the academy's stables for a limited number and those desiring to go are requested to make early reservations by calling Henlock 3290. Prizes are to be awarded to the best riders. Those owning mounts are invited to meet at the stables and participate, there being no charge where riders furnish their own mount. Those owning dogs are also requested to get in touch with either Mr. Hikes at the L. F. M. store or Mr. Kirkland at the academy. It is also planned to stage from time to time paper chases and other mounted events which will prove interesting to lovers of this kind of sport.

Hunting men are now held by clubs in many parts of the country. Men and women are taking to this sport with an enthusiasm that presages well for the future. Even in sections where dog hunts only are possible, as in Atlanta, the popularity of hunting is on the increase for there is a thrill in this kind of sport.

Demanded in East.

Immediately Benny Leonard was in demand all through the eastern states. He began winning fights with knockouts. Among the good lightweights who were fanned to sleep by Benny's pole were Joe Welsh, Phil Bloom, Jimmy Murphy, Shamus O'Brien, Eddie Andrews, Ever Hammer, Harvey Thorpe, Paakey Hommer, Ritchie Mitchell, Charlie Thomas and Eddie Shannon—all well known in their day, some of whom hadn't been knocked out before.

Ever Hammer and Ritchie Mitchell especially were supposed to be headed toward the lightweight title. Then Leonard got his big chance in a third round falling, which was a thoughtless thing to do and showed that Benny's bean is working all the time.

"I was afraid that if I let him drop," said Benny, "so I kept knocking him against the ropes to keep him from falling, which was a thoughtless thing to do and showed that Benny's bean is working all the time."

Sammy Mandell, who is to box Jack Bernstein in New York, November 8, is one of the cleverest lightweights in the country. Mandell began boxing professionally when he finished high school at Rockford, Ill., where he was captain of the basketball team and a famous football and baseball player. He is a keen, intelligent boxer, with plenty of class, and should go well in New York. Sammy has just been boxing in California, where he beat Adams, the coach lightweight champion, in a four-round decision. Adams lost a decision to Phil Salazar, who is fighting like a streak when the mood is on him.

CUMBERLAND BEATS MAROON TORNADO

Milligan College, Tenn., November 1.—(Special.)—Cumberland University's famous Maroon tornado raised little more fuss than a strong wind her today, when the Maroon Tornado defeated Robert Kinsey, 7-5, 6-1, 6-1, while Howard Kinsey eliminated Ray Casey, singles champion of California, 3-6, 6-4, 2-6, 6-3.

The Kinsey-Casey match was given the greatest thrill of the tournament, Kinsey having to extend himself to the utmost to return the lightning serves of his opponent.

Richards and Howard Kinsey are to meet Monday for the singles championship of Mexico, which Richards won last year.

Greenbacks Are Beaten 14-6

New Orleans, November 1.—The Mississippi Aggies spilled Tulane's chances for southern conference football honors this season when they ran roughshod over the Greenbacks today and sent them play a score of 14 to 6.

The Aggies showed a set of forwards through which Lautenschlager, Brown and Flourney, Tulane's big three, found it next to impossible to gain. And befuddled by a queer little twist fake pass play which Captain "Speck" Young worked repeatedly, Tulane's line became so ragged that Meeks, Stephens and Clark ripped through for gain after gain.

Brown could get away successfully only once and on the play made a 42-yard run which finally resulted in Tulane's only touchdown. Lautenschlager missed a drop kick for goal.

The Aggies' first touchdown resulted from brilliant gains by Meeks, Clark, Young and Clay Hopper, Meeks finally carrying the ball over Stone place kicked goal. The second touchdown made by the visitors came through an intercepted pass on Tulane's 10-yard line. Meeks finally plunging over. Stone again kicked goal.

HORSES TO PAY 1925 PARTY CALLS

Chicago, November 1.—A plan for selection of three American horses to be sent abroad next fall, reciprocating the visits of Papyrus, and Epinaud, was submitted today to August Belmont, Jr., New York chairman of the Jockey club, by Joseph A. Murphy, manager of the Chicago Business Men's Racing association.

Under the plan, three horses would be held at Belmont Park, Latonia and Hawthorne and the winners sent abroad in the early fall to see the best in England and France. The races, at weight for age, are suggested as three-fourths of a mile at Belmont, a mile at Latonia and a mile and one-quarter at Hawthorne. In July, each racing association would add $27,000 to the purses, of which $2,500 would be placed in Mr. Belmont's hands to be held to defray the cost of the trip abroad.

In each race the winner would be credited with five points, second with three and third with two, and the three horses with the highest number of points would represent the American turf abroad.

If this plan is not met the approval of the Jockey club, the Chicago association is ready to accept any other arrangement suitable to Mr. Belmont.

CLEMSON BOWS BEFORE V. P. I. ATTACK

Clemson College, S. C., November 1.—Clemson College's Tigers were "meared all over the face of the earth on Riggs field here today by the Cobblers of Virginia Polytechnic Institute, who piled up a score of 50 to 0. Clemson's last touchdown came in the first period. Last year, V. P. I. defeated Clemson, 25 to 5.

CEDARTOWN HIGH BEATS LAFAYETTE

Cedartown, Ga., October 31.—(Special.)—Cedartown defeated Lafayette 6 to 0 here today in one of the greatest football games ever seen between two high-school teams. Lafayette came down apparently confident to win, bringing a big bunch of rosters.

Cedartown scored in the second half when Mudd crossed the goal line on a pass. Lafayette crossed Cedartown's goal, but was penalized when an over-enthusiastic Lafayette rooster ran into the play. Lafayette tried twice for field goals without success. The ball was in Cedartown territory more than in Lafayette's, however, and the local boys deserve all praise. To name individual playing would necessitate naming the whole team. McConnell and Spencer probably played the best ball for the visitors.

Team must have, as a whole, if it is going to be a safe proposition back to the field. And to this failure to work out the coordination of team organization the writer is inclined to attribute the epidemic of fumbling, which has already made many a coach sleepless at night. Joeie at Cornell and Roper at Princeton both sat on the side lines a week ago and saw their promising backs tumble the ball as though it were a hot potato, and promising chances disappear at critical moments.

Nor was it confined to those two coaches alone, for all over the field there was similar fumbling. There is a first-rate team in the country that has not material of high calibre when it comes to fumbling, and this is hardly a commendable condition, as evidenced by the absolute fundamentals that a

CANDLER SUES U. S. FOR EXCESS TAXES

An effort to recover money alleged to have been paid in excess income taxes for the year 1917 was started in United States district court Saturday by Asa G. Candler, Sr., who set forth in two suits he filed that a total of $358,302.15, collected from him during that year, was excessive. He petitioned the court to order refunds ranging from $11,006.77 to $287,092.24. The suits were filed against J. T. Rose, collector of internal revenue for Georgia, and A. O. Black, former collector.

The suits set forth that Mr. Candler was notified on February 9, 1921, that an additional tax of $374,029.91 was due on account of the allocation of certain dividends received by him from the Coca-Cola company had the Central Bank and Trust company. A portion of the sum demanded was paid, but the suit was set forth, and a claim was filed for a refund of the difference between the sum paid and the amount demanded.

Big Claim Registered.
On October 27, 1921, Mr. Candler was notified that abatement in the sum of $19,647.75 had been allowed, but that his plea for abatement of $211,251.37 had been rejected. He again filed a plea for abatement when, on October 20, 1921, he received a demand for the sum of $211,251.37, plus interest of $12,000.00.

On March 21, 1922, he received a demand for payment of the $211,251.37, plus accumulated interest of $39,240.58. On March 24, 1923, Mr. Candler was apprised that the tax already assessed for 1917 had been increased by $89,005.52. He protested and this last figure was reduced to $48,007.15.

Collector Rose again demanded payment on January 11, 1924, of the $211,251.37, plus interest of $34,801.43. Ten days later, Mr. Candler, "under protest and duress," paid both sums and the additional sum of $48,007.15, the amount of the last assessment of the suit set forth.

Refund Claims Filed.
At the time of the payments, the suit declares, Mr. Candler also filed two claims for refund, one for $245,142 and the other for $192,400.84. On August 27, he received notice from the department of internal revenue that a re-audit of his tax showed an "over-assessment" of $6,457.71.

The suits also recite the action of the board of directors of the Coca-Cola company of Georgia in voting the distributing $3,000 dividends on each share of stock in 1917. It was set forth in the petition that Mr. Candler owned 301 of the 500 shares of Coca-Cola common stock, and that in the distribution of the $3,000 dividends he received $1,173.000.

Both suits are identical, except for the amounts of the judgments sought and the number of counts.

TYPOGRAPHICAL HEAD HONORS ROBERT GANN

Robert E. Gann, prominent in the labor affairs of Georgia, and member of the Atlanta Typographical union, has been appointed representative for this section by James M. Lynch, new president of the International Typographical union, according to word received from Indianapolis, where the new officers of the union were installed Saturday.

Mr. Gann for a long time has played a prominent part in the affairs of the Georgia Federation of Labor and has held practically all offices of importance in the Atlanta Typographical union. He has been elected a delegate to represent the Atlanta Federation of Trades at the American Federation of Labor convention, which will be held in El Paso, Texas, beginning November 17. Mr. Gann is a member of the Linotype force of The Constitution.

J. M. LYNCH SWORN IN AS NEW TYPE CHIEF.
Indianapolis, November 1.—James M. Lynch, of Syracuse, N. Y., new president of the International Typographical union, was sworn in as chief of the union at headquarters of the union here today.

The oath of office was administered by Charles P. Howard, retiring president, in the presence of about 200 spectators, most of them members of the union. Tonight a banquet will be given here by the Indianapolis local in honor of the new officers. More than 350 printers from the larger cities of the United States and Canada will be present.

In addition to President Lynch, officers installed were:
Seth R. Brown, Los Angeles, Cal., first vice president; John W. Hays, Minneapolis, secretary-treasurer; Austin Hewson, New York, second vice president; Charles N. Smith, of Brooklyn, N. Y., head of the mailers' union, and third vice president of the typographical union, and Hugo Miller, Indianapolis, Ind., head of the German typographical and member of the typographical union executive board.

Mr. Lynch served as president of the union from 1900 to 1914, when he resigned to become state labor commissioner of New York. Mr. Hays has been an official of the union for more than a quarter of a century.

Reconstruction work required as a result of the recently ended strike for the 44-hour week in commercial printing shops will be the first undertaking of the new executive council, Mr. Lynch said.

Development of the apprentice educational department and a publicity campaign to exploit the social and humanitarian work of the union will also receive early consideration.

Appointments of representatives were announced as follows:
William Armstrong, Vancouver, B. C.; Harry P. Beekshire, Kansas City, Mo.; George W. Clifton, Baltimore, Md.; Fred N. Cornell, Brooklyn, N. Y.; Thomas J. Costello, Syracuse, N. Y.; Robert E. Gann, Atlanta, Ga.; William J. Gibbons, St. Louis, Mo.; Max S. Hayes, Cleveland, Ohio; A. C. Jackson, Oklahoma City, Okla.; Philip Johnson, San Francisco, Cal.; James T. Lovingsgood, Birmingham, Ala.; John G. McGowan, New Haven, Conn.; Ralph M. Moore, Decatur, Ill.; Raymond T. Moore, Milwaukee, Wis.; Harry W. Parker, Denver, Colo.; John L. Pendergast, Detroit, Mich.; Charles Scott, Los Angeles, Cal.; C. O. Scofield, St. Paul, Minn.; Fred A. Spaul, Minn.; Alfred E. Thompson, Port Credit, Ont.; Charles W. Tilden, Portland, Ore.; and William Young, Philadelphia, Pa.

BARBECUE IS GIVEN TO A. M. E. CONFERENCE

Wrens, Ga., November 1.—(Special)—The Augusta district, A. M. E. conference, was given a barbecue by white citizens of this city at the closing session of the meeting here today. The barbecue was in keeping with the conference at its opening session by Mayor Blakely and Rev. O. S. Wilson, pastor of the Methodist church here. Bishop J. S. Flipper in his final address to ministers urged them to live upright lives, make friends with citizens in the communities in which they live. Many changes are expected in appointments in this conference. Rev. E. A. Person will preach tonight. J. T. Wilkinson will make an address at 3 o'clock Sunday.

UNITY CENTER MEETS SUNDAY AFTERNOON

The regular meeting of Unity center will be held Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock in Assembly Room No. 2, Atlanta Chamber of Commerce. There will be a special musical program, under direction of Mrs. Michael. At the lecture period Mrs. A. G. Gregory will be the speaker. There will be a distribution of health literature and health demonstration. Robert Bryan Harrison will preside.

R. E. McFarlin Dies.
R. E. McFarlin, prominent colored citizen of Atlanta and brother of Rev. J. H. McFarlin, presiding elder of the Atlanta district of negro Methodist churches, died at his home Saturday night. He has been active in the affairs of his people. He was a member of Big Bethel Methodist church. Surviving him are a widow and several relatives.

BURTON M'MAINS GETS BIG PERMO FRANCHISE

Burton A. McMains has secured the exclusive franchise for Permo service stations in Georgia and Florida and has already opened several new stations in the larger cities.

Mr. McMains' company will be known as the Southeastern Permo.

BURTON M'MAINS.

Sales company and will shortly open service stations in all principal points in both states.

The Atlanta station is temporarily located on Third street between Peachtree and Courtland. A permanent location will be secured within a short time and washing, cleaning, chassis painting and other subsidiary departments will be added.

Permonizing is rapidly becoming the vogue with new car owners, and those who have recently repainted their cars. Permo treatment is said to prolong the life of a good paint job almost indefinitely, and is being used by a good percentage of the owners of high-grade cars in Atlanta today.

Mr. McMains plans to greatly expand their local business when better facilities can be arranged. When his new home on Peachtree is ready for occupancy he plans to have a complete "appearance service station," which will include the cleaning of closed-car upholstery.

Mr. McMains has been in the automobile business for the past ten years. He began his career in the middle west, but has been in Georgia ever since for some time. He will maintain district offices in Atlanta.

WILLIS-KNIGHT MAKES NON-STOP RECORD

More than 23,000 miles in 45 1-2 days was the record hung up by a Willis-Knight touring car after the world's non-stop record by the Willis-Overland Pacific company of Los Angeles, Cal. This is the mileage recorded from the time of the second start of the non-stop Knight on July 20, after bandits had held up the drivers and had stolen the car, when approximately 8,000 miles had been registered on the first trip. The car was recovered in the San Bernardino valley, apparently no worse for its experience.

The car was promptly begun again and continued until September 20. This makes a total of 31,000 miles traveled since the beginning of the first test. During its second test the car was running constantly, covering a mileage as great as that achieved in two years of ordinary driving, without change of oil and without adjustment or having anything done except refilling with water, oil and gasoline.

In the accomplishment of this record 1,175 gallons of gas were used, an average of 19.8 miles to the gallon of fuel, and this without making allowance for periods during which the car was stopped before various dealer establishments in Southern California, this elapsed time aggregating more than 125 hours, during which the motor was allowed to idle.

Only 29 quarts of oil were used on the entire trip, an average of 1,113 miles per quart. Water used during the run totaled only 15 points.

After this remarkable performance the motor was torn down and examined, with the resulting discovery that firing chambers, piston heads and sleeve valves showed no appreciable carbon deposit and that the car was in condition to duplicate the feat immediately, if required.

Although no speed records were attempted, the car averaged 511 miles per day.

On the occasion of the landing of the world fliers at Los Angeles this car was chosen as the official car to be placed at the disposal of Lieutenants Lowell Smith, Erik Nelson, Leigh Wade, Jack Harding, H. H. Ozden and Leslie P. Arnold during their stay at Clover field.

ACCESSORIES MAKE IDEAL XMAS GIFTS

BY J. V. FREITAG.

During December a special campaign of advertising will appear in this paper which will unquestionably be of service to the motorists and friends in this community because it is based on the idea of "giving something for the car for Christmas."

This advertising is being sponsored by the Atlanta Automobile association, a prominent local body composed of all leading automobile, accessory and tire dealers in this city.

According to C. V. Hohenstein, executive secretary of the association, "there are practically 50,000 automobiles owned within a radius of 25 miles of Five Points. A great majority of these are pleasure cars or cars that are used for both business and pleasure, and their owners are of a practical sort. It is a fact that every motorist and family takes more than ordinary pride in his car and its appearance, frequently adding accessories to aid in comfort, safety, and pleasure for themselves and their guests. So it is our belief that the average motorist will prefer and be highly pleased this Christmas if those near and dear to him would select as their Christmas gifts something for the car for Christmas."

"I remember years ago," said Mr. Hohenstein, "when Christmas day brought with it gift upon gift which, while they were appreciated, they usually were of short service, soon forgotten, and frequently were not even suited to the recipient. Times have changed. The years of steady campaigning for practical gifts have borne fruit and I believe that this Christmas practical gift-giving will reach its high-water mark."

"Picture the motorist who on Christmas day receives a bright new bumper, a windshield spotlight, a monogrammed motorometer, or any of a large number of useful accessories of a similar nature. Such giving shows thought and care and wins appreciation. For every automobile owner is glad to receive a gift that will help 'dollar-up' the car for himself and his family's pleasure. With other families, more fortunately situated, it has even been the custom to combine many gifts into one supreme gift—a new car, with all its highly developed features."

"Summed up, an automobile gift Christmas is one of sure success and the Atlanta Automobile association is of the opinion that it is rendering a service to the thousands of local motorists by calling attention to this better way of gift-giving during the pre-holiday period."

MAFFETT TREATS FORCE TO CHICKEN BARBECUE

The organization of F. E. Maffett and a few other guests, totaling nearly 100, were treated to one of the biggest chicken barbecues of the year by the "boss"—meaning F. E. Maffett—Saturday afternoon. Jimmy Lyons and Harry Chambers, district managers of Dodge Brothers and Graham Brothers, respectively, were the guests of honor, but there were no speeches.

Mr. Maffett stated that the cue was given his force in recognition of the remarkable success of the past few months and in appreciation of the spirit of loyalty and friendship existing throughout the entire organization. It has been customary with Mr. Maffett to give his force some kind of outing or entertainment several times during each year, this one closely following a dinner and party at one of the leading local hotels.

The past six or eight months have been unusually good for the Maffett organization and has seen the downfall of all previous records for the sale of Dodge Brothers cars and Graham Brothers commercial cars.

OLDS TO INCREASE COACH PRODUCTION

Eighty per cent of the entire production of the Olds Motor Works during the coming three months—November, December and January—will be coach models, according to the schedule just adopted by factory officials. This is the first time in the history of Oldsmobile that nearly all efforts have been concentrated on a closed body model and is truly indicative of the demand of the public for comfortable transportation.

Facilities at the Fisher Body corporation plant, which adjoins and is connected with the shops of the Olds Motor Works at Lansing, Mich., are this greatly increased production of coaches. This expansion will enable the plant to turn out more than twice as many coach bodies per day as it has been producing.

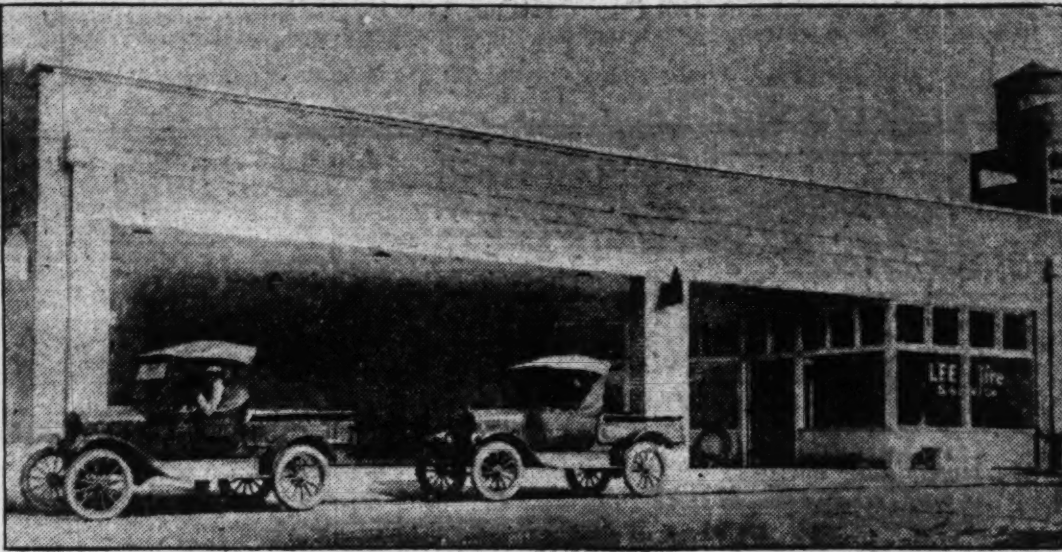

The Oldsmobile coach was announced a little over a month ago—on September 28, to be exact. Latest available figures up to and including October 18—a period of 20 days—show that 1,540 cars of this type were produced. This was about one-half the entire production of closed cars for the same period.

"Without question the five-passenger coach design is rapidly increasing the favor in which closed models are held," said Guy H. Peasley, sales manager for Oldsmobile. "They are converting even the most rabid fresh air devotees to the advantages they have over the touring and roadster models. The two large glassed windows that form practically the entire side of the coach, and which lower or raise in a jiffy, combined with the new Fisher one-piece ventilating windshield, make the coach as airy as an open car. At the same time it affords complete and instant protection against sudden rainstorms and inclement weather. These advancements in the coachmaker's craft are tending to make the closed car the first choice of the buyer in most sections of the country."

New Home of the Lee Tire Service

This modern service station, located at the corner of Spring street and Baltimore block, was recently opened by the Lee Tire Service, local distributors for this popular brand of tires and tubes, who will at all times carry a most complete stock, and, according to officials of the company, they are equipped to render the best possible service.

Stone Baking Co.'s Fleet of Trucks

The above is a part of the F. O. Stone Baking company's fleet of Dodge trucks, there being 40 in all. The truck on the extreme right is a special built Reo truck, known as the Stone band wagon, with oil painted panels and special musical equipment.

GOOD CAR NEEDS GOOD SERVICE

Good performance alone does not imply that the owner is completely satisfied with his motor car, according to H. C. Maffett, local Dodge Brothers dealer.

"It takes good service, in addition to the good performance, to win the complete and enthusiastic endorsement," he said.

He pointed out the fact that Dodge Brothers, while constantly improving the quality of their car and thus reducing the necessity for service, are at the same time giving the service question more and more attention as one of the fundamental issues in the volume production and sale of automobiles.

This month, for example, Dodge Brothers is advertising to the world, "You Know in Advance—Dodge Brothers dealers everywhere have a fixed charge for every service operation." It is perhaps the first time that a large manufacturer has given such general prominence to the subject of service.

"Dodge Brothers gave years of study to the development of a service plan that could be applied with equal fairness and efficiency to their entire organization of dealers," said Mr. Maffett. "When this plan was finally evolved, it meant more years of intensive educational work in getting it established and in operation in the thousands of dealerships. Today they have arrived at the point where it can be truthfully said that any Dodge Brothers owner, anywhere, can learn in advance just what it will cost him for any work that his car may require. Guesswork and unpleasant surprises in service bills have been eliminated."

"The plan through which this enviable position was realized is known as the flat rate service system. Others have advocated it but in no case has it been so universally adopted."

"I believe that this system has done more than was ever accomplished before to solidify and heighten the enthusiasm of Dodge Brothers motor car owners."

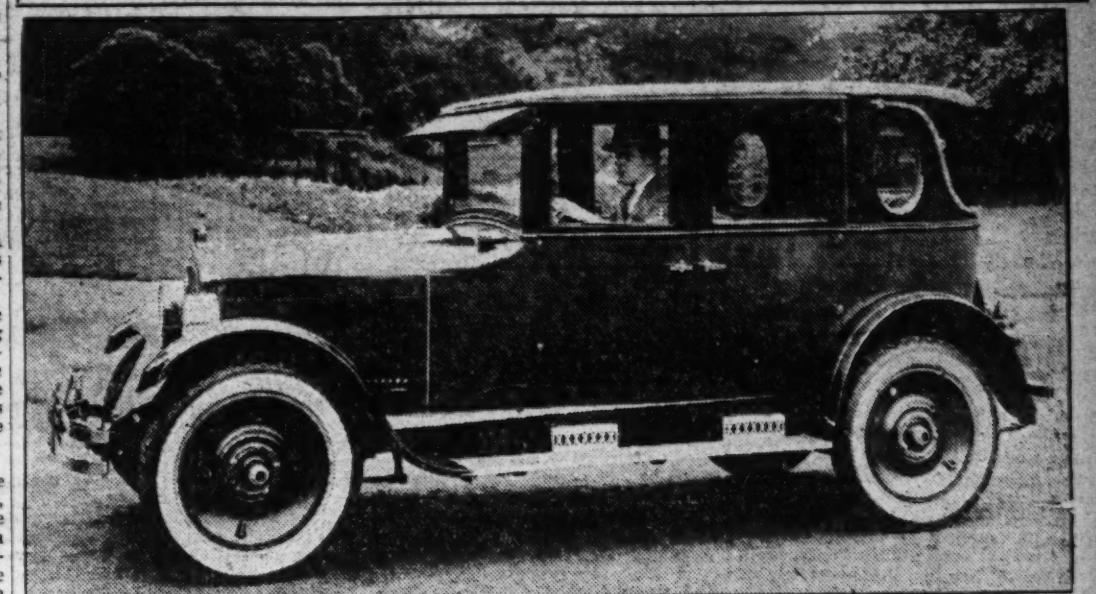

Mr. Maffett explained that the flat rate system was not put into effect until tests had determined a reasonable time allowance for every conceivable service job. On the basis of these tests, maximum working periods were established and mechanics are now required to complete every job within the allotted time.

Thus the service superintendent is able to estimate within a few minutes how long it will take to finish a job. Basic charges are supplied by the factory with the basic time periods. While these charges are variable, according to the overhead cost in each community, the difference is never great and the factory's maximum reasonable charge is never surpassed.

As a rule, mechanics are also paid by the job. They are allowed so much time for the operation and must do the work in a satisfactory manner or do it over without pay. This reduces waste of time and increases efficiency. The natural result to the owner is better work in shorter time and at lower cost.

Mr. Maffett added that Dodge Brothers has never contemplated a so-called free service. "It is now obvious to most people that free service must be paid for somehow by someone," he said. "The usual way is to add enough to the selling price of the car to cover the free service item. The injustice of that, however, is that you may never require more than a few dollars worth of service, while some other buyer needs ten or twenty times that amount and yet you both pay equally. Dodge Brothers owners pay only for what they themselves get—not for what someone else may need."

New Oakland Landau Sedan

Due to the heavy demand for the new Oakland Landau sedan, which has far surpassed the expectations of factory officials, production has been trebled on this model since it was introduced a few months ago. This increase is remarkable in view of the fact that the original schedule was carefully based on past selling experience and intimate knowledge of the market, and was considered, at the time, to be extremely large. The new sedan can be seen in the show rooms of their local branch, 285-295 Spring street.

AMERICAN CAR SCORES ON HILLS OF MADEIRA

Consider the difficulties of motoring in Madeira—and then stop complaining about bad roads, steep hills, traffic congestion and other common troubles experienced in the good old U. S. A.

In Madeira there is not a 500-yard stretch of level road, and the grades encountered frequently are as high as 25 per cent. These steep and continuous inclines, combined with stony and uneven roads, make it a hard life for the automobile, and therefore the average car in Madeira does not last long.

Continual and bothersome changes of gear are another of the driver's troubles. Long distances must be covered in low, with consequent overheating of the motor, so that a trip of any distance is just a series of starts and stops, the latter being to permit the motor to cool off.

It is under such conditions as these that an American car has won its way until it is virtually regarded as the standard automobile for use in Madeira. This information was reported in a letter from Freitas Irmaos & Co., of Funchal, in a letter to the Chandler factory, Cleveland.

"We are very glad to inform you that the Chandler already enjoys a great reputation on our island," says the letter. "We believe that no other automobile could give better results in territory such as ours. The Chandler cars are practically always able to go on direct drive, in which they excel the other cars, and while low speed has to be made use of at the start, never, even on the greatest inclines and grades, does the Chandler become overheated, nor does the water boil in the radiator. The traffic transmission of the Chandler is a feature that cannot be equalled, and makes the Chandler the most silent car at low speed."

"While until recently the Chandler was totally unknown here, it has gradually gained the confidence and admiration of everybody. For public service it is preferred."

"In spite of the fact that it is only a few months since the first number already sold has exceeded that of all other makes, with the exception of an Italian car that has four different types of chassis, and the Chandler is now the American car having the largest sale in Madeira with the exception of two that sell for more than $1,000 less than the Chandler."

Yellowstone national park. This is an increase over the 1923 season, when 27,350 cars carried tourists through Uncle Sam's great national park, indicating that there is an increasing desire on the part of our people to see their own America.

Yellowstone defies description, and must be seen to be appreciated and seldom does one visit the scenic wonders of this nationally-protected part of our country without becoming enthusiastic boosters for this most interesting motor trip.

A careful record of the different makes of cars passing through is kept at the entrance to the park, and it is interesting, but not surprising, to note that more Buick cars passed through the park than any other make except Ford. During the 1924 season 3,223 Buicks entered, this number exceeding all other makes, the next nearest being 2,584.

Cars come and go, but the old standbys like Buick continue to hold first place. Buick's popularity is not only vouchsafed for the fact that more people drove them through the park during the past several seasons than any other make of car save one, but it will be remembered that Buick for the past seven years has won first choice of space at the national shows by reason of doing the greatest volume of business expressed in dollars and cents.

DE PACHMANN PLANS FOR CHOPIN NUMBERS

Seven Chopin numbers, including a nocturne and three preludes, will be played by Vladimir de Pachmann at the auditorium on November 14, according to advance copies of a program received Saturday by the Southern Musical bureau.

Mr. de Pachmann has been pronounced by many critics the foremost interpreter of Chopin in the world and he frequently devotes a whole program to the works of that composer. He is to open his recital with one of the great concertos of John Sebastian Bach, and works by Schumann, Brahms and Liszt are to be included. The sale of season tickets for the artists' series will be reopened on Monday, November 10, continuing through Wednesday. Seats for the de Pachmann concert alone will be offered on Thursday and Friday. Both sales will be conducted at the Phillips & Crew company store.

The artists' series includes, besides the de Pachmann recital, the San Carlo Opera company, in "Madame Butterfly"; Paul Whiteman and his concert orchestra; the Denishawn dancers, with Ruth St. Denis, and Mischa Elman, the violinist.

PRICES REDUCED BY HUDSON & ESSEX

Substantial price reductions on Hudson and Essex coaches were announced recently by J. W. Goldsmith, Jr., Grant company, following the receipt of a special message from the Hudson Motor Car company.

The reduction results in the Hudson coach, a closed car, now selling at less than the standard open cars on the same chassis. This is the first time in motor car history when this has been true, it is declared. The Hudson coach's new list price is $1,335, as against $1,400 for the 4-passenger open super-six car and $1,500 for the 7-passenger open car.

The Essex coach at $945 is still slightly higher than the Essex open car, but the differential is declared by Hudson-Essex officials to be the smallest in the industry aside from Hudson.

This move by the Hudson Motor Car company—unexpected, because the last few weeks has seen a substantial number of motor car price increases—is taken to mean that Hudson-Essex now regards open cars as luxury cars and proposes to give the advantage of volume production to the enclosed cars which make up at least 90 per cent of its production. Open car and sedan prices are unchanged.

The reduction was made possible, according to Hudson officials, because 1924 has been the largest sales year in Hudson history, the hitherto unknown 100,000 mark having been reached about September 1. Volume economies have thus been possible.

REVEALS BIG INTEREST IN FUEL EFFICIENCY

An estimate of the public's interest in fuel efficiency was obtained recently by the Franklin Automobile company in connection with the announcement of a high-powered, air-cooled motor.

For 23 years, this company has been producing a car which was particularly noted for its gasoline economy; it was accordingly expected by Franklin executives that there would be some public speculation about the probable effect of high power upon fuel economy, but the interest aroused proved to be a real surprise.

From the time of the introduction of the high-powered, air-cooled car, inquiries as to the gasoline mileage that could be expected began to trickle in and continued to come until after four months, they number into the thousands. One thousand inquiries came from one advertisement alone.

In response to the inquiries about the effect of Franklin's high power on fuel efficiency, a booklet was published which pointed out that the weight of the Franklin car remains the same, the size of the motor is unchanged; hence, the quantity of fuel utilized is necessarily identical with the fuel required by the previous model under like conditions of running.

Franklin executives are of the opinion that the spontaneous outburst which necessitated publication of this booklet signifies a widespread interest in the achievement of efficiency in motoring. The trend in recent years to lighter weight cars with frictionless constructions and with carburetion developed to a high point is further reflections of the public's desire for economy.

Forger Recaptured.

Tallahassee, November 1.—W. Odom, an employee of the state road department, will leave late today for Houston, Texas, to bring back to the Florida state prison, Dr. R. Edward Corbell, notorious forger, sent up from St. Petersburg in 1922 for two years. Corbell has escaped twice, was captured once, last year, in Pittsburg, Pa., and the second time in Houston several days ago.

Men • Money • Machinery

ONLY nine other motor car makers did as large a business as Paige-Jewett in 1924.

Some forty thousand Paige and Jewett cars were made and sold in the past twelve months.

Forty-three million odd dollars was the total volume of business of all kinds.

And the Company's total assets are more than $15,000,000.

A new mammoth plant—the most modern in the industry—and new machinery and equipment now give facilities unsurpassed.

An organization whose principal executives have remained unchanged since the beginning of the business sixteen years ago assures knowledge and experience second to none.

Here are the men—and the money—and the machinery—to produce quality cars.

ONE hundred thirty four Star owners, driving an aggregate of one and a half million miles, averaged 24 9/10 miles per gallon of gas.

This record was made in Georgia and Alabama mud, in Texas and Idaho sand, in Maine and Vermont snow and in the high altitudes of the Rocky Mountains. It was made by ordinary Star cars, driven by ordinary drivers. It represents Star performance under average conditions as they exist today throughout the United States and Canada.

The Communion of Saints

BY PROFESSOR A. B. MOORE.

The saints of old, now in paradise, and the saints on earth who still are doing God's will in mortal flesh, make up what has been known to the church in all ages as "the communion of saints." All who truly turn to Christ and abide in Him, are saints whether or not they have been officially canonized. The word is a derivation of Latin sanctus, holy, and is conventionally applied to individuals who manifested outstanding piety, self-denial and devotion in lives of Christ-like beauty. The term properly applies to every true and whole-hearted believer in Jesus Christ as his personal Redeemer, who humbly follows in His Lord's steps and as best he can does His will. All honor to the martyrs and confessors "who kept the truth so pure of old," but no less honor to the living saints who maintain the same truth and live the same lives today!

It is a heartening and inspiring comfort to us when, looking back over the ages, we see the multitudes of those who glorified God in their lives, and realize that a goodly company they are both in numbers and in character—those men and women of the Bible. But who can chronicle the lives and the Christly virtues of the innumerable company who after them, were themselves strangers and pilgrims on the earth and sought the fellowship of Him who dwelleth on high? Heaven is filled with treasures which we earth-dwellers totally fail to comprehend, but the chiefest treasure of our Savior is the company of His saints and if we are faithful we shall be part of it.

Vision Fulfilled.

Our vision of this glorious company is, for the most part, necessarily confined to its earthly career. We cannot see the place of departed saints and do not know what occupies those who make up the "church expectant." We know only that they rest in Jesus and that He will bring them when He comes again to reign on earth. Perhaps we too shall share the rest in paradise—it is a blessed thought to our earth-weary souls, or perhaps we

A Sure Way To End Dandruff

There is one sure way that has never failed to remove dandruff at once, and that is to dissolve it, then destroy it entirely. To do this, just get about four ounces of plain ordinary liquid arvon from any drug store (this is all you will need), apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

By morning, most if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and two or three more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it, no matter how much dandruff you may have.

You will find, too, all itching and itching of the scalp will stop instantly, and your hair will be fluffy, lustrous, glossy, silky and soft, and look and feel a hundred times better. —(adv.)

This Cream, My Dears,

Applies a dozen helps at once
By Edna Wallace Hopper

I wish all girls and women would try my Youth Cream. Just learn what a cream can do. It is not only the finest cream I ever found, but it contains products of both lemon and strawberry. Also all the best modern science knows to foster and feed, to soften and protect the skin.

Apply all these helps at once. Don't use merely a common cold cream.

I owe to Youth Cream my wonderful complexion. I owe to it my baby skin, clear and rosy, at my grand old age. Never is my skin without it.

There are two types—cold cream and vanishing. I apply the cold cream at night. Vanishing cream in the morning as a powder base and all-day skin protection.

Quarterly Meetings Held in Atlanta During Past Week

During the past week two important and interesting conferences have been held in the two Atlanta districts of the W. M. S., North Georgia conference, M. E. Church south, held at Wesley Memorial.

The North Atlanta district conference was held at Wesley Memorial church on Wednesday and was presided over by Mrs. Frank Atlee, secretary of the district.

The program was entirely inspirational and was most unusual in the number of missionaries who contributed to the interest of the conference.

Dr. Fred Mangel, of China, sketched briefly the causes of the present war in China and its probable results to Christianity. Dr. Mangel expressed himself as most optimistic in regard to the progress of Christianity in China.

Atlanta's own beloved Al Stanton spoke of his recent experiences in Brazil and commended in the highest terms the work being done there by the Methodist women.

Miss Margaret Cook, of Japan, one of our own dear Georgia girls, told of her work with the women and children of the Chrysanthemum Kingdom. Mrs. O. T. Logan and Mrs. G. Grimes, of China, also were among the missionaries speaking optimistically of the work in the Orient.

A splendid audience greeted Mrs. John C. White, secretary of the South Atlanta district at the conference held in the new Methodist church at Oakland City, on last Wednesday.

The program of the day was centered around the work being accomplished by the women in this district to further the cause of missions both at home and abroad.

The secretary reported 13 new auxiliaries organized in this district during the present year and Mrs. E. W. Brogdon, the treasurer, reported an increase in finances over last year.

Trinity church presented a pageant directed by Mrs. John Mangel in the interest of the Belle Bennett memorial.

Dr. Fred Mangel spoke briefly of the work being done among the Chinese women by the women in the southern Methodist church. Miss Margaret Cook and Mrs. O. T. Logan also addressed the conference, inspiring the women to greater efforts in the work of the auxiliaries of the churches as related to the work of the missionaries in home and foreign fields.

Mrs. W. B. Higgenbotham, of West Point, the beloved president of the W. M. S., of the North Georgia conference, spoke a few words of encouragement and commendation for the district. Among the conference members were Mrs. Buford Carroll; Mrs. C. S. Story, of Gainesville; and Mrs. R. M. Stripling, of Atlanta.

The South Atlanta district is the second largest district in north Georgia in number of missionary societies organized and active. Elberton district has the largest number of auxiliaries and the North Atlanta district leads the conference.

Mrs. Lee Wisdom, our Elberton correspondent, was a welcome visitor to the city recently. Mrs. Wisdom formerly Miss Estelle Perian, is a native Atlantian, a graduate of the Girls' High school and was a devotee in the Park Street Methodist church among the young people before her marriage. The Federated church always extends a cordial welcome to the church activities of the Elbertonians.

Circle No. 9 of the Ponce de Leon Baptist W. M. S., was held at the residence of the chairman, Mrs. John M. McCullough. The quota given this circle was readily accepted and plans for further personal service will be outlined at the next meeting. The circle is fortunate in having such splendid leaders as Mrs. McCullough and Mrs. Race assisting, and look forward to a year of real service and pleasure combined.

Work of Methodist Women. In the M. E. church, south, a definite part of the work is directly under the supervision and direction of the women in the church. They also support 153 missionaries in eight foreign fields; own more than three millions of dollars worth of property in foreign lands. There are 174 deaconesses and home missionaries supported by the Methodist women and society values in the home-land amounting to more than two millions of dollars. This work is largely conducted through schools in the home and foreign fields and for the benefit of women and children.

A missionary recently returned from China said of the work there, among the women and children, "You women, of course, are working among the women and children of China, the men will not be difficult to reach."

It will be welcome news to all loyal Baptist women of Atlanta to know that at a recent meeting of the executive board of the W. M. U. of the Atlanta association, called by the superintendent, Mrs. C. W. W. plans were made which give assurance that the necessary funds will be provided for the maintenance of the coming year of the Kate Pendleton Dawson and the Andrew and Frances Stewart Good Will centers.

All W. M. societies will be asked to cooperate, and none will refuse to have a part in this noteworthy work of the union.

An unusual number of returned missionaries will be speakers on the program, which has been prepared for the annual meeting of the W. M. U. of the Baptist State convention, which will be held in Savannah, November 11-13. Prominent among them will be Mrs. E. M. Potat, Jr., Mrs. Harvey Clarke, Tokio, Japan; Miss Sara Frances Furling, Miss Annie Sandlin, Dr. T. W. Ayers, Hwang, China, and Rev. Lawrence Yarrille, of the Home Mission board, and of the Bible Institute of New Orleans. A symposium will be conducted by these missionaries and it will prove a veritable feast for all present.

A number of artistic and interesting charts and banners will be sent from Atlanta W. M. U. headquarters to Savannah to be displayed in behalf of various phases of W. M. U. work. Among them will be several which were made by the skillful

Miss Cora A. Brown Writes Of Recent Baptist Meetings

Photograph by McNary & Co.
Miss Cora Ann Brown, prominent in church, civic and patriotic circles in Atlanta.

The B. W. M. U. auxiliary to the Atlanta Baptist association held a two days' session as guests of the West End Baptist church, October 7 and 8, which interesting event was well taken care of in our daily newspapers. Closely following on this women's meeting was the other annual meeting of the Atlanta association, now consisting of 63 churches, which was entertained at the Second Baptist church, October 14 and 15, conducted by the B. W. M. U. and women, from each of these 63 churches. Having been urged by our pastor to take our appointments as delegates seriously and not as a mere form, I never lost a note, a report, or any message throughout the session of two days.

The absence of all welcoming addresses and responses at the men's meeting was a marked difference to the women's opening exercises, and I wonder why this feature was omitted. I wonder if we formerly called the men's meeting "no more, however, consisting of delegates of both sexes." Without fear, favor of affection for either party, for we are not all members of the same body? It may be this feature was omitted as a time-saver, and to expedite the real business of the sessions. Again I noticed the men and women's meeting had no minutes read from session to session by its recording secretary—as was the custom of the B. W. M. U.—and I think it a committee to approve and edit these minutes had been appointed with power to act thereon. Since women are striving to attain progress and become businesslike, we are more alert than formerly, to all such details. Not many years ago I knew it was the custom of the moderator to have the minutes acted on at the beginning of each bi-daily session.

A remarkable feature of the association's sessions, however, was the giving of our younger ministers; formerly it was the older men who led in the discussions and the younger ones were not given their majority in wisdom, training and leadership, in which I am sure the elder ministers can rejoice and be proud that the lessons of wisdom, justice and moderation now bear such abundant fruit in these younger pastors.

Hands of Mrs. T. B. Woodall, of Fairburn, and which were effectively used recently, both at the Fairburn and Atlanta W. M. U. annual meetings.

The Baptist editor calls special attention to the article on today's page, "Women and the 1925 Kingdom Budget of Southern Baptists." It is a vital interest and importance to our "Future Program."

Women and 1925 Kingdom Budget. Southern Baptist women have had a most notable part in the $75,000,000 campaign that is to be closed November 30, 1924. The men of the South are willing to pay the cost of the work but the superb machine already organized and in daily use by the women, was ready for action the day the program was announced.

The result has been that the women's quota of $15,000,000, or one-fifth of the entire campaign, was raised in full by the 12th of June. Georgia women have done their full share in this work, having met their quota.

In the 1925 Kingdom Budget, which is now being organized by Southern Baptists, and which contemplates a yearly canvass for money and vital educational features, the women are represented in a worthy way on all the great committees. On the south-wide committee for 1925, our own Miss Laura Lee Patrick is a member; also Mrs. Berta K. Snooker, of Oklahoma and Mrs. Janice Cree Rose, of Kentucky. Ex-officio members are: Mrs. W. F. Jones, president of the Baptist Women's Missionary Union of the South, and Miss Kathleen Malloy, secretary of this organization.

The state also has an organization in this campaign. The women members of this state committee are: Miss Laura Lee Patrick and Mrs. George Westover.

In the 1925 Atlanta association organization, the women members are: Mrs. C. W. Klus, superintendent of

Christian Council Work Is Praised By Sherwood Eddy

The October meeting of the Christian council was held at Wesley Memorial church, Dr. Durham presiding, the meeting being opened with prayer by M. M. Jackson, of Kirkwood Baptist church.

Sherwood Eddy, a world student and traveler, says: "In all my travels, which have covered most of the nations of the earth, nothing I have seen has given me so much cause for hope as does the spirit of cooperation evident in the work of the churches of Atlanta through the Christian council."

This is a broad statement, but the activities of the council cover broad fields. The scope of the work is shown through its standing committees, namely, civics, education, evangelism, industrial relations, law enforcement, legislation, prison welfare, race relations. The council helped to establish the children's court, the new marriage license law and to abolish the use of the lash in our convict farms, which usage has been shadowed in Georgia for so many years. The council helped in the establishment of the Churches' Home for Girls, where the girl, however little may be her wage, can find a home within her means. This one act of humanity, of providing the church home for the "unexperienced, strange girl in the big city," this act of shutting out temptation away from home and friends, the good accomplished and the evil prevented, will never be known this side of eternity. The atmosphere of a clean, pure home is one of the greatest factors in the mind and heart of the young in emphasizing the things that count in life.

Walton, Stone Mountain, Ga., and it will be placed in the First Central Division library and you will have credit for the book. Postage for mailing will be returned when requested. The association contributing the largest number of books will have special mention at the close of the year.

There is a special call for books from newly-elected officers, who feel the need of preparation, but many not able to buy the necessary books. "B. W. M. U. Manual," "Training for Leadership," and books on prayer are especially needed, also your books on "Stewardship" that have served so well.

The library is operated very simply. The reader orders the book or books and is responsible to the library. When returned, the outgoing postage is sent in to the library, making it self-supporting.

Anyone feeling a special interest in mission study may supply a set of books, 12 or 15 copies, thereby establishing "their" mission study class. To reach the indifference church is through the aroused individual.

Have a "book shower" for the library.

More than half of the linen plants in France that were destroyed during the war have been rebuilt.

MRS. H. STACEY, COLLINGSVILLE, ILLINOIS

A MOST trying period of a woman's life is that of middle age, fraught with danger to some extent, and invariably with most annoying symptoms; such as hot-flashes, smothering spells, nervous troubles, irregularities and fainting spells.

When a woman like Nurse Stacey after many years of caring for the sick writes a letter of praise for Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound like the following, it should influence other women who are passing through the Change of Life to try it.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is a root and herb medicine especially adapted to act upon the feminine system. It helps nature to build up the weakened, nervous system, and enables women to pass this trying period with the least possible annoying symptoms.

Nurse Stacey's Letter Follows:

COLLINGSVILLE, ILL.—"I could almost write a book in praise of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. In the first place my husband induced me to try it and I have continued taking it off and on for years. I have become a well woman from its use and am now taking it through the Change of Life just to be on the safe side. I first took it for backache and a weak condition of the whole system and I think it saved my life and my baby. She is now a mother and takes it herself and I think I can count as high as a hundred women I have recommended the Vegetable Compound to, as I am a practical nurse. Use my letter in any way you see fit for I will stand by what I write."—Mrs. H. Stacey, Collingsville, Illinois.

Another Woman's Similar Experience

"During the Change of Life I was always tired and weak, could hardly do my work and did not care to go anywhere or talk to people. After I began to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I noticed a change and before I had taken four bottles of it I felt like a new person. I can and always will recommend it in cases like mine."—Mrs. Jos. Waniser, 1315 S. 14th St., Manitowish, Wisconsin.

Methodist Women Begin Week of Prayer Today

One of the most important seasons on the missionary calendar of the woman's work in the M. E. Church, South is the week set aside each fall as a special season of prayer.

Those women who steered the woman's work through the uncertain days of its coming into being felt the need of concerted prayer throughout the church and for the self-denial and deeper consecration which results from definite prayer.

Time should be consecrated as well as substance and in definitely setting aside time and substance a great blessing for the individual, for the auxiliary and for the work follows as night the day.

In order that there may be definiteness in praying and in giving certain needs in the field, either at home or abroad, are announced and much publicity is given to information concerning them.

Programs are made out with infinite pains and devotion to make them full of interest and of compelling appeal.

If ever there was a time when all Christians needed to present a united front against sin, and to stand out for the power of the Spirit of God, it is surely at this time.

The coming week, November 2-8, will call all Methodist women to devote at least one hour of each day during the week to prayer. They will study the future needs of those who labor in the coal fields of Virginia and of the urgent needs of Collegio Progresso, in Puerto, Mexico. A free will offering will be made at this time for the work in these two fields.

Prayer Program at Druid Hills. Sunday, November 2—Special sermon 7:30 p. m. Monday Afternoon, November 3, 2:30 p. m.—Regular meeting of Women's mission society.

Tuesday, November 4, will be observed as the annual day of prayer by the Woman's Missionary society of the First Methodist church, corner Peachtree street and Porter place. The program will begin at 11 o'clock with the communion service and will conclude at 4 o'clock in the afternoon. All persons in attendance will be guests of the missionary society at lunch from 1 to 2 o'clock. The free will offering made this year will be for the support of the Woman's council, to be applied to the Methodist work among the miners of West Virginia and to Collegio Progresso, Puerto, Mexico. The program prepared for the day will emphasize in particular the place of prayer in the missionary work of the church.

THE ORIGINAL 'MERTON' IN HOWARD FEATURE
DOUGLAS MACLEAN IN 'NEVER SAY DIE' HERE

Glenn Hunter and Viola Dana in "Merton of the Movies."
Metropolitan Picture Is One Made for Laughing Purposes.

Viola Dana, for eight years a star in her own right, makes her debut in Paramount pictures in "Merton of the Movies." And through a curious coincidence, Glenn Hunter, the "Merton" of the photoplay made "Merton of the Movies" his first appearance in the west. Although each had known of the other for years and had mutual friends, they met for the first time when Hunter stepped from a transcontinental train at Los Angeles. And a week later they had exchanged their first kiss. It happened, of course, on one of the stages of Famous Players-Lasky studio. James Cruze, who made "The Covered Wagon" and the director of "Merton" ordered them to do it. It was recorded on the film. Cruze has selected an especially strong cast for his great story of youthful pathos and laughter. Besides Hunter and Miss Dana, the players include De Witt Jennings, Elliott Roth, Luke McGuire, Gail Henry, Charles Selby, Charles Ogle, Ethel Wales, Frank Jonsson and Eleanor Lawson. "Merton of the Movies" was originally a novel by Harry Leon Wilson and later became a stage play by Marc Connelly and George S. Kaufman. Hunter made his first great success in the stage play, Walter Woods wrote the film continuity. The story revolves around the experience—tragic, funny and amorous—of a small-town youth, who is movie-struck and goes to Hollywood to make his fortune in the pictures. Miss Dana has an especially strong part as the sophisticated little actress who "mothers" him and eventually forces him against his will to achieve his ambition. Glenn Hunter, who created the title role of the stage, is also the star of the picture. He is Merton to life! His gawking, his crude naturalness and his terrific sincerity are typical of the average, small-town movie-struck boy. "Merton of the Movies" is an extremely funny comedy-drama with plenty of punch that will keep you on edge all through the picture.

Kimo Kiochi and company, Hawaiian steel string guitar players in native dance and songs, will present a colorful presentation entitled "On the Beach at Waikiki." The comedy feature will be one of Andy Gump series entitled "His Hat Is in the Ring." International News and other features will complete the program. This week the Howard Symphony orchestra will present excerpts from Wagner's great opera "Lohengrin," including the introduction to the third act, the "Elsa's Dream" played as a trumpet solo by Paul Urban, first trumpet with the Howard orchestra, and the finale. An added musical feature will be the presentation of another of the famous Music Master series of famous composers, this one depicting the life of Stephen Foster, greatest of all writers of American folk songs, including "Old Folks at Home," "Come Where My Love Lies Dreaming," "On the Banks of the Ohio," "My Old Kentucky Home" and many others. Quite an elaborate musical setting has been scored by conductor Risner for "Merton of the Movies" and the "Andy Gump" comedy, "His Hat Is in the Ring," a most appropriate offering for election week will be scored in the popular Risner "Symphonic Jazz" arrangements.

Beb Daniels, long on the verge of stardom, has at last reached the movie heights, and her first starring picture comes to the Rialto theater this week for a six-days run. It is "Dangerous Money," taken from Herrick's novel, "Clark Field."

Alberta Vaughan as "The Telephone Girl" returns in another of the new H. C. Witwer series to further brighten up the bill with the great humorist's incomparable wit. The second on the Rialto's list is called "Shylock Holmes," and the little "hello girl" and her strange friends are all messed up in more complications than an aggravated case of pneumonia and just as funny as penmanship is not laughable.

"Flaming Barriers," a George Melford production for Paramount, featuring Jacqueline Logan, Antonio Moreno and Walter Hiers, comes to the Palace theater for a run of two days on Thursday next. Byron Morgan wrote the story, which was adapted by Harvey Thew. It's a drama of small-town life, replete with thrills and with Mr. Hiers, as an efficiency expert, supplying enough laughs for a full-length comedy.

"Dangerous Money"
A new Paramount picture, is sure to please all Bebe Daniels fans. In it, Bebe has her first role as a full-fledged star. This production also gives Frank Tuttle reason to be cheery. It is his first work as a director. Tom Moore heads the cast.

Sam H. Harris announces that he will present his greatest success, "Rain," at the Atlanta theater for one week, beginning Monday night, November 10, with matinee Wednesday and Saturday. Local playgoers will, of course, be much interested in this announcement, since "Rain" has received more favorable comment than any play produced on Broadway for many years. It was dramatized by John Colton and Clarence Randolph from a short-story called "Miss Thompson," written by W. Somerset Maugham, who, although a playwright himself, noted, delegated these young authors the task of putting it into play form. It derives its title from the fact that in the South Seas, at a certain season of the year, there is a steady downpour of water that lasts for weeks at a time. The "pit-pat" of raindrops on the leaves has a most peculiar effect on the inhabitants, and causes them to do and think of things

THRILLING SPANISH PHOTOPLAY AT LOEW'S

Renee Adoree Is Star—Real Bull Fight One of Big Features.

"The Bandalero," a romance of Spain, in which the vendetta of parents and the love of a boy and girl are woven against a background of bull fights and mountain brigandage, comes to Loew's Grand theater this week. This photoplay, which was photographed in Cuba and in natural locations in Spain, is based on the novel by Paul Gwynne, and was adapted and directed by Tom Terriss. Pedro de Cordoba has the title role of Dorando, the Bandalero, or brigand chief, who is a Spanish version of Robin Hood. He has been driven to outlawry by his discovery that the Marquis de la Torre (Gustav von Seyffertitz) is making unwelcome love to his wife, who is killed in the fight that follows. Dorando sends his daughter (Renee Adoree) away to be brought up by a servant. Then, as the first step in his sworn revenge, he kidnaps the marquis' son, Ramon (Manuel Granados), who is hidden away in the mountains—but not so far from his daughter's retreat that the young persons do not meet and fall in love with one another. Then the hatred of the fathers and the love of their children work to a dramatic climax.

The making of this picture by Mr. Terriss and his company was almost as exciting in spots as the story they were depicting. Once, for instance, Mr. Terriss was surrounded by a herd of bulls he was looking over in order to find a good one for the bull fight which is one of the important episodes. Everyone else ran when the bulls got curious, but Mr. Terriss stood stone still, and let them sniff at him until reinforcements arrived and drove the bulls away. One of the most interesting features of "The Bandalero" is said to be the bull fight scenes. These were made by Tom Terriss, the director, in Granada, Spain, near the famous Alhambra, while the grand fair of that nook of the world was in progress. Mr. Terriss hadn't gone to all the trouble of taking his company to that authentic "got to get ordinary bull fight pictures. He was after something entirely different. As a matter of fact he came very near getting nothing at all because of a bull fighters' union whose members decided they wouldn't do their business in front of cameras without getting paid extra special salaries for the occasion.

a motion picture studio since 1922 was a strenuous one. The week opened with the star giving a luncheon party for the members of the cast and staff which was to produce "Beaucaire." It was a fellowship luncheon, and Mr. Valentino, in informal talk, drove home the fact that it was not a Valentino picture they were about to make, but "Monsieur Beaucaire" and that everyone in the cast was just as important as he. On the following day, the official opening of the picture, forty newspapers—men and, naturally, girls—were guests at a luncheon at the studio, given as a welcome to the star. In spite of all visitors Director Olcott succeeded in working every day and scene after scene were completed in rapid succession until now the picture, the greatest thing Valentino has ever attempted.

'HOME FIRES' AT LYRIC LAST COMEDY DRAMA

Edwin Vail Makes Last Appearance in Atlanta At Lyric.

Home Fires," with Director Edwin Vail's last appearance on the lyric stage and the "semi-final" performances of all the others of the popular Lyric Players company, is going to draw record throngs to the Lyric theater all this week.

The production is a wonderful dramatic comedy by Owen Davis, whose plays have invariably proved popular with Atlanta theatergoers. Romance, intrigue, adventure, rollicking comedy and smashing drama all are developed in this play.

Opening with ladies' bargain performances Monday night it will continue throughout the week, with periodic drops of prices, and on Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday afternoons.

Owen Davis has drawn a group of players who are a brave and ample opportunity for the full expression of the best dramatic talent the Lyric Players have within them.

The Lyric Players company is expected up to do the very best of work in a whirlwind finish with his play and the marvellous life comedy, "New Faces of America."

Gus Forbes, who was missed from the cast part of last week because of illness, is scheduled for the heavy part of the play, "The Picture of Dorian Gray," and will be the man of serious mind who is needed on conventional nights by the flapper.

The life of a rich but not youthful neighbor, who is the picture of a man, the actor, the dean of all the Lyric players in point of length of his Atlanta engagement, can outdo all the Marjane Bernard has the last serious role she is to play in Atlanta, as the mother of Forbes' wife, the mother of the child who was affected by the disease. She has a heart-to-heart conversation with her husband, who is not aware that her husband is skipping town from her.

Wilfred Lytt, the Broadway star, who has won greater popularity than any other young man in the movie, is played by a character actor who is talented, has a heart to heart through the play similar to the one of the first act of "Thank-U," a reckless, dissipated youth who is carrying on a dangerous flirtation with the daughter of Forbes, one of his father's friends. This is the worst of the movie.

Work, there was an act on the bill that was headliner, a score of beautiful dancers in gorgeous costumes, and doing some very beautiful and intricate dance numbers. When it came time for Wilson's act he was nowhere in the theater. Just as the dance manager had about given up hope, he burst Jack Wilson, breathless, with a bundle of old clothes under his arm. He had run all the way to a downtown store to secure burlesque costumes similar to those worn by the dancing act. It was too late to dress himself and company in the time, so Wilson had to go on white face and blacken up in front of the audience. He was in the first part of the act and thought it funny while Wilson thought it a very serious piece of business.

Fifteen years ago Jack Wilson was clowning with Ethel Barrymore, later known as the "Queen of the Stage." Lou Telegen. He has brought smiles to millions in New York with his clowning, and his appearance in At the Rialto's biggest stars. Jack Wilson will be seen at every performance at Loew's Grand this week, and his present act is the greatest of his career.

Another big act on the bill this week is Emily Earle and Company with Charles J. Miller in "Extraordinary." Emily Earle is the cleverest variety of the latest and most popular songs and dances, and an act that will make a tremendous hit.

Richard Henderson, too, is also on the bill with seven other intelligent animals in a comedy animal act that will be as great a treat to the grown-ups as it is to the children. Henderson at the uncanny ability of Hector, while the performance as a whole will certainly surprise you.

Rich and the Musical Comedy Company will present one of the clever song and dance sketches that have won so much popularity in the east.

"NOVELTY COMEDY"

In view of the appearance at the Santa theater for three nights, beginning November 3, of those distinguished players, Margaret Anglin and her husband, the actor, Forrest Mead, in "Foot-Loose," it will no doubt be interesting to the present generation of moviegoers to learn a few of the history and facts concerning the famous presentation of the famous popular play, "Forget-Me-Not," which "Foot-Loose" is a modernization.

When "Forget-Me-Not" was first produced in 1900, at the Adelphi, in London, at the Lyceum theater, London, and the Savoy, an American actress who later appeared in the piece for more than 2,000 times here in America. The play was produced by the American Mohair, and Johnston Forbes-Robertson, later knighted, was the Sir Horace Welby—the two roles were played by the same actor. The play was first enacted with such distinction at the "Forget-Me-Not" was credited to two Englishmen, Herman Merivale and F. C. Grove, but the claim was made by certain quarters that it must have come from a French source; that it was the work of a Frenchman, and the villain of an Englishman. It was the sort of well-made play, of which Sardou, in France, and later Dumas, in America, were perhaps the ablest exponents.

It was only played for 16 performances at the Lyceum under the management of the English actor, Henry Irving, being then taken on a tour of the provinces only six months after it had been first produced. It was brought back to London six months later, and was again played for 16 nights from the night of its first performance. "Forget-Me-Not" was a success immediate and complete. It was the first play to draw over 100 persons to Miss Ward on her performance. The English notices were a chorus of praise. The French correspondents, who were not so ready to give credit to their home papers, and the actors who looked to it as well as the public, Musical comedy will continue to draw matinee stock at the Lyric theater November 17, after the productions of "Home Fires" this week and "New Faces" next.

Details of the new entertainment policy were not all settled Saturday, but Montague Salomon, manager of the Lyric, said that the new policy of the change has been secured by the management of the Lyric and that the New York office has wired definite approval.

The announcement confirmed rumors that have been current in local theater circles since the visit here last week of the new general manager, director of the more than 1,000 houses in the theater department of the Famous Players-Lasker.

Inauguration of musical comedy was decided on the ground that the Lyric had been in the 140 continuous weeks of Lyric, and that the Lyric had been in the 140 continuous weeks of Lyric last spring and last summer.

"Oh Boy" this month, the only matinee stock company, will be the dramatic comedy, "The Great Divide."

Bessie is the star attraction, and Baird a bit of a supporting player. He has been in their songs, including "American and Irish Melodies and Mr. Bessie accomplishes a great deal of fun through his dancing and singing. Yente and Baird have been exceptionally successful abroad and in Australia. Baird Gold and Grace Sunshine provide the musical extravaganza and musical comedy with a vein of mysticism in their songs. "An Oriental Rhapsody" is a new song which has been featured in dance and song by popular couple and obligatos to the dances are played on the old-fashioned instruments.

His friend wrote, "Oscar Wilde invited me to go to the theatre with my wife and Lily Langtry, the two beautiest girls of the time; while royal patronage came early in the run, the Prince of Wales came twice in a fortnight and his presence took the delicate form of general interest in the professional career."

Later Miss Ward opened her tour in Boston, with Longfellow in the audience on the first night. Later, when she was in New York, she was given an unorthodox representation was celebrated with a stage ceremonial. Her American tour ended in May, 1882, when she sailed for England, where she appeared in "For-Me-Not" before many of the crowned heads of the countries she visited.

WEEKLY BIBLE TALK

The Feeding of the Five Thousand

BY WILLIAM JENNINGS BRYAN.

Text of Today's Bible Talk by Mr. Bryan.

After these things Jesus went over the sea of Galilee, which is the sea of Tiberias.

And a great multitude followed him, because they saw his miracles which he did on them that were diseased.

And Jesus went up into a mountain, and there he sat with his disciples.

And the passover, a feast of the Jews, was nigh.

When Jesus then lifted up his eyes, and saw a great company come unto him, he saith unto Philip, Whence shall we buy bread, that these may eat?

And this he said to prove him: for he himself knew what he would do.

Philip answered him, Two hundred pennyworth of bread is not sufficient for them, that every one of them may take a little.

One of his disciples, Andrew, Simon Peter's brother, saith unto him,

There is a lad here, which hath five barley loaves, and two small fishes: but what are they among so many?

And Jesus said, Make the men sit down. Now there were much grass in the place.

When they were filled, he saith unto his disciples, Gather up the fragments that remain, that nothing be lost.

Therefore they gathered them together, and filled twelve baskets with the fragments of the five barley loaves, which remained over and above unto them that had eaten.

Then those men, when they had seen the miracles that Jesus did, said, This is of a truth that prophet that should come into the world.

When Jesus therefore perceived that they would come and take him by force, to make him a king, he departed again into a mountain himself alone.

And a great multitude followed him, because they saw his miracles which he did on them that were diseased.

In these words John begins his simple narrative of the Feeding of the Five Thousand.

Here again we have the miracle used as convincing proof of Christ's supernatural power. The people followed him, not because they caught the spirit of the message which he delivered, but "because they saw his miracles," etc.

They might dispute about his theology, but they could not differ or dissent when they saw disease flee at his touch.

This reason for the performance of miracles has led some to attempt a distinction between the miracles of the Bible, accepting some and discarding others.

One writer, for instance, accepts the resurrection but rejects the Virgin Birth, explaining that the former was, in his judgment, needed to prove that Christ was the promised Messiah, while, in his opinion, there was no sufficient reason for the latter.

Unreasonable Criticism.

Such discrimination between accounts equally authenticated illustrates the unreasonableness of such criticism. One must have super-confidence in himself to attempt to decide, upon the scanty proof that he is able to collect, whether there was or was not sufficient reason to justify an infinite God or his infinite Son in manifesting the supernatural power required for the performance of a miracle.

The One who possesses such power is a better judge as to the proper occasion for its exercise than an entirely human and unfriendly critic; and those who saw the miracle performed, would not their testimony be more weighty than the opinion of a skeptic expressed nineteen centuries later?

When Jesus then lifted up his eyes, and saw a great company come unto him, he saith unto Philip, Whence shall we buy bread, that these may eat?

In some instances we are left to infer why Jesus did what he did, or said what he said, but here the reason is given:

A Needed Lesson.

That Philip needed the lesson which he was soon to learn is evident from his reply.

Applying material rules, he said: "Two hundred pennyworth of bread is not sufficient for them, that every one of them may take a little."

Andrew took the same despondent view of the situation, and suggested: "There is a lad here, which hath five barley loaves, and two small fishes; but what are they among so many?"

In bringing out the seeming impossibility of feeding the multitude with so little provision before showing that nothing is impossible with God, Christ employed a familiar oratorical device.

The question and answer—a time-honored form of argument—focus attention upon the particular point involved in the inquiry, and the truth presented in the answer is made more impressive because it is called out by the question. But the impression made by a truth is still further deepened if the one to whom it is addressed can be induced to deny in advance—mentally and audibly—the possibility of the thing which is afterwards proven.

Amazed Disciples.

Christ knew what he could do, and he also knew that his possession of such infinite power was not fully understood by his disciples. They had seen him convert water into wine, cure the nobleman's son, and heal the impotent man at the pool of Bethesda; but each new miracle amazed them. How could they imagine the plenitude of his power or guess what he would deem it wise to exhibit that power?

The feeding of 5,000 did not, as a matter of fact, require the exercise of any more or higher power than the performance of any other miracle. There are no degrees in the infinite. As nothing, multiplied no matter how many times, still remains nothing, so the infinite, no matter how often divided, still remains infinite.

The multiplication of the loaves and fishes was miraculous only because the element of time was eliminated. Loaves are, in effect, multiplied throughout the time every year. Even grain of barley can feed a multitude if given time. If each grain that is planted yields an hundred-fold, a few generations will suffice to provide bread for any number.

Christ's Sympathy.

And so with the fish. They are busy supplying man with an important form of food. They not only contribute to the sustenance of man, but they collect what man cannot find or combine, but it takes time. Time, however, is of a truth that which the Almighty as grace, and the objects that fill all space.

Resides convincing his disciples that he was not subject to human limitations, Jesus demonstrated his sympathy for those who thronged to hear him.

Tolstoy declared that sympathy was the world's greatest need, and advocated bread labor—that is, earning one's own bread as a means of keeping one in sympathy with those who toil.

He said that it is not sufficient to have toiled in the past, but necessary to continue to toil. He insists that we first put the drudgery of life upon others, and then look down upon them because they do what we do not want to do.

Whether the Russian philosopher is entirely correct, it is certainly true that sympathy is one of the greatest human needs.

The Sin of Indifference.

"Man's inhumanity to man," it is said, "makes countless millions mourn," but there is a sin more heinous and therefore more injurious than positive injustice or inhumanity and that is indifference, or lack of sympathy. It was lack of sympathy in Dives that led Christ to arraign him so severely.

The rich man was inflicting no bodily injury upon Lazarus; he was guilty of no violence toward him; he simply was indifferent to his hunger and his suffering. Dressed in purple and fine linen, he fared sumptuously every day, while Lazarus, covered with sores, had to content himself with the crumbs which fell from the table of Dives.

The world is full of suffering today; some of it is due to lack of intelligence, and cannot be wholly relieved without removing a spur that is in the eye. Improvement, however, is illustrated by the parable of the Wise and Foolish Virgins.

Part of the suffering is due to lack of industry, and cannot be wholly removed without encouraging indolence. This story is illustrated by the Parable of the Talents.

The law of rewards recognizes the right of both intelligence and industry to compensation commensurate with service rendered. The most fundamental law of life would be nullified if the ignorant and the idle were permitted to share equally with those who have foresight and diligence.

Victims of Misfortune.

A still larger part of the world's misery is due to demoralizing habits and low ideals. Such suffering cannot be wholly removed. "The wages of sin is death."

But when proper allowance is made for ignorance, idleness and objectionable habits, there still remains much suffering that is due to causes that do not reflect upon the character or virtue of those who suffer.

Such victims of misfortune excite sympathy and deserve assistance. They furnish the sympathetic an opportunity to learn by actual experience that "it is more blessed to give than to receive." It is not only commendable to feel an interest in the unfortunate, but it is a reflection on one—a proof of hardness of the heart—not to be sympathetic to the point of generosity.

It was Christ who aroused the world to an understanding of the meaning of universal sympathy based on universal love. His life and teaching have inspired the altruistic sentiment that today moves the civilized world to build hospitals, asylums, homes for old people and eleemosynary institutions of various kinds.

Many who reject Christ as a Savior, and ignore him as a Teacher, have caught the spirit of the Master, and follow in his footsteps in this respect, while denying the source of the spirit of benevolence that actuates them.

Giving Thanks.

The same Jesus who went about doing good, who gave as an evidence of his Messiahship that the poor had the gospel preached to them, and who was touched at the sight of the people who seemed as sheep having no shepherd—this same Jesus was distressed when he saw a multitude of men and women so intent on following him that they endured hunger rather than turn back to their homes. It was to minister unto them that he performed one of the most impressive of his miracles—and performed it with as little ceremony as he would set a table for a few friends.

Here, as always, he gave thanks—a rebuke to the millions who devour what a loving Father has provided without a word of appreciation or a thought of gratitude. If those who witnessed this miracle of the feeding of the five thousand were convinced of Christ's claims, how can people dole out today after nineteen centuries have confirmed the Christian faith?

In all these years, no rival has appeared, neither has anyone been wise enough to add to or take from the moral code which he enunciated. (Copyright, 1924, for The Constitution.)

Armistice Day and Fallacies Concerning War

BY REV. W. P. KING.

Pastor First Methodist Church, Gainesville, Ga.

The churches are called upon to make recognition of Armistice day, and either on that day or the Sunday preceding to have such exercises as result in the strengthening of the world peace.

It may be well to notice some of the popular fallacies in defense of war.

There is the false conception of military glory, aside from the glory of the reasonableness of pacifism, the primary lesson that some people need to learn is the wretchedness and wickedness of the war.

No Job for a Timid Gal.

"That's just why you ain't me," retorted the model.

No Post, Gertrude.
Gertrude fair,
Nor chant the glory of your arms
So true,
I can't describe your eyes of blue,
Descend on Heaven peeping through.
Although these lures are all 'tis true,
Beyond compare.

Though modeled in a Venus mold
I cannot sport it,
Which my strong arms would fain enfold.
(Who'd doubt it?)
But, lady mine, I'll tell you this,
I'd rather place an ardent kiss
Upon those lips of honeyed bliss
Than write a poem about it.

Ear, Ear Kathleen!
Little Kathleen was discovered, one day, holding her head on one side and pouring water from a bottle on it.
"Why are you doing that?" asked her mother.
"Oh, I am pouring water in my ear, Mumver, to see if it will come out of the other ear."

barely distinguishable from up here.
Can you single out your friend Harry?"
Beth: "Yes, he's that handsome

With the Spooners.
"There is nothing new under the "No," chuckled the Cynic, "but love's old story is new sounds original

I Am Tired of Trick Endings.
I am tired of trick endings.
Whether they be in a novel, in a play, in a short story or whatnot, I am tired of them.
I am tired of the detective turning out to be the crook, and the French maid being, in reality, a female death dealer.
I am tired of the hard-hearted father being, in truth, a devoted parent, who has been merely testing the character of his rather gay offspring.

I am tired of the fellow we took all along for the villain developing into the chief of police in disguise.
I want to see things end as I am led to believe they will. Not as the author thinks is clever.
I am tired of trick endings.
There are altogether too many of them in actual life.

Dramatic Criticism.
"Kitty Landersdowne looked sweet didn't she? She was sitting with the Van Burings."
"Did you see the Stuyvesants? I thought they were still ahead."

MOVIES BY RADIO NEAR PERFECTION

London, November 1.—Two British electrical scientists claim to have found the secret of instan-taneous transmission of pictures by telegraph or wireless.

Soon they hope to speed their present apparatus to motion picture pace, thus adding to the terrors of listening in the prospect of spending every evening at home with the he and she vamps of the movies.

W. S. Stephenson, managing director of the General Radio Company of Great Britain, and G. W. Walton, a colleague, state that they have discovered a "light sensitive" device by which they can now send pictures almost simultaneously.

"In the near future," Stephenson said, "we hope to have instruments actually working which will be capable of transmitting pictures at the same speed as that which is necessary for the consecutive portralization of moving pictures—eighteen a second."

"Here is a picture," he handed the viewer a small photograph with a parallel line effect like a fine-screen half-tone reproduction.
"Which was transmitted by our method in 20 seconds. It is only a question of speeding up the apparatus to reduce the 20 seconds to the time necessary for the persistence of vision—the speed necessary in showing photographs to create the illusion that characters are actually moving."

Stephenson and Walton hold several patents for apparatus for transmitting pictures. The new "light sensitive" device, they claim, takes the place of selenium, the element now generally used to convert light into electrical waves, which can be sent over wires or wireless. There has been much difficulty in using selenium owing to its slow action.

Old Grand-Dad Of Vipers Made Home in Texas

Northampton, Mass., November 1.—
The granddaddy of all snakes, which said "hello" to a somewhat virginal world only about 25,000,000 years ago, was a monstrous lizard that roamed the state of Texas, according to Dr. W. H. Ballou, of New York, in a paper read before the American Society of Ichthyologists and Herpetol-ogists at Smith college here Saturday.

After going by the name of lizard for a matter of 10,000,000 years, Dr.
Ballou said, this creature awakened one October Sunday morning to find itself without legs, and in some mysterious manner most of most of its bones and minus a third blinker set squarely atop its head.

Seven million years later, there flourished in Patagonia what is regarded as the natural evolution of this snake-to-snake family. The exhibit then possessed ears, and an organelle that housed a flapping set of teeth that he swung out or in at will, to be used in seizing beasts of prey, or in masticating them after capture.

Just how descendants of this lizard-snake family later found their way into the Garden of Eden—and why—was not revealed in the address.

Rescue of Girl In Fire Equals Movie Thriller

New York, November 1.—Robert Beebe has never been a movie actor, but perhaps some of the film companies will bid for his services now.
A fire started in Beebe's office building Wednesday and spread so rapidly that it cut off the escape of both Beebe and Miss Estelle Stern, his secretary.

Only a telephone wire, stretched across a concrete court 20 feet beyond, led to safety on a nearby roof.
Beebe, doubling its strength, tried it first, and swung himself over to the roof. The girl then tried it, but was unable to swing herself, whereupon Beebe reached out and completed the rescue.

WHISKY, TOBACCO CUT THIS MAN'S LIFE SHORT—112

Belfast, Ireland, November 1.— Regular use of whisky, tobacco and strong tea finally got John Campbell.
He is dead here at the age of 112.
Campbell attributed his long life to the fact that he never had anything to do with women.

Just long ago as 1838 he expressed the opinion that the modern woman was not worth having, as she thought of nothing but dress and pleasure.

STATE REFUSES TO GIVE "BOARD" FOR TAXI RUSE

New York, November 1.—Alexander Dolowitz wanted a home. He ran up a $2 taxi cab bill on Michael Bell, chauffeur. He was arrested, but discharged when the cabman failed to appear against him.

Dolowitz begged the court to send him to jail anyway, pleading that he had no home. The court refused to provide one for him, even in jail.

The infant was 30 inches tall and measured 10 inches across his shoulders.
The mother survived, but the baby died.

Will You Match Twins for $500.00?

The Constitution Announces the inauguration of a Twin Matching Contest of pictures of twins to be Published each week for eight weeks in its Pictorial Gravure Section beginning next Sunday

FIVE HUNDRED DOLLARS

$500.00 will be offered in prizes for the best matching of twin pictures through the period of the contest.

Three hundred dollars ($300.00) will be given as a prize for the BEST MATCHING for the full series. One hundred dollars ($100.00) for the second best. Seventy-five dollars ($75.00) for the third, and twenty-five dollars ($25.00) for the fourth best.

Photographs of twin sets will be published from week to week for eight weeks in a group with pictures of other twins, and the problem is to

Cut Out and Match the Twins of the Same Set.

DO ALL TWINS LOOK ALIKE?

There is a difference of opinion about this. Some of the best photographers take the position that in some instances twins are utterly dissimilar, while others take the position that all twins are distinguishable by resemblance.

The Constitution's Pictorial Gravure Section is going to undertake a unique solution of this problem in the presentation of photographs of Georgia twins. These pictures of the same twins will not be published side by side, but in groups with other pictures of twins on the same page, the problem being to MATCH THE TWINS BELONGING TO THE SAME SET.

Try Your Skill Matching Twins for Five Hundred Dollars

The thousands who participate in this matching contest may do so without condition or restriction. They are simply to cut out of The Constitution Pictorial Gravure Section the pictures of the twins as published each Sunday, for eight Sundays, pinning or pasting them together in sets, writing the name and address of the sender to the TWIN CONTEST DEPARTMENT, The Constitution, Atlanta.

Do not mail responses until after the close of the contest, eight weeks from next Sunday.

Make your matches from week to week, holding them until the close of the contest and then forwarding the package in one envelope, with name and address of the sender plainly written both on the outside of the envelope and on a slip inside.

The contest will begin Sunday, November 9th, and will end with the issue of Sunday, December 28th.

The presentation of this feature in the first issue of The Constitution's Pictorial Gravure Section next Sunday will contain pictures of the same sets of twins in singles so that all the twins presented on this page may be matched. After the first issue, however, twins of the same set may or may not be presented in the same issue. The picture of one twin may be carried in one issue, the other to follow in a later issue, or both twins may be carried in the same issue.

It is important, therefore, that these pages be preserved from week to week during the period of the contest so that the matching of the twins may be completed at any time.

Contestants should clip all printed pictures of the twins from the Pictorial Gravure Section each Sunday. After the eight weeks of the contest is over the pictures should be assembled neatly in correct pairs and sent to the TWIN CONTEST DEPARTMENT, The Constitution—all in one large envelope or packet, to reach The Constitution not later than one week after the closing of the contest.

Each picture appearing each week will bear a number. This is to be disregarded by contestants, these numbers appearing solely as a guide for the judges, whose names will be announced later.

In the award of the prizes, in case of ties, the cash awards will be apportioned accordingly.

This is about all there is to say.

Look out for the twins and test your ability in this matching game. It costs you nothing to enter the contest. It is simply an interesting diversion for our readers.

The Masterpiece at The Gruen Guild

We hope you will take time this week to look at the Gruen Fiftieth Anniversary Watch which will be on display in our show windows.

This watch was designed by Mr. Fred Gruen in commemoration of the fiftieth anniversary of the Gruen Guild Watches. It is of White or Green Gold and has a movement of solid gold with jewels of rubies and diamonds.

It is of a most artistic Pentagon shape and is so balanced that it will not tip over in your pocket.

Mr. Gruen is said to have spent more than three years in designing this watch. When it finally equaled his ideal of what the perfect watch should be he decided to make just six hundred of them and to let each of their six hundred most representative dealers have one each. No more will ever be made.

No advertisement can describe this watch, or tell of the beauty of the gift box in which it comes. If you will take just a minute to look at it you will understand why.

Miss Ford Weds Linton R. Stames At Home Ceremony

One of the lovely weddings of the season was when Miss Floy Ford, daughter of Mrs. Ida Ford, became the bride of Linton Renault Stames, son of Mr. and Mrs. O. H. Starnes, Sr., of this city. The wedding was quietly solemnized at the home of the bride's mother, 968 Peachtree street, October 4, at 2 o'clock in the afternoon in the presence of the immediate relatives and friends of both families. The entire lower floor was elaborately decorated with palms, ferns and cut flowers. Bridal tones of green and white prevailed. The ceremony was performed in the spacious library. Stately palms formed the background of the improvised altar. The archway was supported by tall baskets holding white asters and pedestals holding cathedral candelabra, burning white tapers, which cast a soft glow over all. Preceding the ceremony Mrs. Backus rendered a program of nuptial music during the assembling of the guests. Entering to the strains of the wedding march from "Lohengrin" were Mrs. M. H. Bell, matron of honor and sister of the bride, wearing a lovely pink georgette frock trimmed in crystal beads and carrying Richmond roses and valley lilies. Little Wynona Bell, a niece of the bride, was the flower girl, wearing a lovely blue georgette frock trimmed in garlands of pink and blue French roses, and carrying a basket of pink roses. Marea Bell, also a niece of the bride, was the ring-bearer and was adorable in a yellow chiffon frock, carrying the ring in the heart of a rose. The bride was a pretty picture as she descended the beautiful fern and palm-decorated stairway on the arm of her brother-in-law, M. H. Bell, and was met at the altar by the groom and his best man, Howard Haire. The ring ceremony was performed by Dr. J. B. Mitchell, of St. Mark's Methodist church. The bride was lovely in a smart ensemble suit of brown cloth and satin, trimmed in fur, with hat and accessories to match. The bride's bouquet was bride's roses and valley lilies. Mrs. Ford, mother of the bride, wore a costume of black Niobe crepe, and carried pink roses. Mrs. O. H. Starnes, Sr., mother of the groom, was gowned in a beautiful black georgette and wore a corsage of pink roses. Following the ceremony an informal reception was held. Mrs. George Foster presided at the bride's table, which was overlaid with handsome Venetian cover. Silver baskets of bride's roses adorned the table and silver bon-bon dishes held pink and white mints and salted almonds. The bride's cake was beautifully embossed, containing the usual favors. Immediately after the reception the bride and groom left for an extended trip to the principal cities of Florida. The out-of-town guests were Mr. and Mrs. M. H. Bell, Misses Wynona and Marea Bell, of Montgomery, Ala.; E. M. Flynt, of Griffin, Ga., and O. H. Starnes, Jr., of Memphis, Tenn.

Is Honor Guest.
Mrs. J. E. Spurlock entertained at dinner and bridge on Tuesday evening in honor of Mrs. Howard Lawrence Miles, a recent bride, who before her marriage was Miss Frances Daniel. The guests included Mr. and Mrs. H. L. Miles, Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Boler, Mr. and Mrs. Blu Spurlock, Mr. and Mrs. L. G. McClair, Mr. and Mrs. L. C. Daniel, Mrs. W. E. Boatwright, Misses Helen Miles, Eleanor Montgomery, Katherine and Gertie Gilbert, Mrs. P. G. Lynch, Mrs. M. G. Daniel, Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Gouper and Mrs. J. E. Spurlock. Mrs. Miles is being complimented by many lovely parties. Among those who have entertained for her are Miss Eleanor Montgomery, Mrs. J. R. England, Mrs. T. J. Butler and Mrs. J. E. Boler. Other parties are to be given by Mrs. L. G. McClair, Mrs. Harry Pool, Miss Mildred Garwood and Miss Mae Ivey.

Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Stamps Kelley announce the marriage of their daughter, Virginia Caroline, to Henry E. Maddox, Jr., on Saturday, October 25.

Miss Bullard Weds
Lon H. Bell.
The marriage of Miss Virginia C. Bullard and Lon H. Bell took place Saturday afternoon at 6 o'clock at the Oakland City Baptist church parsonage, with the pastor, Rev. Broadus Jones, officiating. The ceremony was witnessed by only immediate relatives and friends. Mr. and Mrs. Bell will be at home to their friends at 212 Lawton street in West End.

Miss Alice Spellman
Weds George Pollard.
Savannah, Ga., November 1.—A wedding, beautiful in its simplicity, was that uniting Miss Alice Gertrude Spellman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Spellman, of Savannah, to George P. Pollard, of Jacksonville, solemnized on Thursday at the Cathedral of St. John the Baptist, the Rev. Father Foley, rector, officiating. The bride was given in marriage by her father; and Miss Genevieve Spellman, a sister, was maid of honor. Joseph P. Pollard was his brother's best man.

Following the ceremony a delightful reception was held at the home on East Charlton street, only a few intimate friends being invited. Later in the day the couple left for a bridal trip in Florida and will in two or three weeks be at home in Orlando. A number of out-of-town guests from Charleston, Waycross, Jacksonville, Tampa and other Florida points were present for the wedding.

Stone and Mr. Burgess Stone, of Thomasville, and Mr. and Mrs. Pinson Stanley, of Quitman.

After the reception Mr. and Mrs. Garner left for a motor trip to Miami and other points in Florida. Upon their return they will make their home in Ozark.

Miss Brown Weds Alexander Fraser.

Sweet Hall, Ga., October 31.—At high noon on Saturday, October 25, a very pretty wedding was solemnized at Brett-Reed Presbyterian church, when Miss Annie Roper Brown, eldest daughter of Mrs. C. M. Brown, of Sweet Hall, became the bride of Donald Alexander Fraser, of Savannah, Ga.

Rev. H. B. Fraser, of Tifton, Ga., brother of the groom, performed the ceremony.

The church was tastefully decorated with ferns, ivy and chrysanthemums.

The bride, beautifully gowned in white canton crepe and georgette with veil held in place by orange blossoms and carrying a shower bouquet of bride's roses and lilies of the valley, entered the church with her brother, Charlie M. Brown, and was met at the altar by the groom, with his brother Charles Fraser, of Hinesville, Ga., acting as best man.

The bride's attendants were her sisters, Mrs. W. C. Stowe, matron of honor, was dressed in orchid georgette over yellow silk, with hat to match, and carried an arm bouquet of sunburst roses. Miss Eloise Brown, maid of honor, wore yellow georgette over orchid silk, with hat to match, and carried an arm bouquet of sunburst roses. She was preceded by Misses Ruth and Virginia Brown, gowned in white georgette, with orchid hat, and carrying an arm bouquet of Ophelia roses, who acted as bridesmaids. Master Olin Fraser, nephew of the groom, in a suit of blue velvet, carried the ring on a white satin pillow.

Layton Fraser, of Richmond, Va., and John Hutchinson, of Walkerton, Va., were the ushers.

Mrs. B. Turner sang "Because," with Mrs. E. W. Geyer at the organ, after which the bridal party entered to the strains of the wedding march from Lohengrin. Mrs. B. Turner softly played "Love You, Truly," during the ceremony.

A delightful luncheon was served at the bride's home, after which Mr. and Mrs. Fraser left on an automobile trip for Richmond, Washington and the Shenandoah valley. On their return they will reside in Savannah, Georgia.

The bride is very popular here and has been a most efficient school here for many years. She is a graduate of Radford State Teachers' college. The groom is connected with the Southern Insurance Adjustment bureau and has his office in Savannah, Ga.

Mrs. Plato Durham presiding, Rev. Marvin Williams led the devotional, reading parts of the fourteenth chapter of Matthew, and using as his subject "Making the Most of Opportunity for Service."

Mrs. W. C. Jarnagin read a tribute to Miss Hattie Colquitt, written by Mrs. Florence C. Harris. Mrs. Fred Thomas sang "A Little Bit of Love." Mrs. Plato Durham made an annual report, showing that each committee had been very active during the year.

Dr. Harvey Cox, president of Emory, made a comprehensive explanation of Emory's relation to the hospital, and showed many ways in which the auxiliary could help.

Dr. Oppenheimer, the new superintendent of the hospital, was introduced and heartily greeted by the auxiliary. Dr. Oppenheimer told of how much the personal touch in the hospital meant to patients.

Mrs. B. M. Hall, Jr., chairman of the new hospital corps which is only ten days old, made a report of patients taken to doctor's offices and to station. She explained the need of volunteers for the corps who live near Emory.

Mrs. Bayne Gibson and Mrs. Preston Arkwright of the Golden Cross, were present. Mrs. Gibson told of the campaign for memberships, commencing at Thanksgiving.

The following chairmen told of plans for future service: Mrs. A. L. Norris, Mrs. McWhorter Milner, memberships; Mrs. W. M. Nichols, finance; Mrs. Eugene Allen, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Fred Thomas, recording secretary; Mrs. E. U. Carter, linens; Mrs. John Manget, baby ward; Mrs. Florence Harris, Mrs. Dennis, poultry shower; Mrs. Martha Boykin, library, and Mrs. J. W. Setze, publicity.

The meeting closed after singing "Praise God from Whom All Blessings Flow."

Mrs. Mamie Johnson is entertained.

Mrs. Mamie Johnson, worthy grand matron, O. E. S. of Georgia, has just completed a six weeks' inspection of the chapters in Atlanta and vicinity. Many entertainments were given in Mrs. Johnson's honor during her stay in Atlanta, among which was a beautiful luncheon at the Atlanta Woman's club, when over a hundred members of the order and their friends assembled. Mrs. Julia Turner, associate grand matron, presided as toastmistress in a most happy and charming manner.

During Mrs. Johnson's sojourn in Atlanta an inaugural memorial service was held on Sunday, October 19, at the First Methodist church, which was a tribute of affection paid to those of the Atlanta chapters who had "crossed over the river to rest under the shade of the trees." Mrs. Johnson and other grand officers took prominent part. Mrs. Johnson is also doing a great and constructive work for Georgia in her unselfish loyalty in advocating all activities which lends aid to protect the helpless and uplifts humanity everywhere.

Georgia Tech Freshmen To Give Historical Farce

"Sneezer and Cleopatra," a one-act historical farce, will be presented by the freshmen members of the Georgia Tech Marionettes at Washington seminary November 22.

This performance, the first to be given by the freshmen this year, is sponsored by the membership of the Phi Pi sorority of Washington seminary and offers as an added attraction music by the popular Marionette orchestra.

The play was written by Harry Ellerbe, author of the "Seventh Veil."

The popular musical play produced by the Marionettes last year, and directed by W. Fulmer Wells.

Only one scene makes up the entire act, which is "The Queen's Ruff Garden." The cast is composed of: C. L. Campbell, taking the part of Cleopatra, the wicked, wicked queen; Mr. Warnell, as Brutus; Mr. Bruce, as Sneezer; Mr. Crouch, as Cicerus; H. C. Allen, Jr., as the witch, and Mr. Gladwin and Mr. Bynum, the two-foot maidens.

College Park Music Study Club Gives Interesting Program

The College Park Music Study club gave a delightful program on last Wednesday afternoon, the first in an interesting series of studies of the old masters as outlined by Mrs. S. H. Young and her subcommittee. Mrs. Young read a most instructive, though brief, biography of Bach. Through the generous kindness of Phillips & Crew Piano company, a group of beautiful victrola records were heard; among these were Bach-Gounod's Ave Maria and Bach's Concerto for Two Violins in D Minor. Mrs. Clarence Wall sang very beautifully "Bach's My Heart Ever Faithful."

Mrs. Freeman Doss gave a brief outline of the life and works of Wolfgang Mozart, and Miss Christine Trimble, pupil of Miss Margaret Hecht, sang a lullaby by Mozart. Little Miss Regina Padney, one of College Park's most talented junior pianists, played Mozart's Minuet. She responded with a number of bright encores. Mrs. Florence Colson Bateman in her marvelous lyric-soprano, sang an aria from the Marriage of Figaro. Miss Blanche Roberts, one of Atlanta's most brilliant pianists and a member of the Atlanta Trio and the College Park Music Study club, played the piano accompaniments to all of the numbers on the program.

The next meeting will be a study session. Miss Morit and the drama department will study Ibsen's Doll House, and Miss Spain and her class will study rhythm, the second chapter in the study course textbook. Let all members arrive promptly at 8 o'clock at the Presbyterian church.

Mrs. Hugh Couch, president, will preside at the brief business session.

Miss Ruth Butler Weds James Palmer At Jacksonville

Jacksonville, Fla., November 1.—(Special.)—Mrs. Katherine Smith announces the marriage of her daughter, Miss Ruth Butler, to James D. Palmer, the wedding having taken place Tuesday evening, October 14. The wedding was a quiet event, only relatives and a few friends witnessing the ceremony, which was performed at the parsonage by Rev. C. W. Ross, pastor of the Riverside Christian church.

There were no attendants, and following the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Palmer left for points in the southern part of Florida, where they spent their honeymoon. They have just returned to Jacksonville, and are at home to their friends at 3010 Knight street, Avondale.

Mrs. Palmer, who is from Fitzgerald, Ga., has been in Jacksonville for a short time. She is originally from Atlanta, has resided in Jacksonville for the past five years, and is manager of the Florida Packard Motors company.

Japanese Silver Tea Will Be Given by Circle.

A Japanese silver tea will be given by circle No. 2 of the Woman's Missionary society of the Woodward Avenue Baptist church on Friday, November 7, from 3 until 5 o'clock, at the home of Mrs. W. I. Callaway, 177 Oakland avenue.

An entertaining program has been arranged as follows: Piano solo, Miss Marion Hope; reading, Miss Evelyn Corpe; vocal solo, Miss Leslie McMichael; reading, Miss Alene Ellis. The public is cordially invited.

Advance Sketches of the Extremely Smart Coats That Are the "Newest New" for the Winter Season

— TEN LUXURIOUS VARIATIONS FROM TOMORROW'S MUSE DISPLAY OF THE LATEST TURN 'NOW IN HIGHEST FAVOR.

The beautiful penny kashmana spiritedly furred in blue wolf is sketched to the left. Introducing the circular flare.

The stunning simplicity of the advance season is caught in this clever jammuna (cinnabar tone) of straight lines—with collar, cuffs and border of the new blue wolf. (Exclusively Muse.)

To the right is shown one of the most notable individual notes among the "newest new"—the Muse coat of fawnskin with double pahlmi collar and cuffs. (Exclusively Muse.)

The youthful note—bordered in a graceful whirl of natural lynx. A coat as coy as a song. The material is adorable jammuna, toned cranberry.

Another stunning jammuna, toned wilbur-brown, is this, to the left, with its coy flare bottom bordered in flying squirrel. One of the finest—coats in America.—In the Muse showing tomorrow.

To the left is one of the features of the all-star cast of Muse's coat array tomorrow—direct from Fifth Avenue—an oxblood cuir de laine ottoman, with dark blended mink collar and puff cuffs.

First to the right is the stunning black kashmana, over which Paris has been so excited. With its deep chin-chinnella collar, cuffs and flare ending—it expresses the luxurious glory of the new season at its height.

Atlanta Federation Makes Appeal for Transportation

Due to its popularity as a convention city, Atlanta has issued many calls to the women in the past to assist in the transportation of visitors at the various men's organizations, but the appeal of the Atlanta Federation of Women's Clubs for automobiles to transport the delegates to the coming convention of the Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs, according to Mrs. Newton Wing, chairman of the automobile committee, has been met with an even greater response than heretofore.

Mrs. Wing reports that she is receiving the hearty cooperation of the clubs and many of the club women in the city to this appeal, but as this convention will undoubtedly draw the largest attendance of any previous convention, many cars will be needed. All women who wish to have a part in this work are asked to get in touch with the members of the committee, while clubs, through a chairman appointed by the president, are asked to communicate with Mrs. Wing direct.

Cars furnished through a club will carry on the back of the car a sticker with the name of the club, which, of course, will not interfere with the convention sticker, which will be placed in front of the car. Mrs. Wing has been able to secure a very reasonable price on these stickers, and will be glad to give information regarding same.

Services of Committee.
The services of the automobile committee are first enlisted for the transportation of delegates from the Baltimore to the Atlanta Woman's club reception Tuesday afternoon. From the reception the visitors will be conveyed to the Baptist tabernacle

"ORIGINAL 13" WILL MEET ON MONDAY

Mrs. Norman Sharp, president of the Atlanta Woman's club, announces a meeting of the "Original 13" for Monday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock, at the clubhouse. This meeting will be held for the purpose of making arrangements for participating in a Georgia Federation meeting, during the convention in this city, and to discuss plans for other activities during the winter months.

This group is especially interested in advancing the junior work of the club, and is composed of 13 very energetic young ladies. Miss Florence Ober, chairman of the group, is especially anxious to have a full attendance of the members at this meeting.

For the evening program in celebration of Armistice day.

Wednesday, leaving the Baltimore at 4 o'clock, the delegates will be taken to Hospital No. 48, thence to the Stone Baking company for an inspection of this model and sanitary bakery, and to also enjoy a delightful supper to be served at the bakery.

From the Stone Baking company the visitors will be conveyed to the Atlanta Woman's club for the evening program.

Thursday, leaving the Baltimore at 4:30, the committee will carry the delegates to "Villa Clare," the beautiful home of J. J. Haverty, to a buffet supper tendered them by Mrs. Haverty and daughter, Miss May Haverty. The visitors will also be given the opportunity to inspect some of the wonderful paintings of art which adorn this home, and to also enjoy the hospitality for which Atlanta has become famous. From Villa Clare the guests will go direct to St. Mark's church for the evening program.

Each day the cars will form in line at the West Peachtree side of the Baltimore, facing the direction they will later take, and every arrangement has been made to expedite transportation to each affair planned.

Members of Committee.
Members of the automobile committee are as follows: Mrs. O. M. Bowling, chairman, Woman's Civic club, of West End, 20 cars; Mrs. George Ripley, 10 cars; Mrs. A. P. Treadwell, 6 cars; Mrs. Victor Kreighshaber, 5 cars; Mrs. S. T. Maddox, 5 cars; Mrs. Gordon Burnett, 3 cars; Mrs. W. W. Alexander, chairman, Buckeye Woman's club, 6 cars; Mrs. Howard McCutcheon, Mrs. J. Russell Porter, Mrs. Marion Harper, Mrs. Nathan Bach, Mrs. D. M. Holsenbeck, Mrs. Robert Maddox, Mrs. J. M. Stanton, Mrs. Arthur Merrill, Mrs. C. N. Weems, Mrs. W. O. Foot, Mrs. Harry Poole, Mrs. L. W. Rogers, Mrs. Arthur Hazzard, Mrs. Norman Poole, Mrs. A. R. Colcord, Mrs. W. F. Beckham, chairman, Atlanta Woman's club.

Mrs. Wing requests that members of the automobile committee who she has not been able to get in touch with report to her as soon as possible the exact number of cars available from their clubs or individuals.

BENEFIT PARTY TO BE GIVEN BY MRS. CARTER

A benefit bridge party is being arranged for Wednesday afternoon at the Atlanta Woman's club, sponsored by Mrs. E. V. Carter, who will be assisted in arrangements by Mrs. Alonzo Richardson and the executive board of the club.

Lovely prizes will be awarded. Many reservations have already been made, and judging from the recent attendance at the popular bridge parties of the club there will be a very attractive group at this time.

Mrs. W. B. Price-Smith, second vice president of the Woman's club, who has promoted the bridge parties of the recent season is enthusiastic over the interest displayed in this manner of entertainment. On Wednesdays and Fridays the club house usually presents a beautiful spectacle, with hundreds of lovely women eager to do honor to some one, by entertaining through this social medium, with a gorgeous array of shrubbery and blossoms furnishing a background for their entertainment and amusement. This also affords a splendid opportunity for the members of the club, who are working along their respective lines of endeavor, to become acquainted, get new ideas, and thereby improve in their already constructive activities.

Reservations for the bridge party of next Wednesday afternoon at 3 o'clock may be made by calling Mrs. Simmons, hostess at the club house, Hemlock 0225; or by calling Mrs. E. V. Carter, at her residence.

MRS. W. P. DUNN WILL PREPARE NEW PROGRAM

Mrs. W. P. Dunn, chairman of the fiction picture committee of the Atlanta Woman's club, is preparing a very interesting program along the line of promoting and advancing better motion pictures. She has a very interesting corps of workers and in this connection Mrs. Norman Sharp, president of the club, conferred with Mrs. Hays, president of the public relations committee of Motion Picture Producers, while on her recent visit to New York.

Mrs. Hays assured Mrs. Sharp that she is personally back of the movement to promote the best type of motion pictures and to bring the industry up to its highest possible development. His message through Mrs. Sharp to the women of the south was to patronize and encourage the high-type picture wherever shown and in this way, Mrs. Hays declared, women would have a powerful part in elevating the standard of the motion picture.

Through the courtesy of Mr. Hays, Mrs. Sharp visited the Famous Players-Lasky studio, on Long Island, to see a motion picture in the making.

Mrs. Norman Sharp, in a recent interview said: "I am convinced that with the industry under the direction and guidance of so conscientious a man as Mr. Hays, earnestly desirous, as he is, of the strongest cooperation, his good, we may look forward hopefully to a higher and more splendid development of the motion picture."

While in New York, Mrs. Sharp attended a tea at the home of Mrs. J. K. Gunby, formerly of Atlanta, on Park avenue, where she viewed some very lovely portraits of Mrs. Gunby's young daughters, which were painted by C. L. Wren, an artist of especial note whose work as a portrait painter has come into great prominence in New York city. Arrangements are now being made by which Mrs. Sharp hopes to have exhibited at the Atlanta Woman's club in the near future some of Mr. Wren's artistic work. Arrangements are also being made to institute some new and very interesting lines of work in the Women's club home economics department, beginning January 1.

"Among the most interesting experiences I had during my trip to the metropolis," stated Mrs. Norman Sharp, "was hearing a most inspiring lecture by Dr. Henry Van Dyke, president of Princeton university, at the vesper service of St. Paul chapel of Columbia university, one Sunday afternoon."

CIVIC DRIVE COMMITTEE ACTIVITIES

The civic drive committee of the Atlanta Woman's club, under the leadership and direction of Mrs. Newton C. Wing, has developed into one of the strongest committees of the club work, although practically still in its infancy, having been created just 18 months ago, it has become such a well known factor in the city, taken a leading part in all civic events of the city.

As the committee has a part in all of the drives in the city, actual work will begin with the Community Chest drive, when all Atlanta will rally to the aid of her charitable organizations.

Last year the committee raised $3,000 in three days. Mrs. Wing requests that all club members who wish to make a contribution to the Community Chest will do so through the civic drive committee, mailing check to Mrs. Arthur Hazzard, 70 West Eleventh street.

After the Community Chest drive comes Forget-Me-Not Day, November 7. At this time Five Points will be the headquarters. Following closely upon the heels of Forget-Me-Not Day is Poppy Day, November 11, when all thoughts will be centered on Flanders and the armistice. Mrs. Wing has appointed Mrs. Howard McCutcheon as chairman for the day, and the committee is expecting great results from her chairmanship work.

The committee on this day, in addition to Five Points, will be at the Metropolitan theatre, Georgia Tech and other points of interest. The social side of the committee is one of the most pleasing features. Every few weeks a party is given by some member of the committee; after each drive an affair is given in honor of the captain and her co-workers who have led in the drive. During the past year only bridge-dances were sponsored, and a great deal of pleasure as well as financial benefit was derived.

The executive board of the committee comprises the following members: Mrs. Newton C. Wing, chairman; Mrs. Arthur Hazzard, treasurer; Mrs. Frank H. Naelele, recording secretary; Mrs. J. H. Lorenz, corresponding secretary; Mrs. P. C. Fabel, telephone chairman; Mrs. Henry Manning, hospitality chairman; Mrs. Roger Wilson, entertainment chairman; and Mrs. George Ripley, press chairman. Representatives from the various departments of the club are: Mrs. B. M. Boykin, international relations; Mrs. Tom Brooke, junior division; Mrs. A. P. Phillips, hospital committee; Mrs. J. E. Springer, applied education; Mrs. W. B. Price-Smith, banquet hall committee; Mrs. Irving Thomas, house committee; Mrs. A. P. Treadwell, emergency committee; Mrs. Chester A. Smith, cooperative exchange; Mrs. W. D. Williamson, membership committee; Mrs. Cleve Webb, bulletin; Mrs. R. L. Belding, citizens' department; Mrs. J. A. Carlisle, home economics; Mrs. E. D. McDonald, public welfare; Mrs. D. F. Stevenson, literary department; and Mrs. Hamilton Douglas, finance department.

The captains-at-large are Mrs. Alonzo Richardson, Mrs. C. K. Ayer, Mrs. H. C. Rickmore, Mrs. Ernest Covington, Mrs. Eva S. Corrigan, Mrs. A. L. Cotton, Mrs. C. V. Hohenstein, Mrs. C. E. LaFontaine, Mrs. William Jordan, Mrs. Enrico Leide, Mrs. H. D. McCutcheon, Mrs. W. E. McCalley, Mrs. A. J. Merrill, Mrs. H. M. Nicholas, Mrs. A. O. Oehlwey, Mrs. Ben Perryman, Mrs. Calvin Standford and Mrs. J. L. Wheeler.

MR. HORNADY TO ADDRESS CLUB MEMBERS

The literature department of the Atlanta Woman's club will have as its speaker for Wednesday afternoon, November 5, John R. Hornady, a writer of note.

Mrs. W. F. Melton, chairman of this department, says, "this department is fortunate in securing Mr. Hornady as the speaker of the afternoon."

Mr. Hornady is a newspaper man by profession, having taken the full course from reporter to associate editor. He is a successful writer of negro stories, being the author of the famous "Ole" stories. In the past year he has had over a story a month accepted by the leading magazines; namely, McClure's, Metropolitan, Popular Finance, College Humor and many others.

Mr. Hornady has written numerous magazine and newspaper articles, some of the latter being syndicated through the Short-Ballot Organization, of which Woodrow Wilson was president.

He was twice elected commissioner of health and education of Birmingham, Ala.

The Fiction Lovers' Magazine, which was formerly the Metropolitan, ran a picture with a sketch of Mr. Hornady in the last issue.

At the meeting to be held at the club next Wednesday one of Mr. Hornady's short stories will be read by Mrs. W. C. Jernagin. Responses to roll call will be interesting current events, under the leadership of Mrs. Earl Scott, chairman of current events.

Mrs. J. B. McNeely will be heard in a group of songs with banjo accompaniment.

It is the purpose of the literature department to give a prize for the best short story written during the year. Mrs. Adelaide Howell Bowers, chairman of the short story, will give an intensive course in short-story writing beginning early in November. Also a prize will be given for the best poem submitted.

The meeting of the department will be held in the Palm room of the club house promptly at 3 o'clock. A cordial invitation is extended to all for Wednesday afternoon, November 5.

PARADE WILL BE STAGED ON SATURDAY

The market committee of the Atlanta Woman's club will stage an attractive parade next Saturday, celebrating the opening and broadening of

Educational Department Will Teach Foreign Languages

One of the most instructive phases of work carried on in the Atlanta Woman's club is the teaching of foreign languages, through the applied educational department of the club, of which Mrs. Fred Scantling is chairman, assisted by Mrs. W. O. Cheney.

Twice a week these classes are held and the women are especially enthusiastic over the French conversational classes, under the guidance of Mrs. E. M. Horine and Mrs. Ed Cullen. To lead up to the privilege of entering these delightful groups where French is studied by advanced students and only the French language is used throughout the gatherings, one has the privilege of taking French and Italian in grammar classes, with Mrs. Enrico Leide as the instructor.

Instructors in Languages.
Mrs. Horine and Mrs. Cullen hold the meetings on Tuesday and Friday afternoons, while Mrs. Leide instructs her classes on Tuesday and Thursday mornings. These lessons in both instances are given for the small fee of $5 a month, much less than private lessons could be obtained from most any instructors and so much pleasure as well as benefit derived from them.

Besides the French and Italian classes, Wesley Peacock, of the Peacock School for Boys, is conducting a class in Spanish at the Woman's club, which meets Tuesday afternoons and Saturday mornings. This class is an especially attractive feature of the Woman's club program, as it gives an excellent opportunity to the citizens of Atlanta to learn the language so necessary, because of the proximity of the Spanish-speaking people. Men who are connected with firms and corporations which are constantly branching out in their particular line of work, are given the opportunity to become familiar with the Spanish language at a most reasonable tuition of only $5 a month, with eight lessons a month. This would prove of invaluable worth to the young lady or man who expects to travel and come in contact with the Spanish people of this country and those of South America.

Psychology Class.

Mrs. Wesley Peacock is conducting a very instructive class in psychology at the club every Tuesday and Saturday morning, where several interested women are regular attendants. Mrs. Peacock uses a text-book for her instruction, and in her interesting style makes the lessons very attractive. The women of Atlanta are cordially invited to join this class of psychology, as well as the classes in Spanish, French and Italian, and may make their arrangements through Mrs. Fred Scantling, chairman of the applied education department of the club.

Another phase of educational work under the above department, which is being especially featured at this time, is the rural education and library extension division, under Mrs. Flora McDaniel Pitts. Mrs. Pitts is accomplishing magnificent work along this line and her division at this time has the care of two lovely mountain girls at Tallulah Falls school, by providing their clothing, books, transportation, etc., which work will especially redound to the credit of this energetic leader, under the leadership of Mrs. Pitts.

Mrs. Thomas Harmon, chairman of scholarships for the club, is also carrying on a most worthwhile work in obtaining scholarships for the young boys and girls of the city and state who need assistance in finishing their education. Mrs. Harmon has awarded many scholarships for this season.

The flower lovers' division, with Mrs. E. B. Crenshaw as chairman, is another very active committee of the educational department, as well as the division for planting memorial trees and Lincoln highways committee, under Mrs. Victor H. Kreighaber.

Mrs. Stocke Honored At Lovely Party.

A pretty party complimenting Mrs. Ida Stocke, of St. Louis, was given Wednesday by Mrs. R. F. Henry at the Robert Fulton hotel. The guests were Mrs. W. Murphy, Mrs. R. M. Lang, Mrs. H. B. Fosterman, Mrs. Dillard, Mrs. A. W. Cairn and Mrs. G. T. Flint.

One Would Cost a Fortune—Thousands Cost a Trifle!

You may have noticed how, every week, the laundry not only gets your family wash bundle, but Mrs. Brown's, who lives next door, and Mrs. Smith's, who lives down the street, and thousands of others.

Then maybe you have wondered how the laundry manages to do them all so quickly and carefully.

The answer is simple. Your laundry has many thousands of dollars invested in the finest, most modern equipment it can purchase. Equipment like the big, gentle washing machines that wash your clothes by simply cascading them in the water, and not by rubbing or scrubbing, as the old-fashioned washboard did.

—And the surprisingly easy extractor that takes out the surplus water without squeezing your clothes as the old time wringer does. The laundry can afford to give you clothes this service because it does thousands of washes each week. If your laundry had only one wash, like the washwoman, your bundle would cost thousands of dollars to wash.

Miss Tarver Honored At Luncheon By Mrs. Wallis

Miss Bob Tarver, whose marriage to Dr. Harold Boeck will be an interesting event of November 10, was delightfully entertained at a bridge-luncheon on Friday by Mrs. Ben Walker at her lovely new home on Montgomery Ferry road in Ansley Park.

The house was most artistically decorated with autumn leaves and yellow and white chrysanthemums, and Halloween ideas were attractively carried out in the decorations and refreshments. The ices were molded in the shape of black cats and the little cakes were like pumpkins.

The luncheon table was overlaid with an exquisite maderia cloth, and held as a central decoration a basket filled with yellow and white chrysanthemums.

Miss Tarver was presented with a dainty piece of lingerie, and top-score prize was won by Mrs. Jeff Hunt. This was a French perfume bottle. Mrs. Harry Camp cut the consolation, which was a pair of hand-painted candles.

Mrs. Wallis and her little daughter, Betty Ben, wore unique Halloween costumes.

Miss Tarver was beautifully gowned in a black lace dress fashioned over yellow satin, and trimmed with hand-made yellow roses.

Those invited were Miss Bob Tarver, Mrs. Jim A. McAllister, Mrs. Harry Dix, Mrs. Henry Mordica, Mrs. Jeff Hunt, Mrs. Harry Camp, Mrs. L. A. McCormick, Mrs. Arthur Cotton.

O'Keefe Jr. High Gives Carnival.

A successful Halloween carnival, staged and directed entirely by the students, was given on Halloween eve at O'Keefe Junior High school, Techwood drive and Sixth street.

The girls of the art department decorated the building in an original manner. The entrance to the main corridor was gained through the meshes of an immense cobweb and all the corridors were darkened and hung with gigantic tapestries of black and white in skeleton designs. This weird scene was brightened by the fantastic figures of elves, clowns and fairies calling their wares of gay balloons and the season's favors.

"The Dance of the Witches," originated by popular young dancers of the city, was wittily depicted by Misses Hazel Stamps, Phoebe Rhet, Lucile Beagle, Lucile Scheinbaum and Josephine Waterman.

Late in the evening the merry masqueraders went by in the passing review of Halloween and Miss Anne Connally was judged as wearing the most unique masquerade.

Kentucky Club Gives Reception and Dance.

The Kentucky Club of Atlanta entertained Kentucky students who are attending college in this city and vicinity, with a reception and dance at the Atlanta Woman's club Tuesday night. There were about 100 present. The entertainment was for the purpose of getting acquainted with the boys and girls who are sojourning temporarily in Atlanta, in order that members of the Kentucky club may aid in making their visits here more pleasant.

Mrs. Clarence L. Williamson, vice president of the club, was in charge of the program in the absence of Mrs. Abner Hord, the president. The musical entertainment was featured by vocal solos by Miss Geraldine Manshouse, of Ashland, Ky., a student at Agnes Scott college, and violin solos by Mrs. J. O. Sanders, a member of the club.

The reception committee was composed of Mrs. T. G. Woodford, Mrs. Frank Woodruff, Mrs. W. B. Price-Smith, Mrs. Cleburne Gregory, Mrs. C. L. Williamson, Mrs. W. F. Minich, Mrs. W. H. Wilson, Mrs. Henry Phipps and Mrs. George Deaman.

Georgia State College To Meet Saturday.

Mrs. Thomas A. Moss and Mrs. H. W. Pierce will be hostesses to the Georgia State College for Women's club at its regular monthly meeting on Saturday, November 1, at Mrs. Moss's home, 322 North Main street, East Point, Ga., at 3 o'clock. Every graduate and student of the college is invited to join the club.

Please call Mrs. Wilber R. Wilson, Dec. 1956-W, or Miss Helen Green, Hemlock 0195, if you are going to be present. Those going to street car will take the East Point or College Park car and get off at Bryant avenue.

Dr. Loveridge Will Deliver Lecture.

Dr. Blanche Grosbeck Loveridge will deliver a lecture on "The Holy Spirit" in the Biltmore hotel Sunday afternoon at 4 o'clock.

"Contacting the God-power through the Holy Spirit," says Dr. Loveridge, "is essential to a well-rounded human progress. Experience has shown us that to know God as Father and as Son brings great enrichment to life but the fullest development can be attained only when there is established also a third relation, namely, that with the Holy Spirit."

The lecture is open to the public and will be preceded by musical selections rendered by Mrs. Ethel Rees Stodghill.

Mrs. McCrorey, Bride, Honored at Tea.

Miss Goldie Hardy entertained at tea Saturday afternoon in honor of her sister, Mrs. Roy Boyd McCrorey, a recent bride, at the Wincoff hotel. The table held as a central decoration a lovely basket of pink and white dahlias. Pink unshaded tapers burned in silver candleholders.

Covers were laid for Mrs. J. C. Goodson, Mrs. Roy Boyd McCrorey, Miss Catherine Littlejohn, Miss Mildred Hardy, Miss Martha McCrorey, Misses Berta and Sarah Sandford.

Mrs. Bond Calls Kle Club Meeting.

Mrs. Edward F. Bond, president of the Kle club, has called a meeting to be held at the Elks' home Wednesday, November 3, at 11 o'clock.

This meeting is for the purpose of perfecting arrangements for the large dance which the club will sponsor on Wednesday evening, November 10. It is important that all members of the club attend this meeting.

Mrs. J. J. Condon is chairman in charge of this dance, which will be at the Elks' club on Ellis street.

Georgia Rebekah Staff Party.

S. A. E. Fraternity Plans Program Of Events for 68th Convention

In connection with the sixty-eighth anniversary convention of the Sigma Alpha Epsilon fraternity, to be held in Atlanta December 29, 30 and 31, a round of social affairs of particular interest to the college and younger society contingent is being planned by the Atlanta alumni of the fraternity. Arrangements for the various entertainments to be given in honor of the visiting delegates are being made by a committee composed of Baxter Maddox, Strother C. Fleming, Robert T. Jones, Jr., Spencer Tunnell, Jr. and Warren H. Toole, Jr.

Convention headquarters will be at the Biltmore hotel where all business sessions will be held. The social calendar will be as follows: Sunday, December 29, afternoon reception to incoming delegates at the Tech and Emory chapter houses. Sunday evening, 8 o'clock, memorial service in the ball room of the Biltmore, to be followed by model initiation, conducted by members of the supreme council of the fraternity. Monday, December 30, 7:30 o'clock, convention banquet in the ballroom of the Biltmore. Tuesday, December 30, afternoon trip to Stone Mountain where convention photographer will be taken. Tuesday evening, 10 o'clock, convention dance at the Piedmont Driving club. Wednesday, December 31, 7:30 o'clock, farewell frolic and vaudeville show in the grill room of the Biltmore hotel.

In addition, entertainments will be arranged for visiting ladies during the hours that the convention is in session. Interest of Atlanta belles and the many young ladies from other cities who will be here for the convention will enter in the dance at the Piedmont Driving club on the evening of Tuesday, December 30, as this will be one of the notable events of the holiday season.

The opening hour of the dance has been set at 10 o'clock so that as many of the delegates as may wish to do so many attend the concert to be given by the Cornell Glee club that evening in the auditorium of the Woman's club.

The chaperones for the dance will include: Mr. and Mrs. Dixon Adair, Mr. and Mrs. Lee Asher, Dr. Edgar G. Hallenger, Dr. and Mrs. William Troy Bivings, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Welborn Blalock, Mr. and Mrs. Sherwood R. Blodgett, Mr. and Mrs. J. Epps Brown, Mr. and Mrs. Claud E. ATLANTA, GA., SUNDAY MORNING, NOVEMBER 2, 1924.

A Unique Exhibit and Demonstration Starts Tomorrow---Monday---Rich's Second Floor

Introducing the "One-Hour-Dress" to All Atlanta Women

Silk Stockings in Paris Shades, $1.11

—Silk stockings at Rich's to match or harmonize with the gown of the well-dressed autumn woman! Golden brown, beige, light gray, Russian calf, silver, airdale, nude, black. Such lustrous, silky stockings, too—and all full-fashioned. You would gladly pay $1.50. All sizes 8½ to 10. Lisle reinforced garter tops.

Be Sure: Have Your Stockings X-rayed!

—The Showtex light used exclusively at Rich's X-rays your stockings and shows you the defect—if there is any.

—RICH'S, STREET FLOOR

Make Your Own Lamp Shade!

—What sheer joy there is in combining colorful silk and lace and bits of gold braid and French flowers and finding suddenly, as though brought into being by a magic wand—a flower-like, lovely lamp shade. —You'll find an expert teacher at Rich's who will give you instructions free of charge—for making any sort of shade—for bed light, floor lamp, table lamp, boudoir lamp. That is—of course, provided you purchase your materials at Rich's. You'll find that we carry a complete line of silks, beads, fringes, etc.

—RICH'S, SECOND FLOOR

New Ribbon Flowers that Blossom to Order.

—The single flower, boutonniere or bouquet is now definitely a vital detail of the fashionable afternoon, dinner or evening gown. Whatever the predominating color of your costume, you can have flowers to match or blend with it—at Rich's. Complete to order, 50c to $2.50.

Gay Gardenias, 59c.

—This delightful fad of Fashion in various colors and materials—leatherette, lacquered materials, velvet. Cotton ones, 59c. Others up to $1.25. The new Carnations, $1.25.

—RICH'S, STREET FLOOR

Chillier Every Day! Women's Vests, 79c

—Such warm, good vests these of fleece-lined cotton. High neck and long sleeves. Ankle length pants to match. The quality that women would willingly pay $1 for. Regular and extra sizes.

Women's Union Suits, 59c.

—Buy all you'll need for colder days soon to come. Wide knee, closed style. Band top or bodice top with strap over shoulder. Sizes 34, 36, 38. Ordinarily 75c. —Children's fleece-lined union suits, waist style, ages 2 to 8, $1. 10 to 12, $1.25.

—RICH'S, STREET FLOOR

Embroidered Banding for Fashionable Frocks

—A touch of color, a bit of bright braid and lo a distinctive note is added to the otherwise common-place frock! At Rich's embroidered banding in combinations of colors, 1 to 3-in. wide at 29c to $3.

Silk Laces, 69c.

—The making of many a delightful evening or dinner dress. The wanted black and white embroidered in gold or silver, as well as all white and tan, and rust and black. —Venise banding, 2 and 3-in. wide, 79c yd.

Beavertone Trimming, $1.50

—When did cat fur trimming ever play such an important role in fashion's program? This beavertone trimming is new and very effective. 1-in. wide at $1.50, 2-in. at $2.75, and 4-in. at $4.50. —Silvertone at $2.75 and $4.50. Mink dyed squirrel, $3 to $22.50.

Coats—Subtly Flatter

RED in coats—the thought of the hour. Decried by famous designers, here and abroad; accepted by fashionable women, red coats have become a matter of absorbing interest—so lovely are they. Becoming to the appreciative blond, to the medium complexion, and to the wondrous beauty of the dark Spanish type.

—There are several shades, as you'll see tomorrow, in the Fashion Shops (third floor). Warm, rich colorings—Etruscan, cranberry, oxblood. Colors as beautiful as anyone could well desire. They combine with smooth fabrics and soft furs. $75, $97.50, $125.

—RICH'S, THIRD FLOOR

Dance Frocks—Naïve

ROMANCE—done in chiffon, filmy gorgettes and gleaming satins. Such individual frocks, these, to dance away the happy, romantic hours. To emphasize their charm designers have made prominent use of ostrich, which is so very, very smart. Ostrich—ah, that is where real genius is revealed. Hem borders of ostrich. Clever corsages, backed with ostrich. So many alluring ways. Ostrich to add grace to every movement of the dance.

—Straight, tube-like, graceful frocks, remarkable at their price, $35. Glowing yellows. Lush greens. Dull rich tones of reds. Retentive violet shades.

—RICH'S, THIRD FLOOR

Showing How to Make a Frock With'n 60 Minutes!

Learn This New Method Any Day This Week Without Cost---

9:30 to 10:30 A. M. and 3 to 4 P. M.

—Imagine buying material for a dress in the morning and finishing it to wear to afternoon tea the same day. Or think what joy it would be to come home from the office and make a dress in time to wear in the evening.

—Impossible as it may sound, this is exactly what you can do if you know this new, simple method of dressmaking—a method devised by the Women's Institute, Scranton, Pa. And Rich's has arranged special demonstrations twice a day all this week. You can actually see these clever dresses made in an hour and shown on a living model. You can learn to do it yourself.

Two Experts Will Explain The Process Step By Step

—These two young women come from the Woman's Institute, Scranton, Pa.—the largest woman's school in the world. By attending this demonstration, you will be shown how to make a dress at merely the cost of materials. Think of the savings on this season's wardrobe alone! In addition, a book explaining the process from start to finish will be given you when you purchase material for your dress. —A book containing 17 different versions of the One-Hour Dress.

—YOU are invited to come—see the display in five windows—attend the demonstration—Piece Goods Section, Second floor.

DON'T FAIL TO GET THE FREE INSTRUCTION BOOK —RICH'S, SECOND FLOOR

Chiffon Velvets, Appear in Black, $3.95

—But appearing in black, they by no means suggest somberness. Black velvets make most festive evening frocks—frocks admitted to stardom by Fashion herself. You can make one of these gowns in an hour. 40-in.

Satin Cantons, $2

—These will make up beautifully into the "one-hour dress." Navy, black, brown, dark, tan and light brown, 40 in.

Satin Charmeuse, $1.85

—Another fashionable material that shows the world a smiling face. Think how little a dress length will cost! Black, navy and brown, 40-in.

Costume Velvets, $2.50

—For beautiful gowns—gowns for those who like colors as well as black. Velvets with a superb loveliness that endears them to women, 36 in.

Satin Crepe, $2.95

—Most economical—as you can use either—or both sides of the material. Black, navy, light brown, tan and gray, 40-in. Make a dress from it in one hour! —RICH'S, SECOND FLOOR

New Plaid Tweeds, Scotch as a Thistle, $1.95

—They will make up into such "youthifying" "One-Hour Dresses." In bright, warm colorings that are a part of autumn and winter. Just figure for yourself how little the "makings" of a frock will cost at $1.95 a yard! 54-in.

Good Notions

—Needles, pins, sewing silk, thread, scissors, seam binding, and everything else needed to complete the "One-Hour Dress" will be found on Rich's Street Floor.

—"BUTTON, BUTTON, everybody's got the button" this season, it seems! That's why Rich's has such a good supply.

Rich's, Street Floor

Charmeen, $5.65

—The fabric that has a twill surface with a soft bloom that makes it very beautiful. Navy, brown, black and other wanted street colors, 54-in.

Imported Flannels, $4.50

—And whether plaids or stripes are smartest, you'll be unable to decide—for both are so good looking. In so many colors, surely your favorite is here!

Wool Flannels, $2.95

—Think how little a flannel dress will cost at $2.95! You'll surely include one in your fall wardrobe—especially when you can make it in an hour! Many colors, 54-in.

WINTER SOCIAL SEASON OPENS WITH BRILLIANT FUNCTIONS

Whirl of Gaieties Features Opening Of Winter Season

Now that the winter's social season is in full swing, its whirl of gaieties will continue by its own momentum through a week filled with affairs of social and cultural interest. The Peachtree Garden club will meet Monday afternoon at 3 o'clock at Woodhaven, the home of Mrs. Robert F. Maddox. E. S. Draper, of Charlotte, N. C., and Atlanta, will talk on "The Landscape Design of Suburban Estates." The members of the club are requested by the president, Mrs. Phinizy Colhoun, to bring examples of the chrysanthemums now blooming in the individual gardens, with the name of the flower and clubmember on the tag attached to each blossom.

Woodhaven will again be the scene of an interesting gathering on Tuesday, when the Fine Arts club will meet with its charming hostess. "A morning of verse and music" will comprise the program, which will be rendered by Katherine Tift Jones, discuse, and Georgia Price, accompanist.

Art lovers will throng the gallery of the Atlanta Woman's club all week to view the tenth annual exhibition of the work of local artists, projected by the Atlanta Art association. The exhibition art exhibit at the Atlanta Biltmore will remain open during the week and will continue to attract numbers of interested Atlantans.

On the evening of Tuesday, November 4, social importance will be attached to the special election night celebration at the Atlanta Biltmore hotel. Dinner will be served at 8 o'clock, dancing to begin in the handsome Georgian ballroom at 9 o'clock, a unique feature of which will be the election returns displayed on a screen in the ballroom.

The chrysanthemum show of the College Park Woman's club will assemble the flower lovers of the city on Wednesday. This interesting annual event will be held at the home of Mrs. C. E. Dodson, 124 West John Carlton avenue, College Park, from 3 to 5 o'clock.

Now, that the buds of the season have danced their way into the hearts of society at the brilliant Halloween ball Friday evening, they will entertain and be entertained at parties galore. Miss Mary Ballenger will be hostess at the dinner-dance at the Biltmore Wednesday evening in compliment to Miss Catherine Raine and Miss Henrietta McCormick, of Eufaula, Ala., an admired visitor in the city. Miss Erskine Jarnagin will be hostess at the tea-dance Saturday at the Biltmore for Miss Mary Ann Lipscomb, Miss Louise Nelson and Miss Aileen Harris.

Among the lovely parties to be given for friends and visitors by the young matrons of society will be the luncheon at which Mrs. Bryan M. Grant will entertain at the Piedmont Driving club on Tuesday in honor of Mrs. Earle D'Arcy Pearce. Mrs. Robert Woodruff will be hostess at a tea on Friday at the Piedmont club in compliment to Mrs. W. T. Elder and Mrs. Martin O'Mara, charming visitors from New York. Mrs. Carnet Torian, of Evansville, Ind., will arrive Monday to visit Mrs. Lott Warren, Jr., and Mrs. Barnard Boykin will have as her guest for the week Mrs. J. Williams, of Jacksonville, Fla. Mrs. Warren, Mrs. Boykin and Mrs. Rogers Toy will be among those entertaining for these two attractive visitors.

Fall brides-elect will come in for their share of attention during the week. Miss Katherine Bowie Stewart will be honored at parties to be given by Miss Louise Bent, Miss Isobyl Barker and Mrs. Jack Clarke. Miss Anne Foote, another bride-elect, will be honored guest at a bridge-tea which Miss Maude Powers will be hostess Wednesday afternoon.

Miss Frampton Will Wed Samuel Dobbs.

Owing to the prominence of the families of the young couple and their own popularity among a wide circle of friends, the engagement announced today of Miss Marjorie Frampton, of St. Louis, and Samuel Candler Dobbs, Jr., formerly of Atlanta, but now residing in St. Louis, will be of extreme interest.

Miss Frampton is the eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Craig Frampton, of St. Louis, Mo., and is a young woman of exquisite beauty and high mental attainments. Her family is a pioneer one of Missouri and has long been identified with the social and financial life of St. Louis.

Miss Frampton was educated at the Mary Institute in St. Louis and during her senior year was chosen rose queen at the annual pageant. She continued her studies at Sargent's, in New York, also, specializing in voice culture under Mlle. Hardy.

The beautiful bride-elect is an accomplished horsewoman and golfer. Her unusual beauty and popularity won for her the extraordinary compliment in 1923 and 1924 as maid of honor to the queen of love and beauty at the "Veiled Prophets Ball," which is the most brilliant event of the St. Louis festival season.

Mr. Dobbs is the only son of Mr.

and Mrs. Samuel Candler Dobbs, Sr., of this city, and a brother to Mrs. Lynn Howard, formerly Miss Mildred Dobbs. His family has been prominently identified with the constructive phases of Atlanta's development and holds an enviable position in the social and cultural life of the city. He is a great-nephew of Asa G. Candler, Sr., Judge John S. Candler and Bishop Warren S. Candler.

Mr. Dobbs received his education at Tech High and Emory university. He is a member of the Kappa Alpha fraternity and during his residence here was a popular member of the younger social contingent. He has made his home in St. Louis for the past four years and holds a responsible position with the D'Arcy Advertising company. He is a member of the St. Louis Algonquin Country club and City club.

The date of the marriage of Miss Frampton and Mr. Dobbs will be announced later.

Miss Erwin To Wed Mr. Sumner, of England.

An announcement of interest in Atlanta and London, England, is the engagement of Miss Catherine Campbell Erwin, of Atlanta, and Bernard Allan Sumner, of London, England.

Miss Erwin is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Cowan Erwin, who are representatives of aristocratic and influential families. Mr. Erwin is a beloved Atlanta citizen, occupying a prominent position in banking circles as vice president of the Citizens & Southern bank.

On her maternal side, Miss Erwin is related to the well-known Schuyler and Daykin families, of New York state, these two families being among the first Dutch settlers in America.

Thomas C. Erwin, Jr., of New York, formerly of Atlanta, is a brother of the lovely young bride-elect.

Miss Erwin attended the North Avenue Presbyterian school, later going to the National Cathedral in Washington, D. C. She spent two years traveling in Europe after finishing school and again visited abroad this past summer, accompanied by her mother.

The attractive bride-elect is a popular member of the young social contingent and is an admired member of a wide circle of friends. She is an active member of the Junior League and during the world war she rendered splendid service to the Red Cross.

Mr. Sumner is the son of Mrs. Harold Sumner and the late Mr. Sumner, of Weybridge, Surrey, England, a fashionable suburb of London. Mr. Sumner's father was president of the Maritime Insurance company, of England.

On his maternal and paternal sides, Mr. Sumner is descended from distinguished English and Scotch ancestry.

During the world war, Mr. Sumner served as captain for five years in the British army, being detailed in Egypt, Salonica, Constantinople and Gallipoli.

He resided in Atlanta for two years, holding a responsible position with the J. W. Goldsmith company, and also figuring prominently in the cotton industry.

Mr. Sumner is a graduate of Uplington, a leading college in England. He now holds a high position in the insurance field in England and is a member of several exclusive clubs in London.

The date of the marriage of Miss Erwin and Mr. Sumner will be announced later.

"Election Night" Dance To Be Tuesday.

Of wide interest throughout the state is the announcement by the Atlanta Biltmore hotel that it will hold an "election night celebration" next Tuesday, November 4, in its Georgian ballroom. The affair will be in the nature of a dinner-dance during which detailed election returns will be projected on a large screen.

The event is expected to prove one of the most novel in the history of local society circles. Many reservations are being made, and a large number of out-of-town visitors are expected. Macon, Athens, Columbus, Monroe, Buford and other cities throughout the state will be represented among those present. Dinner will be served beginning at 8 o'clock and dancing and returns will begin at 9 o'clock.

Among those who have reservations are Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Speer, E. G. Beaudry, Mr. and Mrs. Albert Salzbrinner, J. T. Williams, A. J. Williams, W. H. Brittain, Dr. W. S. Ekin, Dr. George E. Woodard, N. Hirsch, Jackson Scott, Fred Stone Barr, Robert Matthews, and others.

Other events of wide interest at the Biltmore during the week will be the concert-dinner on Sunday evening, beginning at 7 o'clock; the tea-dances in the Pompeian grillroom Tuesday and Saturday afternoons; the dinner-dance sponsored by the Debutantes club on Wednesday night, beginning at 8 o'clock; and the musicals of the Atlanta Music club on Wednesday morning.

At the Tuesday tea-dance Mrs. W. T. Clummon will have a party of ten. Mrs. J. S. Smith has a reservation for five.

New York Critic Praises Mary Ellis.

The following article from The New York World, written by Deems Taylor, will be of interest to the ## Lovely Visitor at "Wingfield"

Miss Virgil Haddon, of Gainesville, Ga., the attractive guest of former Governor and Mrs. John Marshall Slaton, at their home, "Wingfield," on Peachtree road. Miss Haddon has been the recipient of many delightful social affairs since her arrival.

many Atlantans who are friends of Mary Ellis, who is starring in "Rose-Marie," a musical comedy, on Broadway. She is the niece of Mrs. Benjamin Elsas, of Atlanta, whom she often visits.

"The opera begins next week, which means that this department has got to settle down and go in for art, so that, with Eva Gautier tonight and the New York Symphony tomorrow night, yesterday evening was just about our last chance in a long time to spend an uncomplicated evening.

So we went to "Rose-Marie" at the Imperial, and had a grand time. "Now it would never do for an accredited music critic to hail the score of a musical comedy as a masterpiece, and accordingly, made cautious by recollections of "Cosi Fan Tutte," "The Mikado" and "L'Heure Espagnole," we decline to rate the score of music of "Rose-Marie" more than moderately high, either as regards inventiveness or workmanship. But that stern verdict does not alter the fact that it is very tuneful music, easy to hear and very, very difficult to avoid humming, unless you are careful. Being good American musical comedy stuff, it is of course vastly more attractive and infinitely more sophisticated and amusing than some of the more trying Italian operas in the Metropolitan's repertoire—"The Barber" and "William Tell," for instance.

It was Mary Ellis who made us decide to hear "Rose-Marie." We used to see her at the Metropolitan, where she contrived to make the unimpeachable role of Sibel in "Faust" positively bearable. We say her last as Metyl in the operatic version of "The Bluebird" (for maybe it was Tyl, the little girl, at any rate), and we thought then: If that girl ever gets a good vehicle she will amount to something. "Rose-Marie" is not perfect but at least it is better than "The Bluebird," and Miss Ellis decidedly amounts to something. She is, in fact, utterly charming. She has vivid beauty and vitality that combine to make her always interesting to watch, and her voice is even better than it was in her Metropolitan days. Its upper register is clear, without a suspicion of shrillness, its lower notes are warm and expressive, and she uses it well. Occasionally she forces it—which is natural enough; for the staging of "Rose-Marie" is just the least little bit noisy at times, but she need not do that. The quality of her singing would carry in almost any vocal ensemble.

Mr. Bracken Makes Series of Drawings.

The Pictorial Review is printing a series of drawings featuring the Ten Commandments. These drawings are the work of Leone Bracken, noted artist who married Miss Mildred Ehrlich, of Savannah. The first of the series appeared in the October number of the magazine. It is significant in its minutest detail, and wonderful delineation of character, which is typical of Mr. Bracken's work. He is among the leading illustrators of the country.

Brilliant Horse Show Ball in Savannah.

A brilliant ball was given at the De Soto hotel in Savannah Thursday evening, bringing to a close the social festivities attendant upon the horse show which was staged in that city last week. It was the most interesting event of the autumn social season.

Among the out-of-town guests composing a party were Fred Jeter, Mrs. Stacey Earnest Hill, Mrs. J. E. Bracewell and Miss Hunter, all of Atlanta, and in another party were Mrs. Wilshire Riley, Miss Ellen McDuff, Miss Marjorie McLeod, Mrs. C. J. Kerandis, of Atlanta, and Mrs. Robert Turner, Jr., of Chattanooga, and Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Westmoreland, of Augusta. Beautiful favors suggestive of the horse show as well as of the Halloween season were used, and the large dining room where the ball was given was thronged with dancers.

New Members Elected To Junior League.

Much interest is attached to the announcement of the new members of the Junior league, as only a limited number of girls can be invited to join each year.

The new members are Miss Rebecca Ashcraft, Miss Mary Ballenger, Miss Louise Cramer, Miss Constance Cone, Miss Will Hawkins, Miss Mary Ann Lipscomb, Miss Louise Nelson, Miss Ellen Newell, Miss Callie Orm, Miss Catherine Raine, Miss Ida Saddler, Miss Harriett Sheldon, Miss Anne Stringfellow, Miss Mary Tuller, Mrs. Clark Howell, Jr., Mrs. Holland Judkins and Mrs. Edwin Cole, Jr.

The main charity work the Junior league is sponsoring this year is connected with the Good Samaritan Gland clinic. Every morning and afternoon a member of the league transports to the clinic the deficient children and those who need medical attention, from the English Avenue school, especially, and from other schools and families where the children have no way of getting to the clinic.

The second meeting of the Junior league of this fall will take place at the Piedmont Driving club on Tuesday at 3 o'clock.

At this meeting the new members will be welcomed. Another feature of this meeting will be a talk about the work at the Good Samaritan clinic by Dr. Arch Elkin, and it is hoped that as many of the league members as possibly can will be there. Tea will be served following the meeting.

Many Parties Given At Tea-Dance.

The tea-dance at the Atlanta Biltmore Saturday afternoon assembled a large crowd of Atlanta society. Tea was served in the Pompeian grill room of the hotel, and attractive dance music played.

Dr. and Mrs. Delos Hill entertained the members of the Foot-Woody wedding party.

The tea table was attractively decorated with little white bells tied with satin ribbons. The place-cards and favors were suggestive of weddings.

Covers were laid for Miss Annie Foote, Jonathan Woody, Miss Sarah Foote, Miss Elizabeth Peoples, Miss Martha Boykin, Miss Bright McKemie, Miss Louise Barnwell, Miss Louise Cooper, Mrs. Maud Powers, Mr. and Mrs. W. O. Foote, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Troutman, Mr. and Mrs. Russell Porter, Mr. and Mrs. Phil Ammons, Mr. and Mrs. Homer Thompson, Tom Tennant, Rogers Jones, Eugene Beauchamp, Richard Bennett, Frank Johnson, Reynolds Barker, Preston Stevens, W. O. Foote, Jr., Kelly Alexander.

Miss Eugenia Buchanan, granddaughter of Mrs. Leon Swift, daughter of Mrs. Laen Swift Hunt, and one of the season's loveliest daughters of Mrs. Laen Swift Hunt, were Miss Eugenia Buchanan, Miss Maria Brown, Miss Telside Pratt, Miss Catherine Raine, Miss Lucy Elizabeth Harper, Miss Ellen Newell, Miss Maybelle Newell, Miss Elizabeth Buchanan, Paul Rymann, John Hig-tower, Clifford Smith, Richard Hobbs, John Whitmeir and Jules Welsh.

Miss Louise Nelson was honor guest in a party given by Weston Hamilton. His guests were Miss Mary Ballenger, Miss Callie Orm, Miss Mary Sheldon, Miss Erskine Jarnagin, Miss Margaret Nelson, Miss Hurst will be in charge.

Carolyn Nicholson, Miss Aileen Harris, Jack Sharp, Richard Hull, Edward Van Winkle, Esmond Brady, Lawson Kiser, Charles Tuller, Forry Welby, Stanley Pearce, Roland Jones, of Seawane, and Lowry Nicholson.

T. V. Morrison entertained Miss Virginia Courts, Miss Mary Jimmie Patisio, Johnny Greer and Albert Anderson.

Mrs. H. M. McPhail entertained in compliment to Mrs. J. A. Alexander's visitor, Mrs. Mandel, the guests including Miss Marjorie Doonan, Miss Marion Swanson, Mrs. Trimble Johnson, Mrs. Mandel and Mrs. Alexander.

Others entertaining were Mrs. J. Johnson, G. W. Chambers, Mrs. E. P. McBurney, Mrs. Carling Dinkler, R. J. King, Clifford Bryant, James Joplin, Mrs. Ross Hunter, Mrs. George O. Young and Mrs. Daniel.

Art Association Has Exhibit.

An exhibition of pictures by local artists under the auspices of the Atlanta Art association opened Saturday evening in the art gallery of the Atlanta Woman's club. The exhibition is open to the public. Admission free.

Attention of school children is called to the three prizes of $10 each offered by Mrs. Albert Thornton for the three best essays on the picture most liked and why. Conditions were published last week. For further information consult school teachers.

Many Dances To Be Given This Week.

The Hurst dancing club will entertain on Wednesday evening, November 5. The Tango club will give a dance on Saturday evening, November 8, at Hurst hall, at Peachtree street and North avenue. Pomar's Bohemians will furnish the music for both occasions. Prof. Edward S. Jarnagin, Miss Margaret Nelson, Miss Hurst will be in charge.

Beautiful Debutantes and Lovely Brides-Elect of the Season

At the left is Miss Marjorie Frampton, beautiful daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Reynold Craig Frampton, of St. Louis, Mo., whose engagement is announced to Samuel Candler Dobbs, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Candler Dobbs, of Atlanta. Miss Mary Clarke Ballenger, daughter of Dr. E. G. Ballenger, and Miss Eugenia Buchanan, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Claude E. Buchanan, upper right, two of the loveliest debutantes of the season who were formally presented to society at the Halloween ball at the Piedmont Driving club Friday evening. Miss Catharine Campbell Erwin, charming and attractive daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Cowan Erwin, is in the lower photograph. Her engagement to Bernard Allman Sumner, of London, England, is an interesting announcement made today. Photographs of Miss Ballenger and Miss Buchanan by Wesley Hirschburg, while Miss Erwin's is the work of Thurston Hatcher.

Mrs. Beers Gives Party for Miss Bradley.

A lovely affair of the past week was the miscellaneous shower given by Mrs. Frederic L. Beers at her home in College Park complimenting Miss Marian Bradley, whose marriage to

William M. Brewton will be an interesting event of November 15. The spacious home was lavishly decorated with Marie Antoinette baskets of roses and large floor vases were filled with chrysanthemums and dahlias. The dining room table was spread with a lace cloth and decorated with a large Jack Horner pie carried out in every detail. Miss Flor

Bradley and Mrs. Ruth Lanier were the first prizes, and the consolation prize was cut by Mrs. A. L. Slade. The honor guest was presented with a handsome crystal bottle of smelling salts.

Mrs. Beers was assisted in entertaining by Mrs. Charles D. Center and Mrs. Walter G. Cornett, of Atlanta, who is her guest. Miss Bradley was charmingly gown in gray orocaded crepe, trimmed with blue, with hat to match. Mrs. Beers wore white silk trimmed with real lace.

The invited guests were: Mrs. J. D. Conley, Mrs. Hugh Couch, Mrs. Leonard Martin, Mrs. Edgar S. Caven, Jr., Mrs. John P. Bradley, Mrs. C. D. Center, Mrs. Willie T. Osburn, Mrs. Artie L. Slade, Mrs. R. E. O'Keefe, Mrs. W. W. Taylor, Mrs. Charles Mount, Mrs. Mary J. McAfee, Mrs. Kate Price, of Athens, Mrs. Leo Stillman, Mrs. W. E. Whitehead, Mrs. Melba Camp, Mrs. Walter G. ## Georgia State Nurses To Meet in Athens.

The Georgia State Association of Graduate Nurses will hold its annual meeting in Athens, Ga., November 17-19, inclusive. The Georgian hotel has been selected as headquarters.

Miss Henderson Is Honored at Party.

Miss Marie Williams was hostess at a miscellaneous shower recently, given in honor of Miss Sarah Henderson, a charming bride-elect. The home was artistically decorated with beautiful fall flowers and Halloween colors. An unusual contest was enjoyed. Mrs. B. Manning winning first prize. Miss Rosa Lee Holt won consolation. A unique idea was the presentation to the bride-elect of her shower gifts in a large basket carried by little Miss Elizabeth Brown and Master Ray Smith, who were dressed as bride and groom and entered to the strains of the wedding march. Assisting Miss Williams was her mother, Mrs. Z. O. Williams. Those invited were Misses Georgia Manning, Gyp Smith, Sarah Suddath, Lella Murdock, Hester Murdock, Rosa Lee Holt, Ruth Carson, Bertha Ramer, Mrs. F. K. Frye, Mrs. V. L. Streetman, Mrs. Beattie, Mrs. E. C. Gramling, Mrs. J. M. Reagan, Mrs. Lee Nabers, Mrs. Charles Holt, Mrs. George Sims, Mrs. L. P. Wilson, Mrs. Oliver Lindsay, Mrs. L. P. Suddath, Mrs. C. M. # Atlantan Praised By Famous Critics Writes First Book

BY BESSIE S. STAFFORD.

Miss Frances Newman dipped her pen in violet ink last summer and wrote her first book. "The Short Story Mutations, from Petronius to Paul Morand," is the title, and the first edition is due from the publishers within the week.

Everything Miss Newman writes is delightfully done in her original characteristic vein and style, for she has a natural flair for writing. Her previous articles won immediate recognition from the American press and attracted widespread attention.

"Miss Frances Newman I would without any hesitancy, rank with Mrs. Eleanor Wylie, as the most opulently gifted of all the younger women publishing in America," says James Branch Cabell, distinguished Virginia author, in the snappy, brilliant sentence written for the paper jacket covering the book. It is bound in violet and fuchsia cloth, the favorite colors of gifted Miss Newman, whom H. L. Mencken, editor of the American Mercury, and young intellectual, calls "a violet in the southern Sahara."

Eleanor Wylie, as you all know, wrote Jennifer Lorn, and many other interesting books, so that it's the most pleasing and thrilling of compliments for the famous Mr. Cabell to rank Miss Newman in her class. "All the other women will have to confess they're older, or don't write so well, and both are equally mortifying," says our charming Miss Newman, who is justly thrilled over Mr. Cabell's declaration.

In "The Short Story Mutations from Petronius to Paul Morand," the author considers Petronius, arbiter of elegancies at the court of Nero, the real founder of the story as we know it, and she traces the succession through the French fables which already show the spirit of Voltaire and Anatole France to the Gesta Romanorum and to Boccaccio and Voltaire. The influence of Hans Christian Andersen on the twentieth century is given one of its earliest recognitions, and "The Miracle of the Roses" is the first of Jules Laforgue's charming Moralities Legendaires which has been published in America. The chapter on Laforgue is particularly timely just now, when his influence is greater than it has been at any time since he and the other French symbolists were the inspiration of Oscar Wilde and Aubrey Beardsley and the other Englishmen of the nineties.

From Laforgue and Marjorie and Mannequin a succession passes to Henry James and Chekhov and Joseph Conrad, and then to Sherwood Anderson and D. H. Lawrence and James Joyce. "The Freudian primitives," as the author calls them. The last story is Paul Morand's "The Nordic Night," from his "Ouvret la Nuit," which was published in America and published in England only in a translation which Ernest Boyd said "contains errors a schoolboy would be punished for."

Paul Morand is a very noted modern writer. He was the last inspiration of her book. She met him in Paris and had her first love affair. It was really apropos of his "Ouvret la Nuit," that the theme of the story was suggested to Miss Newman. Another interesting feature is that B. W. Heusch, her publisher, was suggested by her style of writing by these articles appeared in the Constitution on her literary work. He wrote and asked for the privilege of printing his first book. And thus it came to pass.

Miss Newman and her nephew, Louis Rucker, reside on Seventeenth street where "The Short Story Mutations" has been a beloved member of the Newman family for over 40 years, keeps house and watches over them just as she did in their childhood days when she taught them to flip their first words, and held their baby fingers to guide them safely in taking their first steps.

And Speaking of Puzzles.
The crossword puzzle fever seems to have seized Atlanta. You're certainly not in want of these November days unless you do puzzles and have solved them!

And speaking of puzzles, the palm for working them successfully, and for being one of the most devoted wives in Atlanta, one who believes absolutely in one's husband, should, without question be awarded to Mrs. Lowry Arnold.

There's a cute little story concerning this popular Atlantan which runs like this: Mrs. Arnold is a motherly devotee of the puzzle craze, and builds the record of solving nearly all of those contained in the two familiar columns which everybody seems to be following. Close to her sat Mr. Arnold in their Pershing Point apartment, engrossed in reading his evening newspaper, never for a moment glancing up, says when she called on him to help her guess a word. Then, he would pretend to think very deeply, scratch his head and wonder how to relate—he always told her the exact answer.

Mrs. Arnold was very proud of him and never lost a single opportunity to tell her friends "Lowry is awfully clever on this puzzle craze. He never fails to give me the correct word." Now, can't you picture Mr. Arnold smiling—that pleased and satisfied smile so natural with all of us when somebody we love says we're perfect? Wonderful! Not until she went to New York last week to visit her sister, Mrs. St. Julian Ravenel, did he have the heart to write and say, "I had a 'pony' hidden behind my newspaper every evening which gave me the answer to every one of your crossword puzzles." If you're human, and

Miss Ellard, of Cornelia, Weds Mr. Moultrie, of Rome

Mrs. Luther Gwaltney Moultrie, formerly Miss Flora Franklin Ellard, of Cornelia, Ga. The marriage of Miss Ellard and Mr. Moultrie was a beautiful event of October 23, taking place at the home of the bride's parents, Judge and Mrs. William Benton Ellard.

Cornelia, Ga., November 1.—The wedding on October 23 of Miss Flora Franklin Ellard to Luther Gwaltney Moultrie, of Rome, Ga., was a beautiful event taking place at the home of the bride's parents, Judge and Mrs. William Benton Ellard.

The wedding guests assembled at 4 o'clock in the afternoon, and were received by Judge and Mrs. Ellard, who stood in the artistically decorated reception hall which was a bower of deep yellow chrysanthemums intermingled with foliage in the rich autumn tints. The same lovely autumn motif in color, was carried out in the parlor and dining room, and the stairway, down which the wedding party descended, was massed with yellow chrysanthemums studded with white wedding bells, outlined by ribbon streamers.

An improvised altar of ferns and white chrysanthemums in the drawing room marked the place where the bride and groom stood, and a soft glow was cast over the wedding scene by tall candelabra holding lighted tapers. Completing the pretty floral decoration was a large wedding bell, snowy white chrysanthemums showered with tiny feathery buds and narrow white satin ribbons.

The wedding attendants included Miss Lucile Duckett and Miss Isabelle Coffey, bridesmaids; Miss Clyde Ellard, maid of honor; Miss Helen and John Ramey, of Rome, best man, and Leonard Ellard and W. B. Ellard, Jr., groomsmen.

The bride was given in marriage by her father, the one-time attorney-at-law, who was dressed in a smart suit of dark green velvet and metal cloth. Her flowers were of the most delicate of the valley.

The pretty maid of honor, Miss Clyde Ellard, wore a gown of green georgette crepe headed in gold embroidery.

Flower Show at College Park To Present Lovely Blossoms

The College Park Woman's club will hold its annual chrysanthemum show Wednesday, November 5, at 3 o'clock, at the home of Mrs. C. R. Dodson, on West John Calvin avenue. College Park is noted for its beautiful flowers, and this display of gorgeous blossoms promises to add new luster to its long and glorious record of wonderful exhibitions.

P. J. Haden, one of the most successful flora-culturists of this department, will stand at the head of the display of flowers, and this display of gorgeous blossoms promises to add new luster to its long and glorious record of wonderful exhibitions.

Mrs. Oscar Pelmore, first vice president, widely known for her prize-winning flowers as well as for her publications on flower culture, will have a number of entries.

Mrs. D. R. Nesbit, who recently won most of the first prizes in chrysanthemum at the fair, will be an exhibitor.

Mrs. L. O. Freeman, president, has been especially successful in the cultivation of asters, one of the most difficult flowers to grow.

The members of the executive board will receive with Mrs. Dodson, the hostess, and Mrs. Haden, department chairman. The club's beautiful silver vase will be awarded for the best collection of 12 blooms of four varieties, three of a kind. Second and third prizes will be awarded in this group of entries. First, second and third prizes will be given for whites, yellows, pinks and bronzes. Each of these exhibits must be composed of seven blooms of one color.

Among those entering the contest are Mrs. Louise Stakely, Mrs. Henry Godby, Mrs. C. Q. Trimble, Mrs. E. J. Huggins, Mrs. H. E. Wall, Mrs. T. H. Poreh, Mrs. D. B. Nesbitt, Mrs. B. D. Gray, Mrs. Oscar Pelmore, Mrs. P. J. Haden, Miss Lucille Moultrie, and others.

Tech Woman's Club Gives Lovely Party At Tech Y. M. C. A.

Mrs. W. S. Taylor, Mrs. H. G. Rogers, Mrs. F. C. Snow, Mrs. S. E. Rogers and Mrs. K. P. Goehagan formed a committee from the Tech Woman's club in charge of the exquisite decorations for the party given Thursday evening at the Tech Y. M. C. A.

Misses Juliette Crenshaw and Mary Snow gave the arriving guests several Halloween cards which caused each man an anxious search for his other half. The united pair, with book and line, sought the respondents which were guarded by the game warden, Mrs. T. W. Fitzgerald, Mrs. H. W. Mason and Mrs. R. T. Taylor. The lucky angler and his partner fished for numbers which entitled them to prize "catches."

Punch from the generous Mi-Grande company brought exclamations of delight when the guests appeared at the tables which were graced by Mrs. H. P. Black, Mrs. F. C. Shaffer, Mrs. A. P. Hewlett and Miss Ruth Paden.

A refreshment committee, Mrs. C. B. Seal, Mrs. J. B. Edwards, Mrs. J. M. Watters, Mrs. J. R. Jenness, Mrs. D. P. Savant and Mrs. William McLaurine, served the guests with a menu of white ribbon folly, envy's eyes, demon's delight, fortune's wheels, giant fingers and fairy rings.

"Adiheyaka" Girls Give Dance.

"Adiheyaka" Camp Fire Girls of Atlanta Woman's club entertained their friends at a late and delightful Halloween tea-dance Thursday evening.

The spacious banquet hall of the club was most artistically decorated. Bunches of many-hued foliage adorned the walls and were also arranged in handsome baskets with an occasional pumpkin grinning at the merry dancers. Music by the Georgia Railway and Power Company orchestra, under the direction of Professor D. N. Baldwin, was most generous and inspiring. Pupils of Mrs. La Fontaine gave several beautiful dances.

The guests included other Camp Fire groups, Thirteen Originals' club of the Woman's club and girls from Washington seminary, girls' high, Woodberry Hall, North Avenue Presbyterian school, Boys from Emory, Oglethorpe, Georgia Tech, University of Georgia, Marist and many others.

The hostesses were Miss Frances Wilkerson, president of "Adiheyaka," and Miss Ruth Brooke, treasurer, assisted by Miss Grace Jackson, social chairman; Miss Margarette Steedman, editor-in-chief of "Embers," Camp Fire paper, and Miss Mildred Nelson, Clunger, president Atlanta Woman's club; Mrs. Tom Brooke, chairman junior department; Mrs. M. D. Farnham, chairman Camp Fire; Miss Helen Jazley, assistant executive secretary of Atlanta Camp Fire; Mrs. Paul LaBlant, Mrs. B. H. Palmer, Mrs. Frank McCormack and Mrs. Robert Scott.

Elaborate Benefit To Be Staged By League of Women Voters

An event of the season of social interest will be the unique bridge musical to be given by the Atlanta League of Women Voters at the Ansley roof Wednesday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock.

Mrs. Paul LaBlant, together with her co-chairmen, Mrs. M. D. Farnham and Mrs. Ben Simcox, have made elaborate plans for the party. There will be presented a musical sketch by some of Atlanta's most talented musicians. Mrs. William Owens, soprano, will give a group of folk songs, accompanied by Mrs. F. C. Birdsong, who will also render a number of selections on the piano. The well-known young dancer, Master Maurice Tupman, who has achieved much fame on the Howard theater stage, will give some interpretative dances. Miss Lightfoot, talented reader, will give some of her impersonations, and Mrs. Jennings, well-known in theatrical circles, will sing some of the latest songs in syncopated jazz.

Those people who will play bridge are asked to bring their own cards and score pads and pencils. If anyone wishes to play mah jongg, she must bring her own set.

Mi-Grande punch will be served. The table and seat prices will cover everything. The league members have secured a number of beautiful prizes to be given away. Among them are two baskets of beautiful flowers, a dozen cakes, a bath mat, a set of hand-made buffet doilies, a set of Madeira doilies, iced-tea sippers, a leg of lamb, some dry-cleaned tickles, three bottles of bath salts, two oilcloth breakfast-room sets, two guest towels, an assortment of toilet articles and canned and bottled goods. There will be a prize for every table consisting of a vanity box given by the Colgate company. Through Mrs. Ben Simcox, a beautiful residential lot, three acres, near the Y. W. C. A. has been obtained to give away.

Mrs. Nicolson, the newly-elected president, was before her marriage Miss Elizabeth Tuiler. She served as secretary with the One Hundred and Fifteenth infantry, Twenty-Ninth division, under the auspices of the Y. M. C. A. She was known throughout the A. E. F. as "little states" and was working in her service for the enlisted American soldier. Since her return from overseas Mrs. Nicolson has been active in her work for the ex-service men, giving a large amount of time and energy to the disabled soldiers at United States hospital, No. 48. The executive ability, high ideals and complete understanding of the work of organized women, possessed by Mrs.

Nicolson, enables her to assume the head of the Overseas club, which is composed of Atlanta women who served overseas during the world war. Following the election of officers Saturday, Mrs. N. O. Tribble, the retiring president, turned the meeting over to Mrs. Nicolson. Plans were made for helping to finance "Carry On," the national organ of the Women's Overseas Service League, and it was voted that the unit, cooperate with the American Legion and do everything possible to help Poppy day to be a success.

Mrs. Nicolson announced that the interest this year on the money that the local unit has invested for child welfare work would amount to about $250. The unit has several thousand dollars invested, the interest from which is to be used yearly in some kind of child welfare work.

General John F. Ryan, of New York City, will be the principal speaker at the armistice observance celebration that will be held on the evening of November 11 at the Baptist tabernacle. The following committee will cooperate with a committee from ## Lecture Given By Rev. Parker.

Members of St. Paul's Missionary society and their friends enjoyed a spiritual as well as intellectual feast last Monday afternoon at the church, when Rev. F. N. Parker, of Emory university, delivered a lecture on the gospel of St. John.

The eleven circles of the society had been studying St. John for the past two years in their Bible study classes, and their hearts and minds were ripe for the great truths brought out by this able scholar.

The meeting was opened with the song, "Take Time to be Holy," followed by prayer by the assistant pastor, Rev. M. L. Underwood, and closed with an invocation by the pastor, Rev. J. E. Ellis.

The program for this meeting will have to do with "China's Day of Advance." The note of thanksgiving and praise which sounded throughout the different numbers on the program, especially the devotional lesson, "The Steward and the World." Radio messages from China will be read and an interesting dialogue regarding our work in China will be given.

The president, Mrs. S. F. Boykin, urges a full attendance of members and friends who are interested.

Miss Walker Weds Sam A. Pierce.

Miss Agnes Walker and Sam A. Pierce, both of Cairo, who were solemnized at high noon Friday, October 31, at the Cairo Methodist church.

The impressive ring ceremony, performed by Rev. W. C. Jones, an uncle of the bride, was witnessed by a large assemblage of relatives and friends. The church was beautifully decorated with palms, ferns and southern smilax, with baskets of large yellow chrysanthemums and other cut flowers in effective arrangement.

Preceding the ceremony, "Because" was sung by Cecil Bowers, of Meigs, with piano accompaniment by Mrs. Irma Beale, of Cairo.

To the strains of Mendelssohn's wedding march, played by Mrs. J. W. Shanley, of Rochelle, sister of the groom, came first the ushers, Wayne Walker and Frank Massey, followed by J. B. Roddenberry and Tom Jones, all of Cairo. Miss Mae Walker, sister of the bride, as maid-of-honor, came next. She was handsomely gowned in almond green tulle silk.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, Dr. W. A. Walker, presented a charming figure in her gown of gray charmeuse, with hat of blue and silver, and with other accessories to match her costume. She carried a bouquet of bride's roses, showered with lilies of the valley.

The groom was attended by his brother, W. B. Pierce, of Edison, as best man.

Just as the last words of the ceremony were uttered, "God Touched the Rose," was sung by Cecil Bowers.

Immediately after the ceremony the young couple left by auto for an extended wedding tour, after which they will be at home in Cairo.

The bride is the eldest daughter of Dr. and Mrs. W. A. Walker, and she has always been a most popular member of her set. She received her college training at Wesleyan, in Macon, specializing in art. She made a splendid record there, particularly in athletics, being voted the best athlete her last year in college.

Coming here from Edison several years ago, Mr. Pierce has become very popular in business and social circles. Since graduating at Gordon institute he has become widely known as a musical leader. He is now director of the Cairo band, in addition to other business connections.

Among the out-of-town guests there were Miss Kate Shanley, of Rochelle, and Mrs. T. W. Pierce, of Edison, parents of the groom; Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Pierce, of Edison; Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Singletary, of Marianna, Fla.; Mrs. Pierce Wood, of Vilas, Minn.; and Mrs. C. S. Hodges, Jr., of Bainbridge.

State P.-T. A. Executive Board Transacts Important Business

The following notes are issued by the state publicity chairman on the executive board meeting, Georgia Branch National Congress Parents and Teachers, largest in the history of the association, held at the home of Mrs. Bruce Carr Jones on October 24:

The report of Mrs. Fred Wessels, president, to the executive board, showed that she had turned out a prodigious amount of work, systematizing and inaugurating several new features in the presidency of the association, and that she had not failed to see that only a very small part of this expense came from our state treasury. Mrs. Wessels brought to her new office a modesty and unselfishness that has always characterized her work for P.-T. A. and the appreciation of the board members was shown in a unanimous rising vote of confidence in her regime.

First District—Mrs. O. L. Gresham announced district conference at Oliver, November 5.

Second District—Mrs. J. L. Hoffmayer announced district conference early in November at Sylvester, when she will be given an "How to Organize." Four specific objects in view is to organize pre-school circles, each association to get one new one; subscribe to child welfare, and attend district conference.

Fourth District—Mrs. Reynolds Flournoy announced district conference already held at Carrollton, October 10; three new associations, and to visit every association in district, having already visited six.

Fifth District—Mrs. S. V. Peterson first to send in complete list of district chairman.

Twelfth District—Mrs. John Poe; district conference early in December; several new associations.

Dr. J. S. Stearns, advisory member of the board, told of the great success of the accredited course and discussed plans for next summer.

Burr Blackburn, secretary, State Council of Social Agencies, talked on the next meeting in child welfare, which is to hold the home together, to rehabilitate it, not break up and then start a new institution, and urged that P.-T. A. present to their members the Digest of Child Welfare Problems prepared by the state council.

The board voted to contribute $25 to the State Council of Social Agencies in appreciation for the help received from it at various times during the year.

It was also voted to hold the state convention in conjunction with the Georgia Education association convention in Macon next April.

Miss Susan Matthews, chairman of nutrition, gave excellent plans for the circulation of nutrition score cards through P.-T. A. membership and awarding of prizes to associations scoring highest.

A plan of Mrs. J. Phil Campbell, director of health, for securing prizes for health work in P.-T. A. was also discussed.

According to the report of Mrs. Otto Kolb, the endowment fund is approaching the $1000 mark, at which the interest may be used for extension purposes, $500 being the sum in hand.

Mrs. Harry A. Gibson announced very definite plans for press work and urged appointment of a local press chairman to send in more items of news.

Mrs. Bruce Carr Jones made a report on the Bulletin and work in connection with the summer courses and extension.

Mrs. Arthur Tufts announced all the program booklets paid for, and she is following up each item in the newspapers with more detailed suggestions for program.

Mrs. George Howson, director of public welfare, whose subcommittee were all present, announced a conference of her department, and plans to get behind all bills relative to child welfare.

Mrs. B. H. Sullivan reported very definite plans already under way for the social hygiene committee, three district chairmen already appointed, and her readiness to recommend a splendid list of books for both children and parents on sex education.

Mrs. Edward Ash Everett reported attending the P.-T. A. course at Athens and plans for a questionnaire, which will be amplified for the observance of book week.

Mrs. J. Nunnally Johnson reported for better films that she had been acquiring, through a questionnaire, some very helpful information and had a list of approved films ready for local associations wishing it.

Mrs. J. C. Caldwell, chairman of the convention program, announced that the national president, Mrs. H. I. Reeve, would be present, and the hope to secure Mrs. Cora Wilson, national chairman of the literacy commission.

Mrs. E. H. Kalmon, legislation (federal), urged the stressing of the "Six P's" legislative program of the national organization.

Mrs. L. P. Puckett reported some very definite plans for American citizenship with an outline for each P.-T. A. with six objectives: (1) The flag salute (state flag also to be considered). (2) Visit foreign parents and encourage them to become naturalized. (3) To have program on citizenship. (4) Patriotic pageant once a year. (5) Award medals for historical, civic and patriotic essays. (6) Assist local work.

Mrs. Robert Lassiter reported efforts to secure district chairman for the country life committee. This work is to be carried out by the plans from the demonstration which the national congress is putting on in North Dakota, which will soon be available.

Mrs. Charles Hilburn, director of education, made a suggestion that the governor be requested to proclaim February 17 as child welfare day for general observance. This suggestion was heartily adopted.

Mrs. A. F. McGee, chairman of thrift, announced her gift of 500 more leaflets on the subject of thrift.

Mrs. Clifford Walker, unable to be present, reported that she had secured a scholarship at Columbia university for Miss McAlpine, formerly with the State College of Agriculture, for a course of training for pre-school organization work, this course including, besides parenthood training, several hours a week of actual social welfare observation in New York city. Eleven young women from other states are taking the same training.

Mrs. Bascom W. Murrain reported definite accomplishments for physical education work, calling attention November 21 being physical education day during the education week.

Peachtree Heights P.-T. A. Will Honor Mothers

The mothers of children in the Peachtree Heights school, who have never attended a meeting of the parent-teacher association, are to be guests of honor at the regular monthly meeting of this body, which will be held Tuesday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock in the auditorium of the Peachtree Heights school. A varied program has been arranged.

The membership committee is planning a drive for new members. Every member present at the meeting Tuesday is to be given a card of five names, which will entitle this duty: that the holder of the card is to see that the five persons named on the card are kept notified of the parent-teacher meetings and other work in which they, as mothers of school children, should be interested.

Splendid improvements have been made for the school by the house and grounds committee, Mrs. E. C. Green, chairman. First, the drinking fountains for both boys and girls have been completed and are now in operation.

The use of a big, near-by field has been secured for basketball and football grounds. This will allow these games to go on without taking space from the children who are too small to indulge in such active sports. A border of burlap was bought for the second grade's use. It is said that these borders are a stimulus to the children's interest in picture work, because it gives an artistic and pleasing effect as a background for their color and figure work.

The welfare committee, Mrs. Miller LeHatte, chairman, has completed the health charts for the children. Every mother is to be notified monthly of the increase or decrease, as the case may be, in her child's weight.

As much as an understanding of the child's physical condition as good work as an abundance of energy and health, this chart will act as a barometer in determining how much the child should be allowed to do, and to establish a relationship between home and school life, which too often is left out of consideration. Child welfare work is to receive the best efforts of the Peachtree Heights Parent-Teacher association and nothing will overshadow this phase of the year's work.

A great deal of gratitude is being expressed over the fact that it is so rapidly taking form and that it gives promise of bearing such good results.

Many of the mothers have children in the Peachtree Heights school are cordially invited to attend the meeting on Tuesday afternoon at the school.

Mrs. Brandon and Mrs. J. B. Montgomery were appointed delegates to the P.-T. council luncheon next Friday.

The fifth district school is also affiliated with the P.-T. A. and Mrs. Brandon will assist in receiving on P.-T. night during the state convention. Reports from all chairmen were read.

Miss Ruby Jones, the principal, announced a Halloween party at the school on Friday afternoon, and asked all the mothers to cooperate with the children, and teach them the difference between frolic and lawlessness.

Mrs. Harry A. Gibson, state publicity chairman, and publicity of the Georgia branch of Parent-Teacher association, issues the following message:

"For the benefit of the press chairmen who are unfamiliar with the duties of their new offices, I am giving below an outline of the work required of each local and district press chairman, which I believe will help materially in the work which we are trying to accomplish. I want clippings from our local papers over the state of Georgia, which would be of value in the state news. When your association pulls off something unusual, let's not be stingy with the information, let's pass it on over the state to the smaller associations who are trying to grow in strength. Your state chairman of publicity is anxious to hear you talk about your home association as to what you are doing and what you are striving to do. Write her some time. This is one of your duties, too."

Local—Each P.-T. A. should have a press chairman.

District—Each district in county P.-T. A. should have a press chairman in charge of district.

Duties.

Local—First, see that every club activity gets into the papers; second, get well-written articles in magazines.

District—First, keep in touch with all clubs in district; second, encourage clubs reporting publicity; third, try to interest all clubs in the work.

Working Plans.

Local—First, get a club scrapbook for press notices; second, report, make up notices to your district press chairman; third, get in touch with editors of papers; fourth, get reporters to come to meetings of interest to the public. Be ready to talk with them.

District—First, notify clubs two weeks before state reports are due (time left to state chairman); second, keep these club reports; third, report on state press blank to your state press chairman.

The recording secretary, Mrs. P. H. Jeter, of Decatur, announced that the yearbook has been received from the press and is being mailed out to local presidents and state and national officers and chairman. This is only the third yearbook compiled by the Georgia branch, one being published last year and the only other during the administration of Mrs. John Rowlett, about ten years ago.

Delightful music will be furnished by Mrs. Leslie McMichael and W. N. Wiesner, who made a wonderful program also gave some interesting numbers. All interested are invited, but especially the school daddies.

Bentzen P.-T. A. To Entertain.

The P.-T. A. of Bentzen school will have a daddies' meeting at the school Friday evening, November 5, at 7:30 o'clock.

Old-fashioned spelling match, in which all daddies and mothers will take part, will feature the occasion. Wiener roast and fishing will be enjoyed by those present. A short program will be given by some of the school children. Patrons of both school and community are invited.

A regular monthly meeting will be held Thursday, November 6, at 2:15 o'clock at the school. All mothers are urged to be present.

Those present were Mrs. F. H. Jamison, Mrs. John S. Owen, Mrs. John Tucker, Mrs. Joe Boone, Mrs. Hugh Howell, Mrs. Powell, Mrs. J. W. Menham, Mrs. Carroll Latimer, Mrs. Douglas Jeffries, Mrs. Simon Moore, Mrs. Draper, Mrs. Ostein, Mrs. Parks, Mrs. J. T. Brice, Mrs. J. M. Mount and Miss Lura Simmons.

Peoples St. P.-T. A. President Will Serve Second Term

The executive board of the William A. Bass Junior High P.-T. A. met on Wednesday morning in the school building.

According to the by-laws the first vice president, Mrs. Carl Karston, presided.

The meeting was a very enthusiastic one and with one or two exceptions every committee chairman was present and gave interesting reports.

Many different activities that the association is interested in were discussed, but at the time it was decided that the paper sale that is being conducted by the ways and means committee be given the entire support of the members. The transportation committee announced the formation of a large number of automobile owners who will gladly call for any paper collected. Mrs. N. E. Morgan is chairman of this committee.

The program of the next regular meeting of the P.-T. A. will be a night meeting on Wednesday, November 3, at 7:45 o'clock in the auditorium of the Moreland avenue school. The program is an annual club, under the direction of Mrs. Frank Taylor, will give several selections and Professor Willis A. Sutton, superintendent of schools, will address the assembly.

After the meeting an informal reception will be held for the parents and teachers to become acquainted. Refreshments will be served by the entertainment committee.

The delegates appointed by the president, Mrs. Henry Bauer, to the fifth district P.-T. A. council were Mrs. R. S. Golden, Mrs. Carlos Lynes and Mrs. Henry Bauer.

Resolutions were unanimously adopted to add Peoples Street school to the P.-T. A. associations who have joined in the drive for pure milk.

Miss Hamilton, first grade, presented seven little boys in a reading, and seven little girls in a song.

Miss Jeanette Kelly rendered a solo dance, and she with her brother, Ashford, interpreted beautifully a Scottish dance in costume.

Miss Normandy's first grade, and Miss Jenkins' fourth grade won the prizes for most mothers present.

Mrs. J. C. Malone, council chairman for pre-school age, gave a splendid talk on pre-school age, and outlined the year's work for each school chairman.

Mrs. George Howson, president of P.-T. council, gave an inspiring address on the aim and purpose of the P.-T. A., and stated the foundation of this work was partnership in the home.

Mrs. Ruby Jones presented Mrs. Howson and Mrs. Malone with lovely bunches of chrysanthemums in behalf of Peoples Street school.

At the close of the program there was a social hour, and a small favor from her class chairman.

The regular monthly meeting of the Peoples Street P.-T. A. will be held on Tuesday evening, November 2, at 7:30 o'clock in the school auditorium.

The Tenth Street P.-T. A. will meet on Tuesday next, at 3 o'clock. Mrs. Austin presiding. The new members with teachers, will be honor-guests.

This will be a social get-together meeting, and every mother interested in children's attendance at school, Miss Graham spoke of the importance of children being at school and being on time and urged mothers to cooperate in every way possible.

Mrs. Belcher, chairman of ways and means committee, reported a rummage sale and plans for a candy pulling in the near future. An encouraging report was made by chairman of better films committee.

The kindergarten won the prize for having the most mothers present.

The business meeting was followed by a brief social hour.

Samuel Inman Pre-School Circle.

The Pre-School Circle of the Samuel M. Inman school held an interesting meeting last week at the home of Mrs. J. C. Long, vice chairman. Mrs. Fred Bell, secretary; Mrs. Randall Satterwhite, group chairman, as follows:

Mrs. Fred Bell, Mrs. Satterwhite, Mrs. E. G. Long, Mrs. W. J. Hodnett, Mrs. P. W. Woodward, Mrs. J. N. Nicholson, Mrs. B. W. Harris, J. A. Higgs.

An interesting feature of the evening was an address by Dr. Floyd Field, dean of the men of Georgia Tech.

Delightful music will be furnished by Mrs. Leslie McMichael and W. N. Wiesner, who made a wonderful program also gave some interesting numbers. All interested are invited, but especially the school daddies.

James L. Key P.-T. A. To Meet Thursday.

The regular monthly meeting of the James L. Key P.-T. A. will be held at the school Thursday, November 4, at 2:45 o'clock at the school. All mothers are urged to be present.

Dr. R. A. Eubanks, a member of the board of education, will give a valuable talk on "The Care of Teeth," and added pleasure will be provided by the children of Miss Freeman's grade, who have prepared a real fine entertainment.

Refreshments will be served and it is hoped that a large attendance will enjoy the meeting.

Stewart Ave. P.-T. A. Meeting Featured by Enthusiasm

An enthusiastic P.-T. A. meeting was held at Stewart Avenue school Tuesday afternoon. The number of members and visitors present was greater than any previous meeting, and the spirit of friendship and the loyalty prevailed throughout the audience.

Mrs. J. L. Jepson, the efficient president, presided. Under her leadership this association ranks with the best.

The meeting opened with prayer by Mrs. Curtin, followed with a program by children selected from the sixth grade, their subject being "Health."

Miss BuShea was the honored speaker of the afternoon. She explained the value of the health crusade movement placed in all the schools to better the physical condition of the children.

The minutes of preceding meeting were read by the secretary, Mrs. Slocum. The treasurer, Mrs. Gillespie, reported a goodly sum in the treasury after the purchase of a new Victrola and replenishing the medicine cabinet.

The better films chairman, Mrs. Oscar Garner, announced special pictures at the Howard and Palace theaters. Mrs. Curtin invited the ways and means committee to meet at her home on Allen avenue next Tuesday morning to discuss money-making plans.

The roll-call grades prize was won by second grade, Miss Ragdale teacher.

A campaign has been launched by this association for 100 per cent membership. It is hoped to reach this goal by the next meeting, which will be Daddies' night, November 28.

A committee of mothers from the fourth grade will serve as hostesses at the "Parent's Tea," which will be Daddies' night, November 28.

Much regret was expressed by the resignation of the treasurer, Mrs. Gillespie, who is moving to Florida. Mrs. W. B. Diddell was elected to fill the treasurer's vacancy.

On the night of November 18, there will be a special meeting of the "Daddies' and Mrs. Sutton will be the speaker. It is hoped that the fathers will take due notice and appear in person. Mrs. Gillespie will welcome the usual gracious manner of the mothers and thanked them for their hearty cooperation. Mrs. Spears stated that there was a great need for quarters to house the kindergarten of 66 children.

The count of mothers gave the kindergarten prizes to Miss Cheek's kindergarten class and to Mrs. Nelson's fourth grade.

Mrs. George Howson, president of the Atlanta Council of Parent-Teacher associations, spoke briefly, but interestingly on the aim and purpose of the Atlanta Council, in her usual gracious manner, and also touched on character building in the children.

Mrs. Huggie, who is not only one of the mothers, but also principal of the Atlanta Opportunity school, told what the Opportunity school is and that its aim is to teach adults to fit themselves for different lines of work and to keep their touch with their special work when not regularly employed.

The regular meeting day, which has been the fourth Wednesday afternoon of the month, has been changed to the third Wednesday afternoon.

Mrs. Foster, the president, introduced the grade teachers and their chairmen, who were the hostesses on this occasion. Refreshments were served in the classroom where the teacher was at home to her mothers, and glad to discuss the work and the child with them.

The prize for the best program last year was awarded to the P.-T. A. of Williams Street school, Mrs. George Russey, president.

Laudations were discussed and members urged to give careful attention to them to make sure that they are operated for the good of the children and not for the pleasure of the adults.

Emphasis was again laid upon the cooperation of parents in a community in the matter of adopting a regular study hour for the children.

North Avenue School To Entertain.

An interesting event of the week will be the pageant given by the junior class of the North Avenue Presbyterian school on November 7. The admission to "The Trip Around the World," as it is called, will be 25 cents in the afternoon and 35 cents at night.

This will give you a glimpse of all the customs and habits of France, Spain, Japan, Switzerland, Scotland, the United States, Russia, and many other countries. Also there will be guides to show you your way so there will be no danger of getting lost. There will be tableaux, dancing, a fashion review and many events of this type.

This party has been an annual event for several years and each year preceding, the party has been a great success. The money received is given to help support the "Napoleon," the annual pageant by the students.

Everybody is invited to be present at the North Avenue Presbyterian school, 200 Ponce de Leon avenue, on November 7, at either 3:30 o'clock or 8 o'clock.

Milton Avenue P.-T. A. Carnival.

The P.-T. A. of the Milton Avenue school entertained at a carnival recently and reports $56.40 cleared from the event.

Mothers are urged to attend the regular monthly meeting on Tuesday, November 4, at 2:30 o'clock.

Ladies' Memorial Association Meets.

The Ladies' Memorial association held the annual memorial service Friday afternoon, October 24, at Steinway hall. This meeting was the occasion when the members met to pay tribute to the members who have died during the year.

Numbered among these beloved members are: Mrs. Walter C. Henderson, Mrs. William Fort Williams, Elizabeth Miller, Mrs. George T. Fry, Mrs. J. P. Barrow, Mrs. M. R. Torrey, Miss Mary Jane Green, Mrs. Andrew P. Stewart, Mrs. T. O. Baker.

An impressive and beautiful program was in charge of Mrs. Robert Blackburn, Mrs. William Fort Williams, first vice president, offered prayer for the president, Mrs. William A. Wright, who was absent, and who had recently lost her son, John H. Wright.

Mrs. Charles Neville Davis wrote a tribute in his memory. Miss Lillian Smith sang two numbers, accompanied by Mrs. Harris. Mrs. Robert Blackburn composed and read a poem, "Memory Blossoms." A large group of relatives and friends were present.

Mrs. Gardner, the scholarship chairman, suggested that if every P.-T. A. of the Fifth district would give five dollars to the scholarship fund it would form quite a nucleus to begin the work.

Other chairmen spoke of their special work—Mrs. Etheridge, nutrition chairman; Mrs. Holsenbeck, better films chairman; Mrs. Tufts, program chairman. The last announced that

Historical Research

Mrs. John L. Davidson, state chairman historical research and preservation of records, offers some splendid suggestions to encourage and stimulate effort in this work which is one of the primary objects for which our society was organized.

"The history of our Empire State of the South has never been written. Much of the basic material has been lost, and what remains is rapidly disintegrating.

In justice to Georgia, her makers and builders should have recognition. One result of our indifference to preservation of records was the loss of a very few years since as to whether Dr. Crawford W. Long really discovered anesthesia. A history virtually denying it was recommended for use in the Atlanta schools. Our claim that Wesleyan was the first college the world to confer degrees on women is now contested by Vassar, because no early catalogues of Wesleyan are in existence, and the files of the Macon Telegraph of that period have recently been destroyed by fire.

One of Georgia's own historians said Georgia history could be better studied in Wisconsin than in Georgia, because the University of Wisconsin and the state of Wisconsin have been more zealous in getting material for Georgia history than we have ourselves.

No organization is better fitted to rescue these priceless records from oblivion than the Daughters of the American Revolution of Georgia. In every chapter there is a woman interested in these records, with the earnest desire of this committee that such a one be appointed chairman to direct the work. We are not asking for money but service.

If enough material is sent by the chapters the publication of a volume might be the result, which would be a lasting credit to the contributors, and a benefit to this and future generations.

For your convenience an outline for work is suggested:

First 500 marriages (if not listed in Vol. III, Joseph Habersham Collections).

List of testators in first Will Book. Bible and family records.

Sketches of family history by oldest living members.

Family "trees."

Old letters and manuscripts.

Public reminiscences, historic and genealogical data in your local papers, make scrap books of these and any local history and send clippings to chairman.

Make pilgrimages to old cemeteries copy inscriptions of oldest tombstones. Locate graves of pioneer men and women, revolutionary soldiers, soldiers of 1812.

Organize a county historical society. Please answer the following questions:

Are you compiling a county history?

What is the condition of your county records?

Are your local newspapers filed?

Make three copies of the best copies of all records secured on paper 8 1/2 x 11 inches, regular letter size, leaving a margin 1 1/2 inches on left side, 1 inch top and bottom, mail flat to my address.

It may not be possible to carry out every given suggestion, but every chapter can send the marriage records and names of testators in first will book found in the local court house.

Other members of the committee are: Mrs. J. R. McMichael, Quitman; Mrs. Charles Clark, Atlanta; Mrs. J. M. High, Atlanta; Mrs. A. R. McMillan, Atlanta.

International Relations.

Dear Madam Regent: This appeal will not touch your chapter's "tender spot"—the treasury, but is a plea to get in "closer touch" with the nations of the world, by giving international relations a prominent place on your 1924-1925 program.

As South America, with its language and history, was studied last year, the national chairman, Mrs. Robert Lansing, requests the chapter to devote special attention to our two immediate neighbors, Mexico on the south, and Canada on the north. Mexico is just coming into her own, after many years of internal strife—get acquainted with her public men and affairs, and our relations with the new republic, and of course, insist upon the study of Spanish language and literature.

"If the Daughters of the American Revolution could only commemorate in a fitting manner, our long period of peace with Canada—110 years—it would help to continue the friendly feeling which has so long existed. Study the arbitrations which have settled so many disputes between the United States and Canada."

"Make a study of the 'Treaty of Ghent.' Make strong the feeling of more arbitration and less war. Organize current event classes in your chapter. Urge young men to study diplomacy, and when the George

Woman's Civic Club

Of West End to Hold Meeting

The Woman's Civic Club of West End will meet Wednesday, November 5, in the club rooms. This will take the place of the regular second Wednesday meeting, the change being made in order to enable the members to assist in various ways during the convention the following week.

Plans will be completed by the committee chairman for the work assigned them, and a full attendance is desired. Mrs. Willis Smith, entertainment chairman, will have a supply of Dr. Blanche Lovelidge's books at the club, and they may be bought for $1 each, the proceeds to go toward convention expenses.

The business meeting will be followed by an interesting program, which will include a reading by Mrs. Horace Presson, and vocal and instrumental numbers rendered by Miss Louie Moore.

Mrs. H. A. Watts, treasurer, will be at the club rooms to receive dues during Tuesday and Wednesday, from 9 to 11 a. m. Dues may also be paid at the meeting Wednesday afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Meaders, who have been so closely associated with the club members during their visits to Dahomea, were the guests of Mrs. Arthur Merrill the past week-end.

Mr. and Mrs. Meaders, daughter of Atlanta, will attend the Halloween carnival, which was a successful event of the club Friday evening.

Atlanta Music Club

To Give Third Morning Musicales

The Atlanta Music club will present on Wednesday, November 5, at 10:30 o'clock, the Atlanta Biltmore, the third of the morning musicales for the season. The program as arranged by Mrs. Charles Chalmers, is a delightful one, presenting Mrs. Philip Knicker, dramatic soprano, with Mrs. Chalmers accompanying; Miss Ethel Beyer, pianist; Alex. Keese, violinist, and Jose Gascon, violoncellist.

Mrs. Ensign, now resident in Forsyth, made her home up to the time of her marriage, in New York, where she was a pianist, and was a winning an enviable name on the concert stage and in oratorio work, when her marriage brought her south.

For eight years she was a pupil of Sergei Kibinsky, soloist in a New York church, and with such organizations as the Rubenstein club, Mrs. Ensign has had wide experience, and been the recipient of many encomiums from the press.

When some years ago in New York a commission was instituted to find the promise of the great American voice, the choice fell on this young girl, then in her teens. Mrs. Ensign's voice is one of rare color and beauty, and her work is characterized by artistic finish. This being her first appearance before the Atlanta Music club, her two groups of songs, presented a wide range of styles, and are awaited with measurable interest.

Two trios for piano, violin and cello, by Russian composers, making up the other half of the program, will be played by Miss Ethel Beyer, Alex. Keese and Jose Gascon, three of Atlanta's own musicians, too well known to need introduction in these columns.

Birthday Party Honors Miss Horwitz.

Miss Helen Fine, of Chattanooga, Tenn., was one of the honored guests at a Halloween-birthday party given by Mrs. and Mrs. J. Horwitz in honor of their daughter, Miss Naomi Horwitz, at the home of the parents on Washington street, Tuesday night.

The home was beautifully decorated with vari-colored flowers and decorations of candles, witches and pumpkins celebrating for Halloween festivities. A special occasion was a witch telling weird tales and telling fortunes to everyone who wished to listen in.

Ben Coleman gave a selection on his violin, and Mrs. Mrs. L. Prosser assisted Ben Coleman on the piano.

Miss Naomi Horwitz was assisted by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. Horwitz, Mr. and Mrs. J. Bodenheimer, Mrs. H. Kaleschman, Mrs. Berenbrin, Mrs. Victor Jacobson.

The following guests were present: Misses Helen Fine, of Chattanooga, Tenn.; Ruth Feldman, Rose Swedlin, Fanny Fitterman, Ida Landau, Celia Kaleschman, Celia Bergman, Ruth Mendelsohn, Jean H. Kaleschman, Label, Florence Wolfson, Hattie Gershwin, Ida Cohen, Laurette Beck, Pearl Kohn, Sarah Robinson, Anita Berman, Bessie Goldstein, Gertrude Levin, Paula Bokrisky, Anne Richmond, Stella Mieslow, Ruby Horwitz, Rose Kaleschman, Mr. and Mrs. J. Horwitz, Mrs. H. Kaleschman, Mrs. Victor Jacobson, Mr. and Mrs. J. Bodenheimer, Dr. and Mrs. I. Prosser, Messrs Morris Segal, Jack Mann, Jack Zaslav, Harry Morot, I. H. Guller, Sol Brenner, Max Cabot, Dave Barnett, Lon Fineberg, Harry Wilensky, Herman Rich, Hyman Melitz, Reuben Melitz, Morris Hartman, Ben Coleman, Ben Cohen, Harry Cohen, Freddie Lebow, Mendel Berchenko, Sam Pear, Reuben Lubel, Dave Schilberger, Ben Fitchenstein, Clarence Miller, Berneice Nathan, Nathan Turner, Isadore Altman, Charles Marx, Leles, Ron Shapiro, Willie Minsk, David Miles, Aba Levin, Jack Stien, David Morris, Dan Lease, Dave Burdette, Henry Schiff, Sam Weintraub, Le Robinson, Dave Horwitz, Sydney Horwitz, Sol Cohen, Joe Gordon, Irving Goldstein, Billy Levin, Sam Finn, Jack Wingrove, Sanford Saperstein, Herman Needle, Kid Socoloff, Joe Friedman, and many others.

Etowah Chapter.

The first fall meeting of the Etowah chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution, of Cartersville, was held Tuesday, October 21, at the home of Mrs. E. D. Cole. The regent, Mrs. Colquitt Finley, presided. The officers for the year are: Mrs. Colquitt Finley, regent; Mrs. S. E. Hamrick, vice regent; Miss Roslyn Lumpkin, secretary; Miss Mildred Lewis, treasurer; Mrs. J. A. Monfort, registrar. The program of the work of the year was outlined and plans were discussed for raising money to pay the appropriation to each of the causes fostered by the daughters. It was decided to join this year with the Daughters of the Confederacy and the Cherokee club in the celebration of Armistice day, Tuesday, November 11.

Adrian Pouliot To Give Recital.

The Atlanta Conservatory of Music will present Adrian Pouliot, pianist, in his recital at the club on Friday evening, November 7, at 8:30 o'clock. Mr. Pouliot has recently been added to the faculty of the Atlanta Conservatory of Music. The public is cordially invited.

Don't Squeeze Blackheads—Dissolve Them

Squeezing and pinching out blackheads make the pores large and cause irritation. Blackheads are caused by accumulation of dust and dirt and secretions from the skin and there is only one safe and sure way and one that never fails to get rid of them—a simple way, too—that is to dissolve them. Just get from any drug store about two ounces of cologne powder—sprinkle a little on a hot, wet cloth—rub over the blackheads with it for a few seconds—wash off and you'll be surprised to see that every blackhead has disappeared, and the skin will be left soft and the pores in their natural condition.—(adv.)

Mrs. W. W. Belk Celebrates Birthday.

On Monday afternoon a pleasant and enjoyable affair was the informal gathering of friends and neighbors at the home of Mrs. W. W. Belk in Oakland City on the anniversary of her 80th birthday to give her a hearty handshake and wish her many happy returns of the day.

Mrs. Belk is one of the most beloved women of this community and much interest was taken in the celebration of her birthday.

The dramatic club, of North Avenue Presbyterian school, The Cecilians, wish to announce the presentation of "All of a Sudden Peggy," on the evening of November 21, at the Tech Y. M. C. A.

The semi-annual plays of the Cecilians are always events of unusual interest and "All of a Sudden Peggy" promises to be one of the most brilliant and humorous in the history of Cecilian plays. A large attendance is assured.

The cast includes Misses Mary Ellis, Dorothy Fluka, Margaret Cochran, Jane Dillon, Flora Mae Tulin, Jean Cook, Louise Huddleston, Caroline Russell, Eugenia Dodd and Netta Russell.

The Cecilians have a membership of eleven, augmented by their faculty advisers, Messrs Thurza Askev and Augusta Roberts.

Miss Nancy Hudson was hostess Thursday evening to a group of the younger set at a Halloween party at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. John P. Hudson, on Woodland avenue. Halloween ideas were carried out in all decorations and favors. Autumn leaves and fall flowers were used throughout the reception room. The punch bowl, with its decorations of black and yellow, was presided over by Miss Elizabeth Hudson. Those enjoying this delightful affair were: Dorothy Hansell, Dorothy Gay, Julia Zachary, Louise McAllister, Natalie Stevenson, Charlotte Cantantone, Ophelia Gaddy, Ames Estess, Dot Ina Horton, Alton Bowers, Paul Campbell, Bob Nash, J. B. Boatenreiter, Carlton and Russell Noman, Harris Racco, Wyatt Bean and Kennedy West.

Miss Dora Edelson Gives Lovely Party.

An interesting social event of the past week, was a miscellaneous shower and buffet luncheon given by Miss Rose Glassman in honor of Miss Edelson, a charming bride-elect of the season.

The guests included Misses Julia Horowitz, of New York City; Anne Lyston, Helen Sims, Pearl Lefkoff, Sarah Goldwasser, Dutch Davids, Pearl Sims, Gertrude Kabinowitz, Fanny Kolodkin, Rae Mazier, Lottie Bryan, Belle Mazier, Eva Lefkoff, Sarah Gershon, Sophia Mazier, Pearl From, Gertrude Rosenberg, Mrs. D. E. Merlin, of Winnipeg, Canada; Mrs. A. M. Shuman, Mrs. M. J. Minard, Mrs. D. Glassman, Mrs. D. Edelson, and many others.

Miss Glassman was assisted in entertaining by her mother, Mrs. D.

Miss Nelle Camp Entertains Visitor.

Miss Nelle Camp entertained at a beautifully appointed luncheon at her home on Culberson street as a compliment to her cousin, Miss Isabelle Manning, of Marietta.

The house was artistically decorated with tall vases, gracefully filled with red and white dahlias.

Those present were Miss Isabelle Manning, Miss Josephine Jones, Miss Nina Tompkins, Miss Alice May, Macdon, Bainbridge, Bailey and Eastman (Arnor).

Hold fast unions: Baresville, Augusta, Dawson, Savannah (City union) and Waycross.

During the year the Atlanta (Druid Hills) union made the largest gain in members in the state, starting with 28, and Athens with 25, they quadrupled their memberships; Gainesville with 37 to start on and West Point with 21 tripled; Baymore (now doubled and Bainbridge nearly doubled. Albany rose from 126 to 260, Eastman from 101 to 151 and Macon from 280 to 333 active members.

When all winning union representatives stood in a golden semi-circle about three sides of the convention hall, and "Swing, Ring, Jubilee Bells" was sung, the effect was most pleasing, but that was not all as the song died away, here and there a gold-dressed lady stated one of the following truths learned while working as a Christian citizen during the year:

We Have Learned.

That "the word citizen has two uses in present-day speech: one signifies merely an inhabitant, the other an exact one, signifying a political status. A Christian citizen is a follower of Jesus Christ who relates to the world on Christian principles to political action."

That good people elect had no effect by remaining away from the polls.

That if you do not vote you are a dead weight in the state, as so many of our youth in which you can show that you are a live citizen.

To search the records of candidates who are the best, because prohibitionists and to judge the future by their past record rather than by words or answers to questionnaires.

That a vote cast for a dry candidate requiring only a few moments costs more than a day and night of talking about how the prohibition law is violated. Dry votes count.

That "when coal in the mine and not in the grate will warm you; when flour in the barrel and not in the loaf will feed you; when wool on the sheep's back, and not in the cloth will protect you; when a public sentiment that is lying around loose and not gathered up through the electric battery of the ballot box or sent flitting along the wires of the law will change the ways of men."

That it is taking a long chance to elect a man to office who in the past voted against prohibition and now stands for the enforcement of the law because it is the law. The blood of Jesus Christ can perform miracles in the lives of men who are "wise as serpents" in choosing the candidates for whom they vote.

That it is best to allow all just officeholders who were against prohibition but now are for it to reform as citizens, not with the reins of government in their hands.

That the ballot can be used for the advancement of God's Kingdom on earth in the hands of those who are for it.

That prohibition for buying votes with dollars, while some are for it, is a sure cure for the disease of political corruption.

That if the eighteenth amendment and the Volstead act are to be enforced and enforced we must elect dry judges, city and county officials, legislators, governors and congressmen who stand four-square for prohibition.

A LITTLE COCK-SPARROW

A little cock-sparrow sat on a tree,
Looking as happy as happy could be,
Till a boy came by, with his bow and arrow.
Says he, "I will shoot the little cock-sparrow.
His body will make me a nice little stew,
And his giblets will make me a little pie, too."
Says the little cock-sparrow, "I'll be shot if I stay,"
So he clapped his wings, and flew away.

What the Virus of Gambling Brought in Gains and Losses to the Man Called 'Lucky at Horses.'

BILLY RAYMER and the Belvoir three-year-old came into Havre de Grace on a morning when September sunshine glinted on chimney pots and church spires, on maple flaming streets and huddled harbor of the town on the Chesapeake. The three-year-old, favorite at every start, was shunted out to the race track in pomp and panoply befitting his fame, attended by trainers and stable boys, retinued by reporters and tipsters. Billy Raymer, gentleman of the betting ring, by fleeting grace out of fortune's favor, sprang from the early accommodation train unheralded and alone.

For a moment, as he looked down from the long platform on the place that held for him memories other than the winnings and the losses that made the sum of his thoughts of other courses, he hesitated over the path he would take. Up the road on a switch near the sheds the Belvoir boys were unloading Belfonte, giving to any keen-eyed gambler chance for observation of that vaunted thoroughbred. Down the street the village slumbered in morning lassitude, its streets invitingly quiet to a loiterer, but dully deserted to a man accustomed to the high points of excitement that had been the milestones of Billy Raymer's life. To the village, however, drawn by an impulse he no more tried to analyze than he would have striven to fathom his overpowering belief in certain wagers, he took his way, shoving back the checkered cap from his head as he swung down the road.

In the high sunlight of the Maryland morning he looked older than he had seemed as he had jumped from the train. Fine lines of worry creased the corners of his far seeing eyes, and deepening grooves ran down from his determined mouth, taking away at close range his aspect of boyishness; but a high daring gleamed in his blue eyes, and a reckless courage tilted his chin so that no straggler, passing him, could doubt that the man who had won a fortune on Guileless only to lose it on Sailor Boy was likely to make another flurry on the books ere he called the record closed.

With a swiftness of movement at variance from the lethargy of the scene he passed the white houses and straggling gardens of the outskirts, hastening to that place he knew of old to be the rendezvous of his fellows, the little shack where Mother Graham dispensed food while her patrons gave out the latest gossip of the Havre de Grace stables.

The familiar odor of ham and eggs and coffee assailed him as he pushed open the screen door and took a place on a stool at the counter. A stout, red faced woman, turning to take his order, flung off her professional nonchalance at recognition of her customer.

"WELL, for the love o' Mike," she commented, "if Billy Raymer ain't come back!"

As she held out a moist hand to him, sharp eyed jockeys and sharper eyed gamblers looked up at Raymer, some with recognizing nods, others with mere curiosity born of his fame. To those who knew him, as well as to Mother Graham, he gave that one sided smile that had signaled his acceptance of the grim satire of life ever since he had scaled a board fence to watch the running of The Picket in a long gone Derby.

"Do you know any law against my coming?" he demanded.

"Not one," the woman said heartily, passing on his order to the stoop shouldered old man who had been his wife's helper at the shack as far back as the first time Billy Raymer had seen Havre de Grace, and who stared at him now with senile absorption and disregard of Mother Graham's possible wrath. She herself leaned elbows on the counter and, ignoring the others, gave full attention to the newcomer. "How's the luck, Billy?" she queried.

"Fair." His grin held more amusement than friendliness, but he gave the old man a wink of understanding fellowship.

"I hear you cleaned up Laurel last spring."

"That was a long time ago."

"Sure, but a boy that hits the top once hits it twice."

"If he has luck."

"Ain't you got it? Luck of the devil, the boys call yours, don't you, boys?"

They nodded as if they were factors in a well trained chorus, some of them mumbling unconcernedly out of stuffed mouths, others staring sideways at him.

The old man at the stove shook his head solemnly. "Lucky at horses, unlucky at love," he croaked.

Some of the men, seeing the flash of anger on Raymer's face, suggestive of a reach for a gun, frowned uneasily until they saw him regain his composure in evident realization of the old man's innocence of intention, but they lingered for a little as if in expectation of an outburst. Then, one by one, they went out of the shack while Raymer loitered over his meal until after Mother Graham had gone from the place, leaving him alone with her stooping husband.

"What did you mean by 'unlucky at love?'" he asked the old man.

"It's a saying, ain't it?" the other countered, wiping glasses assiduously.

As if understanding that no side attack would win him what he wanted to know, Raymer shifted base.

"Do you still live here?" he asked.

"When we ain't living in Baltimore."

"Many changes in town, Pop?"

"Since when?"

"Since I was here last."

"How long ago was that, Billy? I ain't good at figures."

"Three years."

"Lots of changes since then."

"Do the Gilsens still live here?"

"Old lady's dead."

"No?"

"Yep. And Ken's in the navy."

"Where's the rest of them?"

"There's only Laura."

"I know. Where is she?"

"Ain't you never met her since, Billy?"

"I've never been back."

"But she ain't here."

"When did she go?"

"Right after you went."

"Hasn't she been back at all?"

"Only when her mother died."

"Where does she live?"

"Oh, anywhere." The old man's gesture whirled a vague circle. "Ain't you run into her, Billy?"

"Where would I?"

"Why, she follows the ponies, same as you do."

"She what? You're crazy, Pop. Somebody's kidding you."

"Sure as I live, it's true." The old man bent over the counter, impressive in his unaccustomed importance of having news to impart. "You went in the fall, while the races were on, didn't you? And Laura got her divorce in November, didn't she? I know it was November. Mother told me about it on Thanksgiving day. Well, she went off in December; didn't even wait for Christmas. And the next spring I heard th... on a lot of money at Latonia. Then Ken said one day before he joined the navy that she was at Belmont. Every once in a while I hear somebody mention her, saying what she won or what she lost. She wins, mostly. Goes with the name, I guess."

"But she never played a race, Pop." For all his insistence his tone faltered. "You know she didn't. Why even though she'd been born and raised here, she'd never been up to the track till I took her there."

"Don't I know it? Folks was all Methodys. But that ain't saying she don't go now." He set the glasses in a neat row. "You ain't thinking of looking her up, are you, Billy?" He tried to cover his avidity for gossip with a pretense of casual interest.

"Not particularly. Why?"

"Oh, nothing. Only I heard somebody say she was out at the track yesterday."

"Thank you, Pop." He handed the old man a cigaret, lighting one for himself. "Going to play Belfonte?" he inquired, watching the gleam in the old man's eyes.

"Are you, Billy?"

"Not on your life. Can you keep something to yourself, Pop?"

"You know I can, Billy."

"Play Pentecost for nose in the Calvert."

"I will, Billy, I will. I'll follow your luck."

HE crossed to the stove tottering-ly, and Billy Raymer went out the shack, pausing at the door as if uncertain of his directions, then setting forth to a street not on the way to the race track. He tried to make his walking seem aimless, but he caught himself hastening toward the old fashioned frame house at the end of the street whose neglected doorway proclaimed its untenanted state. Not until he saw its dull look of emptiness did he acknowledge to himself that he had been cherishing a recollection of the house as it had once been.

As he passed it, as slowly as he dared in the knowledge that a score of peering eyes might be marking his progress, he made it the frame for a group of pictures that had persisted through his wandering during the years since he had seen it. The first was of Laura Gilson standing on the low porch on that April day when he had passed the place in idle sauntering while he had waited the coming of the horses from the Abbotsford stables. There had been about her an aura of the sort of goodness he had always in his soul ascribed to womanhood, since Billy Raymer was, for all his knock-about childhood and errant youth, a valiant idealist. Because she had held in her eyes the look that his persisting dream had so often sought and as often failed to find in the women of his world, he had wooed the girl of the old fashioned garden.

He had not loved her, he had known even then; but he had hoped to love her, and not for a moment after their meeting had he failed to credit her with a remarkable influence over him. It was not that she compelled him, as other women sometimes had, to do what he did not want to do. It was rather that she held him to the doing of the thing he wished. Because she helped him in his vague aspirations toward a settled way of life that he had not dared to voice before he knew her, he lingered in Havre de Grace near Laura Gilson after the races were over; and because she unconsciously held him to his new resolve of foregoing his old gambling, he had asked her to marry him.

For a little while after their marriage her happiness, as radiantly joyous and palpitating as some gorgeous tropical butterfly, had kept him contented. He had given up the track without a qualm, diving into business in Baltimore with the money he happened to have when he made his resolve to abjure the betting ring. Then the play had palled a little, but he held to his bargain with himself stolidly until one day when coming back to Havre de Grace to bring Laura home after one of her visits to her mother and brother, he had met his old crowd and been swept by them to the track. The lure of the game had caught him back. He bet, and won. The next day he went of his own accord, and won once more. He kept on going day after day, and winning until he had a pile that he could not have earned in a year at his business.

The meet had not ended when Laura, conscious of the barrier that had risen between them, reproached him justly of untruth and unjustly of unfaith. She chose the evening of a day when the joy of the track had been keenest for him, a day when he had been pondering on his mistake in having given it up for the commonplace existence they were leading, right though he believed the latter to be. He was in one of those moods when men chafe at the bit of matrimony, and in a burst of hideous cruelty he told her the truth.

"I've tried to love you, God knows," he said as they stood on the porch of her mother's house, "but I can't. I'm sorry that you care, and I'm sorrier that I don't. I wish it were different, but I don't see what we can do now except go on, as long as we've started."

THE look that she gave him as she left him and went into the house was one of the persisting pictures he had tried in vain to forget in the three years since that night. For it was the last time that Billy Raymer had seen his wife.

Through the seasons while he had wandered from Jamaica to Juarez he had held the thought that Laura was safely at home in the old house where they had met and parted. Even her refusal to touch the money that he kept putting to her credit in the bank at Baltimore failed to disturb him, so sure was he that her life was as sheltered as it had been before he had come into it. Now in the light of Pop Graham's revelation that the girl had plunged into the life from which she had once lifted him, Billy Raymer paced restlessly through the streets of Havre de Grace, trying vainly to readjust new knowledge into old impressions.

Even after he had left town and went to the track he could not shake off his worry about Laura. With his quick imagination he could see her at every course in the country, set in crowds as alien to her type as were others to him. So altogether apart from the scenes in which she must have been did she seem that he puzzled over how he could have failed to notice her in them. As he stood at the entrance, scanning the face of every woman who came from the railway, he had thought that Laura would flash before his vision with the blaze of an unsheathed sword. In the hush of that mood he was altogether unprepared for the shock of hearing her voice before he had seen her at all.

She was standing beside him as he turned, holding out her hand to him in a shyness that was in tremulous contrast to the flagrant opulence of her attire. Only in the flicker of self-consciousness, curiously like that of a child caught at mischief and anxious to condone her offense, did Billy Raymer glimpse the girl he had married. Her clothes, flauntingly expensive even among the women of the track, jewels, her rouged cheeks, and beaded eyelashes proclaimed to him the distance she had gone on the path she had chosen on the parting of their ways. Watching her in a silence that he began to fear he could not break, he felt a sudden sense of remorse in his dealing with Laura.

Her voice quickened in its stirring within him when she spoke, although all she said was, "How are you, Billy?"

"I'm—I'm all right," he broke through his constriction of embarrassment to tell her.

"Surprised to see me here?"

"A little. I just came in today. I ain't been here since."

"No," she said. "I knew you hadn't. You needn't have stayed away on my account, though. I've had no hard feelings against you."

"You could have had."

"Oh, it's all in the running, isn't it?"

"I guess it is."

They stood regarding each other almost furtively while the crowd from the trains surged around them. Then, because he did not know how to leave her, he followed in Laura's wake to the grandstand. As he walked after her he felt a heightened resurgence of the regret that had so often assailed him for his act of disillusioning the girl. It had been bad enough to think of Laura in a Maryland garden, grieving softly for him as she had trimmed recalcitrant rose bushes, but it was infinitely worse to think of her in this new guise of pert worldliness, of hard wisdom, a follower of the races. Determination to divert her from this course grew strong within him in his realization of his own responsibility for her change. As if she read his intention she turned to him when they had found places on the stand.

"Well, what are you going to do about it?" she demanded.

"About what?"

"About me." She tried to laugh. "You look as if you were a sky pilot getting ready to give a sermon."

"I wish you wouldn't talk like that," he said, in annoyance. "You know I've got nothing to say about anything you do."

"Then don't say it." She shrugged her shoulders as if to keep on the fur cape that was slipping from them. As she put up her hands to her hat he noticed the flash of the diamonds in her rings.

"There's no reason why we should fight as soon as we meet, is there?" she questioned. "We had one fight, and that was plenty for a lifetime."

IN the face of his silence she rushed into glib chatter that gave him certainty she was talking against time, staving off any possible questions he might ask her. With the patience of a man trained into waiting for his chance he let her go until she had worn out her surface manner of easy speech.

Then he shot straight. "Where are you staying now?" he asked her. "At the Elsinore." The answer was reluctant.

"Some class to you, isn't there?" He smiled a little wistfully. "I suppose the Elsinore guests don't dine at Casselli's, do they?"

"Oh, Billy, I—do you mean you want me to go with you?"

"What else?"

"Why?" Her mouth grew hard as she flung the question at him.

"Can't we be friends, anyhow?"

"I don't know."

"Why not try for tonight?"

"All right."

She gave him a swift look that seemed to estimate the reason for his invitation and to invoke its consequences upon himself. Back of it he caught the flash of Laura as she had been in the days of their first meetings. The recognition of the old quality of girlishness beneath the veneer of her new hardness gladdened him strangely, but the joy of it man pushed his way through the press of people around them and stood before Laura with an attitude of possessiveness that set Billy Raymer's blood boiling. He was a st with fishy eyes that he barely turned on Billy as he spoke to Laura.

"Missed you somehow at the gate," he told her, "but I bet for you on Ben Adhem."

Under the carmine Laura paled, but she held her voice steady to say, "Do you know Mr. Bergen, Billy? This is Mr. Raymer."

Bergen's look, curious and hostile, roused him to speedy antagonism. The two men bowed across Laura, then settled into evident determination to outstay each other. Even as Laura waxed into a nervousness that threatened outbreak at the end of the third race, Bergen, with a shrug and an understanding smile of amusement, left them.

"See you later," he said over his shoulder to Laura.

"Who is he?" Billy growled.

"A friend of mine."

"Where's he staying? The Elsinore?"

"It's none of your business," she said hotly.

"I guess it isn't." He pulled down the checkered cap over his eyes, scanning the track. "Ben Adhem won't win," he informed her, glad to be able to discount the wisdom of this Bergen, whoever he was.

"It doesn't matter," she said. "I'm holding my big bets for the Calvert." She turned to him with a defiance in her eyes that threatened to blaze into rage. "I suppose," she said deliberately, "that it seems queer to you to see me betting after all I used to say against it. Well, I've learned a lot in three years, Billy, a lot about horses and a lot about men."

"I've learned a few things myself," he said, and watched her gleam that shot to her eyes, wondering if jealousy could have inspired it. But her next words dispelled such thought. "I'm going to be married next month," she told him.

"Bergen?" he asked with dry lips.

"Yes."

Peanut Vender to Real Estate King

By William W. Brewton

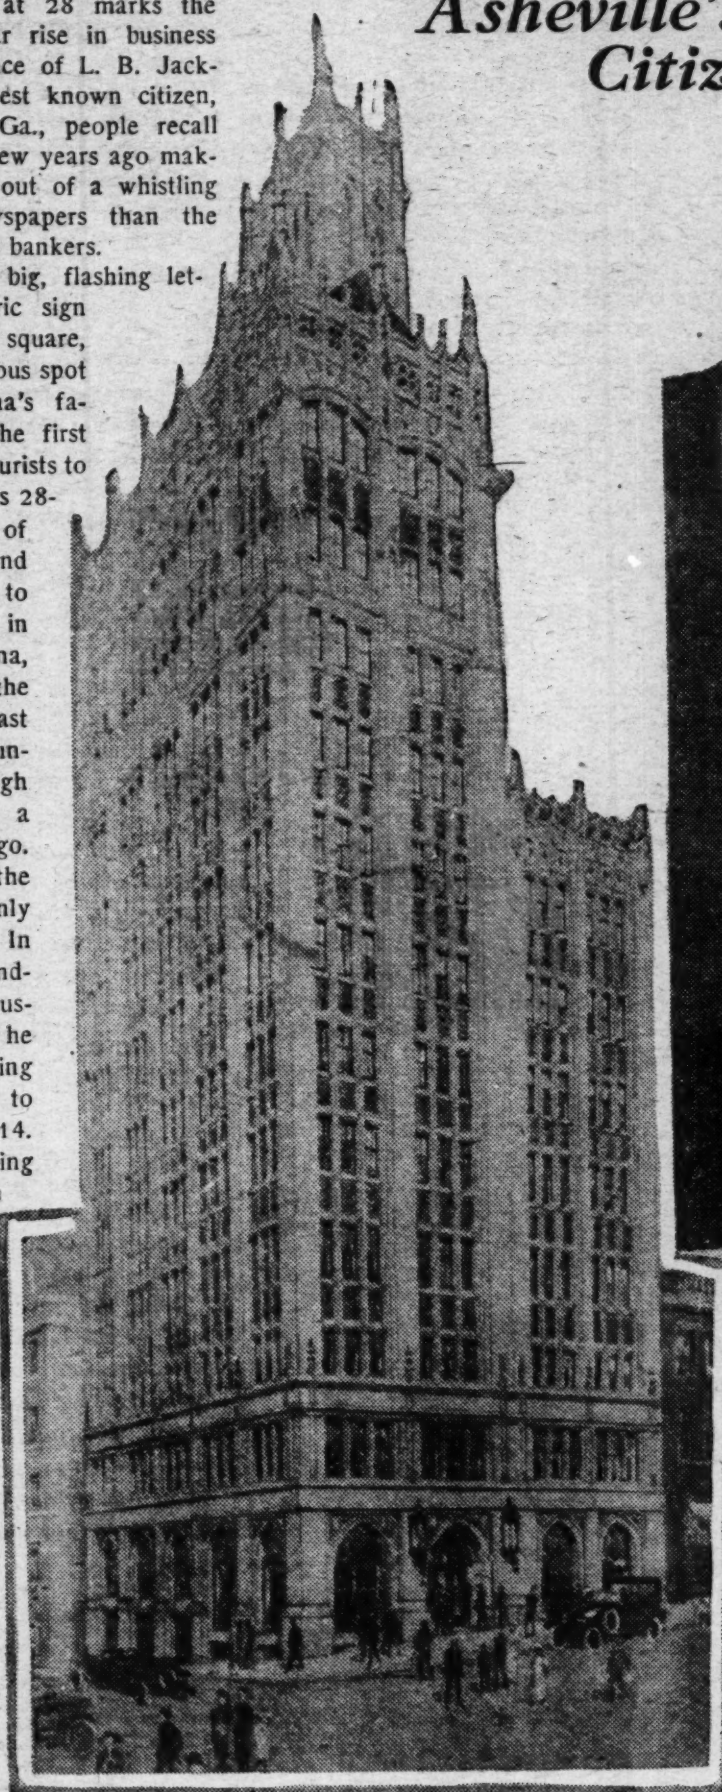

FROM peanut vender in a South Georgia town at 18 to real estate king of North Carolina at 28 marks the spectacular rise in business and finance of L. B. Jackson, Asheville's best known citizen, whom Cuthbert, Ga., people recall as the lad just a few years ago making more money out of a whistling parcher and newspapers than the local lawyers and bankers.

"See L. B.," in big, flashing letters of an electric sign overlooking Pack square, the most conspicuous spot in North Carolina's famous resort, is the first thing that greets tourists to Asheville. And this 28-year-old wizard of building and land auctions, the first to erect a skyscraper in North Carolina, which in fact is the highest building east of the Rocky mountains, due to its high site, didn't have a cent ten years ago. And he entered the real estate field only three years ago. In 1921 he was winding up a bottling business into which he went on removing from Cuthbert to Asheville in 1914. He had been drawing only $75 a month from the business operated by himself and his father. Manifestly in a resort city you don't save anything on that stipend.

But young Jackson had a mind that did not slide along in one groove. By no means of a particular mechanical turn, he nevertheless got his start by a practical invention. He invented an apparatus for testing bottled drinks for impurities without opening the bottle. It was a sure thing, and it began to go over big. Jackson let a man have some of the rights for $20,000, and then he hit the real estate field in the midst of a potential boom that hadn't broken. He broke it. Getting a lease on some of the old George W. Vanderbilt lands on the outskirts of Asheville, called Biltmore, he began building houses and talking Asheville. His method of sales was unique. When he showed a man a house and lot he didn't try to hide the fact that there had to be a profit in it for him. If he didn't nearly double his money, there was nothing doing. But what sold every fellow was his guarantee, and his guarantee was what marked him a genius.

The Remarkable Rise of L. B. Jackson, Georgia Boy, Asheville's Best Known Citizen at 28

The Jackson building at Asheville, North Carolina's first skyscraper, a monument to the progressive spirit of Mr. Jackson.

"My iron-clad proposition is that if you take this piece of property and then can't sell it, at any time, for way yonder more than you paid me for it, you can get your money back from me," was what "L. B." told them. Nobody was afraid of that, and nobody has ever sold anything back to him. Older heads would ask how it was possible for Jackson to read the future like that, especially in a city where the boom hadn't quite started. That's the thing they never understood, and don't quite understand yet. Perhaps "L. B." doesn't quite understand that turn of his.

THEY kept going to him and he kept buying more land and building more houses and selling them. He built fine homes for himself, only to find nearly every purchaser fighting to buy L. B. Jackson's place. Time and again he sold out, built again and moved, while he was building other houses throughout Asheville and Biltmore.

But just a game of building houses and selling them was not enough to satisfy the restless mind of this spectacular youngster. His name began to spread throughout the state, because Asheville was drawing thousands who were buying summer places and investing in permanent homes. Big interests wanted factory sites and industrial and agricultural concerns wanted land. So Jackson organized an auction company. The Guaranty Realty company, of which he is president, had to put on a corps of trained land salesmen to handle the business throughout North Carolina placed with it. Farms, summer estates, business blocks were turned over to it to be offered at auction.

Expanding in so many directions and ends of the business, Jackson had to organize L. B. Jackson & company and the Asheville Investment company, because he was getting into the bond and investment business. To take care of the construction end of the business—building residences and business places for sale, or on contract—Jackson established the Grove Park Construction company, thus making himself the head of four corporations, all expanding rapidly. The Grove Park Construction company recently landed a contract to build 60 houses on the Swannanoa river for the Beacon Manufacturing company.

A suitable, permanent structure in which to house himself and furnish modern offices to a clientele of a rapidly growing city now became imperative—but nobody expected the cathedral-like loveliness, with structural stability, which "L. B." achieved in his new skyscraper. With a main building of 14 stories and a tower of four additional stories, built of the finest materials and finished off in the most unique cornices obtainable, noticeable among which are the gargoyles seen on few other structures, young "L. B." entered the next step in his development on July 6, 1924. Every office was leased before the building was completed. And this boy owns the whole thing alone, and he paid over $500,000 for it. Three years ago he had less than $25,000, and he has built not only the Jackson building, but hundreds of fine residences and negotiated the sale of thousands of acres of valuable lands as well as business places.

BUT before the skyscraper was finished, "L. B.," as everybody now calls him in Asheville, had done what was probably a bigger thing. He had leased for fifty years for three quarters of a million dollars the Emporium theater property on Pack square, put a new structure on it as a theater entrance, and begun negotiations for the purchase of Asheville's city hall with the large prominent location going with it. Although two new million-dollar hotels have just been completed in Asheville, Jackson says he will probably build another just as fine on one of these newly acquired sites.

From atop the Jackson building a high-powered searchlight flashes nightly across mountain peaks as far as 20 miles distant. Jackson says it's a great advertising stunt. Asked by the writer recently what caused his faith in his city, he referred to a recent address made by the editor of The Atlanta Constitution before the Asheville

Egypt's Prince At Last Weds His

How Love-Mad Ali Ibrahim Risked a Nation's Displeasure and Even Exile to Make Charming Miss Shepard His Princess

Prince Mohammed Ali Ibrahim with Constance Talmadge in the days when he was still true to his promise to his royal family and quite heart-free

BEFORE Prince Mohammed Ali Ibrahim, descendant of a long line of desert kings and a nephew of the Khedive of Egypt, was allowed to set out to see something of the world his uncle and others of his family made him give his solemn promise that he would not lose his heart in any of the European or American countries he was going to visit.

They were insistent on this because of the prejudice which has arisen in Egypt of late against young men neglecting the beauties of their own land and marrying those of other nations. The popular feeling against these foreign love matches was running so high that it was feared the royal family's political position might be seriously jeopardized if the young prince should become involved in one of them.

"You must return to us as heart-whole as you are today," his relatives adjured him, and Mohammed Ali, eager to be on his way, promised that he would.

He really meant to keep his word, and during his visit to Vienna, Paris and other European cities where he stopped on his way to America he was careful not to let his enthusiasm for any of the bevy of beauties he met carry him too far.

Once in the United States, however, where sheiks are more of a novelty than in Europe, he found it not so easy to keep his word of honor to his worried family. It came perilously near being broken in New York when he met Mabel Withee and was fascinated as he never had been before by any young woman.

In Hollywood, where he passed several delirious weeks frolicking about with Mabel Normand and other sparkling stars of the screen, it seemed time and again that the prince was surely falling hopelessly in love—and being loved in return. But always he managed to remain the unpromised bachelor he was when he left home.

By the time he reached New York again he had been the hero of a score of threatening romances, and yet the cables had no bad news to carry to his family and the numerous expectant beauties in Egypt.

Then one evening, only a few days before he was to sail for home, he met in Central Park a little beauty, very pink and white of face and gorgeously red of hair, who instantly drove from his heart all thoughts of duty to his family and his native land—the land over which some day he might have the chance to rule if he was a "good boy" and did just as his relatives said.

Perhaps it was the magic of the moonlight that filtered through the park foliage that Indian summer evening. Perhaps it was because this American girl is, as Ali Ibrahim sincerely believes, the loveliest bit of youthful femininity that ever powdered her nose.

At any rate, as he looked at her for the first time, the probable wrath of his family and the Egyptian people and the risk of his own political future faded quite out of the picture. The prince's eyes, well sophisticated after weeks of romantic experiences in Paris, New York and Hollywood, saw only a girl he wanted to put his arms around and carry back to a luxurious home on the banks of the Nile.

"Miss Pearl Shepard," said the mutual friend who presented her to the eager prince.

"Pearl," murmured Ali Ibrahim, as he felt the full charm of her laughing eyes, "a pearl—yes, indeed, a pearl beyond price!"

And in his heart he vowed at that moment to make this rare jewel his own if he could—and let the wishes of Egypt go hang.

BEFORE the impetuous wooing of the prince the heart of Pearl Shepard was quickly won. Outside of what would happen in Egypt when news of his romance reached there, the only difficulty lay in Pearl's parents.

Mr. and Mrs. Ginsburg—for that was the name Pearl had borne before her good looks and quite a bit of talent as an actress led her into the movies—thought the prince a very engaging young man. If he could have boasted of a job in a department store or a Wall street bank they would have had no hesitation about saying, "Bless you, children!"

But what the prince told about having an income of $200,000 a year and being the nephew of a king and wanting to take their Pearl to a palace on the Nile with more servants than there are strap-hangers in a subway train at the rush hour, was a severe strain on their credulity. They had heard too much about the way bogus princes, dukes and counts prey on trusting American girls.

"We're from Missouri," was the substance of what Papa and Mamma Ginsburg said to Ali Ibrahim.

you that it's all as real as the pyramids."

"Pack your trunks," he said to Mrs. Ginsburg, "I'm going to take you and Pearl to Egypt with me to show you that everything is, as you Americans put it, quite 'on the level.'"

To Europe the trio went a year ago last June. After a leisurely trip through France, Germany and Italy, they made their way to Egypt. Long before they arrived there Mrs. Ginsburg was pretty well convinced that she would be making no mistake in accepting Ali Ibrahim for a son-in-law. And after about twenty-four hours in Cairo every doubt as to his desirability was removed from her mind.

"The prince is the goods," was the substance of the cablegram she sent her husband. "Just as represented in every way. Marriage will take place just as soon as he can obtain his family's consent."

The consent of his family—that was a thing more difficult of attainment than the consent of Pearl's watchful mother had proved.

The warmth of the welcome that was awaiting the long absent prince grew suddenly cool when it was found out how he had broken his promise by falling in love with a foreign beauty. The chill deepened with the knowledge that he had actually brought his sweetheart back with him and was determined to marry her without delay.

Even the sight of Pearl Shepard's beauty could not shake his relatives

The former Miss Pearl Shepard, of New York and the movies, who has been for more than a year, it is now revealed, the secret bride of Prince Mohammed Ali Ibrahim, of Egypt's royal family from the belief that Ali Ibrahim was making a grave mistake in disobeying their express commands by becoming the fiance of an American girl.

If he persisted in marrying her it would, they feared, result in grave political disturbances and perhaps the overthrow of his family's political power.

A generation ago, when Egypt's young men of wealth and high social position began to get the habit of taking foreign brides, their countrymen felt rather pleased and proud. But as these international love matches grew more and more numerous and it was seen what disastrous consequences most of them had, the nation underwent a revulsion of feeling.

"And they lived happily ever after" was an ending that seldom fitted the marriage of an Egyptian and some European or American beauty. All too frequently they wound up in the divorce courts, and sometimes they were brought to a tragic close by murder or suicide.

THE murder of Prince Fahmy Bey, shot by his beautiful French wife in a London hotel after a stormy married life, made the feeling against the marriage of Egyptians and foreigners still more intense. Aside from the frequent failure of these matches to bring the husbands happiness, it was pointed out that most of those who took foreign wives went abroad to live and thus robbed their country of wealth and ability which it sadly needs.

The slur which these foreign love matches cast on Egypt's women was another reason why the slogan "Only native wives for Egyptians" became a popular one.

All these arguments, already familiar to the prince, were recounted to him again and again and again. But they had lost their force since he had come under the spell of Pearl Shepard's radiant youth and beauty. For her sake he was willing to sacrifice his chance of a throne,

The king of Egypt, Ali Ibrahim's uncle, who did everything he could to prevent the young man marrying a foreigner incur his family's lasting displeasure and even risk plunging his country into a bloody revolution.

"I must marry her," was his unswerving reply to all the arguments and entreaties that swept down on him. "If we cannot be married here and make our love nest on the banks of the Nile we will go to some land where true love is not so cruelly treated."

At last Ali Ibrahim's family yielded to the inevitable. He might wed his American sweetheart, but for grave political reasons the marriage must be secret, and be kept so for a long time.

Mrs. Ginsburg saw the ceremony performed before her return to America a year ago. The efforts to prevent the marriage becoming known were so prolonged that when the prince and his Pearl came to this country a few weeks ago they came ostensibly not as man and wife.

Their arrival and their stay here were as stealthy as if they were criminals fleeing from justice. The once evolvable prince had no interviews to give the reporters. In fact, the latter did not find out that the lovers were in America until they were about to depart.

After they had gone Mrs. Ginsburg was forced to admit that her daughter was the prince's bride—that they had been secretly married for a year.

Before these lines are printed the news will doubtless have broken in Egypt and the populace will know how it has been deceived by its young prince. And then what will happen?

Whatever the result, even revolution and exile will hardly be able to spoil Ali Ibrahim's joy. Now that he has gained possession of his Pearl, nothing else matters.

Rich Mr. Winthrop and

FOR years Grenville Lindall Winthrop, wealthy society man and descendant of the famous Winthrops of Massachusetts colonial days, had been pointed out as a man who had succeeded in keeping his daughters, Kate and Emily, from all thoughts of love and marriage and reconciling them to lives of spinsterhood.

Their mother had died when the girls were mere babies, and from that day on the father devoted himself to their care with single-heartedness and tender solicitude found in a man.

But there was, as soon became apparent, a purpose in the care he lavished upon his daughters entirely apart from their health and happiness. He wanted to shut them off entirely from the society of the opposite sex and give them not the slightest opportunity for anything savoring of romance.

Why was Mr. Winthrop so anxious to shield his girls from love and marriage? Two reasons are advanced for his extraordinary course, and it seems highly probable that they both may have played a part in making him do as he did.

According to one theory the grieving widower early became so fond of the companionship of his daughters that he could not bear the thought of even one of them leaving him and going away to live with a husband.

The other theory, and one which many of the society gossips think far more plausible, is that the girls' mother in the last years of her life showed symptoms of a serious mental disease. Mr. Winthrop is said to have been haunted by the fear that the daughters might have inherited this, and this was why he thought it best for them never to marry.

At any rate, there is no doubt that the childhood of Kate and Emily Winthrop was practically boyless. They danced and played and went to school only with girls. On the rare occasions when a little son of one of their fashionable neighbors tried to scrape an acquaintance with them he was always shooed away by Mr. Winthrop or one of the servants so brusquely that he seldom had the courage to repeat the attempt.

So it went all through the girls' childhood. Mr. Winthrop saw them growing into very comely and spirited young women with mingled joy and sorrow. By the time they were old enough to make the debuts their good looks attracted attention wherever they went and their father must have realized the necessity for still greater vigilance in his efforts to keep them safely out of the reach of men.

The magnificent country estate which Mr. Winthrop planned especially for his daughters and with an eye to keeping them amused and at the same time always under his eye is in the heart of the famous millionaire colony at Lenox, Mass. The stately mansion stands far back from the road and is so shut in by thick foliage, tall hedges, iron gates and fences and stone walls that there is no chance of any passing male eye getting a glimpse of its occupants.

Not far from Groton place, as the estate is known, is the village of Dalton, where the late Senator W. Murray Crane made his millions making paper and where his wealthy sons still live.

The chance of an automobile accident threw one of the Crane boys and Emily Winthrop together. He was so pleased with her that he said, "May I call?" She stammered what he took for a rather shy girl's assent, and accordingly a few days later he presented himself at the Groton Place mansion.

It was her father, however, instead of Emily, who appeared in response to the card he gave the butler—a frowning and very gruff father, indeed.

JUST what Mr. Winthrop said to his young millionaire caller has never been revealed, but his remarks are said to have been very much to the point and a good deal more vigorous than is usual in polite society. A few minutes later embarrassed young Mr. Crane dashed out of the house and into his waiting roadster, and there is no record of his trying again to meet the Winthrop heiress.

A Society Father's Remarkable Disillusionment—and How the Eloping Heiresses and Their Toil-Stained Young Husbands May Soon Find Themselves Disillusioned, Too

A little later a close friend of the family, one who understood and sympathized with Mr. Winthrop's surprising plans for his daughters, took Miss Kate to Palm Beach for the season. In spite of the chaperon's best efforts the girl became friendly with a young man of wealth and social position, just the sort of suitor most parents would be delighted to have for one of their daughters.

His Runaway Daughters

he unsuspectingly pushed open the door of the chicken house he was dumbfounded to see his daughter clasped in the arms of Darwin Morse, the handy man about the estate. His amazed amazement deepened as he saw how adeptly and eagerly the girlish lips which he had thought quite un-kissable were receiving and returning the caresses of the roughly clad young workman."

Emily, now the wife of Corey L. Miles, family chauffeur.

The following summer this young man came to Lenox as a guest of Mr. and Mrs. Charles A. Bristed, all prepared to renew what he had found an extremely pleasant acquaintance with Kate Winthrop. But, like unhappy Mr. Crane before him, he got no nearer the heart of the heiress than the reception room of the Groton Place mansion.

From that room he emerged, after a few curtly inhospitable words from Mr. Winthrop, convinced that it would take a braver heart than he possessed to pursue his interest in Kate Winthrop.

Incidents like this soon taught the young men of the smart set in which the Winthrops moved by right of wealth and ancient lineage the wisdom of giving the two heiresses a wide berth. Charming as the girls were, they were not charming enough to induce any men of their own station in life to brave the wrathful opposition of their father for their sake.

TO SEE his plans working out so well must have given Mr. Winthrop a great deal of satisfaction. As the girls drew nearer and nearer the age of thirty the risk of their becoming involved in romances waned. But as the risk lessened he redoubled his efforts to provide them with so many fascinating interests that their minds would have no room for thoughts of men and love.

He built a studio, a palatial little place that cost as much as many of the smart villas that hide along the shaded roads of Lenox. There the heiresses had every facility for painting and sculpture. Both the girls had considerable talent and works of theirs won high praise when shown at the amateur art exhibitions at Stockbridge and elsewhere.

Emily Winthrop is fond of dogs, and her father provided her with kennels that were the finest in the Berkshires and among the finest in America.

Sister Kate, preferring poultry to pedigreed pups, had an extensive chicken farm. It boasted of several electric-lighted, steam-heated houses where the prize-winning pullets and pigeons lived in greater comfort than many a workman's family.

By an odd coincidence it was in one of these very chicken houses which Mr. Winthrop had built to distract his daughter from thoughts of love and kisses that he beheld the first evidence of the crushing disillusionment that was in store for him.

One summer afternoon, noticing that

Kate had been at her chicken farm for an unusually long time, he went in search of her.

As he unsuspectingly pushed open the door of the principal chicken house he was dumfounded to see his daughter clasped in the arms of Darwin Morse, the handy man about the estate. His pained amazement deepened as he saw how adeptly and eagerly the girlish lips which he had thought quite un-kissable and un-kissable were receiving and returning the caresses of the roughly clad young workman.

When Mr. Winthrop recovered his power of speech he spoke with words vitriolic. Young Morse was fired on the spot. Daughter Kate received a scolding as never before.

But the violent storm was of short duration. Mr. Winthrop seems to have been lulled into a sense of security by Kate's penitent promises to be good. Before many months Darwin Morse, who had been learning the electrician's trade, was actually hired to help with some wiring about the Winthrop place.

THEN Kate quickly resumed her rudely interrupted romance and the stage was set for the big scene of this love drama.

Kate's confidences concerning the delights of love and kisses roused her sister's interest. She began to smile coquettishly at the only other accessible man, Corey L. Miles, the family chauffeur, and was pleased to find her smiles returned with interest. She had found a lover as well as Emily!

It began to be noticed that the Winthrop heiresses were seen less and less frequently with the Bristed sisters and other sedate girls of the Lenox smart set whom their father approved. Soon the gossips were whispering how, whenever Mr. Winthrop was called away, Kate and Emily and their humbly born cavaliers would roam the Berkshire hills all day long in one or more of the family cars.

Miles, older and more sophisticated, began to urge on Morse the advantages of a double elopement. He had already had one wife—an actress, who had died just as their divorce was being arranged.

"Why shouldn't we marry them?" Miles argued. "They love us, we love them. We're just as good as the Winthrops, even if we haven't so much money and aren't in the social register, and we'll make the girls a blamed sight better husbands than some of those boobs in the smart set."

Morse's mother, a shrewd New England woman, added the force of her argument, and finally the young electrician agreed to do his part.

The infatuated Winthrop sisters were delighted, and with the aid of the well filled pocketbooks they opened the plans for the double elopement were quickly made. Money was one thing they did not have to worry about. When they came of age they had come into the millions left them by their mother, and there was another million apiece held in trust by their uncle which they could claim whenever they chose.

One afternoon never to be forgotten by Mr. Winthrop he returned to Lenox from New York to find that his two daughters had been secretly married the day before and had motored away to the Green Mountains for their honeymoon.

Perhaps never was any society father more overwhelmed with surprise and disillusionment. Carefully laid plans of thirty years for keeping his daughters loveless had utterly failed. Not only had his adored and carefully shielded girls married, but they had married far beneath their station—had run away as a pair of shop girls might have done with two toff-stained workmen.

But there are many who think that

Sodom

Dr. Kyle, noted figure in field research, tells of successful search which for first time disclosed traces of a civilization that was already ancient when Tutankhamen reigned in Egypt.

Modern man drills for oil in petroleum field whose gases once rained fire, wiping out capitals.

Account in Bible of event more than four thousand years old is verified by geological findings as well as by pottery relics, explorer declares.

Latest knowledge in study of ancient pottery gives definite clew to scripture account of Lot, to whom was attributed the beginning of civilization.

SCIENCE has at last conquered in its long search for the sites of the wicked Biblical cities of Sodom and Gomorrah, says Dr. Melvin Grove Kyle, eminent archaeologist. In the following article he sets forth the results of the recent expedition which he led into the region of the Dead Sea. The party discovered the first scientific evidence of the actual existence of the ancient cities which were destroyed by a rain of brimstone and fire at the time Lot's wife, looking back, was turned into a pillar of salt.

The expedition, according to Dr. Kyle, showed that the two cities were destroyed as described, and Dr. Kyle says the fate of Lot's wife is scientifically possible.

The investigations of Dr. Kyle and his fellow explorers, accomplished in association with the American School of Oriental Research at Jerusalem—investigations of outstanding historical importance—met with success denied to previous searchers because of recent developments in the study of ancient pottery. It is now possible to determine the date of ruins from fragments of pottery. Dr. Kyle found corroboration of the Biblical story in pottery of the Early Bronze Age, 2500-1800 B. C. Sodom was destroyed at least 500 years before the death of the Egyptian king, Tutankhamen, and possibly much earlier. Lot was the nephew of Abraham, and according to some authorities the latter entered into this region about 2300 B. C.—more than a thousand years before the Trojan war and eighteen centuries before the Greeks defeated the Persians at Marathon.

Dr. Kyle thoroughly explored the region of the Dead Sea, the lowest sheet of water in the world—a region in which civilization is said to have been established by Lot. In this vicinity drilling for oil is now being carried on. According to Dr. Kyle the site of the cities which were destroyed by fire now lies under the rising waters of the Dead Sea.

Searching for Sodom is not as simple a matter as it sounds. It is not enough to find some old ruin supposed to be Sodom. That has been done a score of times. The search for those lost cities of the barbaric world, engulfed by the fire of the wrath of Jehovah and buried for centuries under the desert many fruitless expeditions, into the land of Moab.

Our first task was to establish upon indisputable evidence the civilization of the Early Bronze Age, the Abrahamic Age, in that region of the Dead Sea where Sodom was supposed to have existed. We then had to show that the long silence of Scripture concerning any subsequent civilization there was, or was not, in accordance with the facts as shown by the material evidence. Having established these things we were in a position to inquire where the ancient metropolis, Sodom, stood.

The Biblical account of the destruction of Sodom and Gomorrah states that it rained fire and brimstone from heaven upon the cities. It does not say where the sulphur came from nor how the fire was kindled, nor what caused it to smoke up to heaven "like the smoke of a furnace," nor whence came the salt which incrusts one of the refugees who, like some at Pompeii, loitered behind and was caught. The finding of geologic evidence, in support of these apparent miracles, was also a part of our task. The difficulty of our work can be better appreciated when one remembers that Sodom and the Amorite civilization of its period existed half a millennium before the time of Moses or Tutankhamen.

A Bedouin home on the Plain of Sodom. The inhabitants, whose mode of life has not changed in centuries, are suspicious: if they see white men digging they think it is for treasure; hence the Kyle party employed these people as workmen to do the actual excavation, reducing the probability of a hostile move founded on gossip.

Na'im Makhoul, of the Antiquities Department of Palestine, and Mr. Dinsmore, a famous Palestine botanist.

WE went by motor to Kerak, around through eastern Moab by way of Es Salt and Amman. As far as Amman we followed the old Roman road; from Amman to Kerak we went by trail across the desert.

It was a wild ride, up five thousand feet from Allenby's bridge over the Jordan to the hill of Kerak, the old fortress and ancient Kir of Moab.

At Kerak we found relics of Crusader, Arabic or perhaps Byzantine times. But also we found ancient pottery on the east side of the precipice! But nobody ever built a city there! And then in a moment we knew. The Crusader castle was just above. The Crusaders had swept the rubbish of the old Kir over the edge of the precipice.

There on the side of the precipice we found the remains of Kir. Then our query for the spring was instantly answered, for right before our eyes a well-worn path along the mountain side led to an excellent spring. Along that pathway was a cave and in the cave we found a tunnel leading straight toward the site of the old Kir on the hill—a secret way to get water when the city was beleaguered. The High Place, which we supposed had been swept with other rubbish into the valley, was found away on the highest point of the isolated mountain on which the city stood.

AS these findings of ancient pottery at Kerak led us to the discovery of the old Kir, so have the potsherds established for many other investigators authentic data concerning various periods of history. Articles of iron and textile fabrics have rusted and rotted, but the potsherds have not perished.

Old pots in Palestine indicate the ages from which they come as positively as did Dolton and Limoges indicate the ages and stage of modern ceramic art in Europe. In the past twenty years the science of pottery has been carefully worked out in connection with archaeological explorations. Now there is known very definitely the pottery which belonged to the Early Bronze Age, 2500—1800 B. C., the Middle Bronze Age, 1800—1600, and the Late Bronze Age, from 1600 to a more indefinite date. It was because of this recent development of the science of potsherds that the Xenia Seminary expedition was able to make the first real archaeological survey of the region of the civilization of Sodom and Gomorrah.

But our objective was in the plain, not at Kerak. We changed to a muleteer pack and started down—5000 feet in a few miles.

We had literally combed the plain for information.

AN identification of the ancient city of Zoar made by General Kitchener as being located at El Ubrous, far up in the foothills of the mountains of Moab, we found to be inaccurate. There was no water for miles around. A mountain fortress such as that at Ubrous might be located on a mountain, to guard the caravan road, but the inhabitants of the plain dwelt near the water. All the heaps of ancient ruins are along the water course.

But what might not be at the bottom of these heaps of ruins dotting the plain? We had to find out. Our Bedouin diggers went down to the virgin sand and gravel. We found not a trace of anything that went back within two thousand years of the time of Sodom. Here was an exact parallel to the silence of Scripture concerning this region from the time of Abraham on.

When our excavations, however, had led us as far as the shore of the sea a real discovery awaited us. On the east side of the sea was a submerged forest extending in places about a mile out from the shore. Another submerged forest was along the western side of this lower end of the sea. These trees grew on dry land; certainly within a hundred years, probably less.

Does it need an archaeologist to tell the reader what this means? The sea has been rising. There are other evidences. I have myself been making observations on the Dead sea for thirty-two years. When I first saw the sea there was a beautiful island in the north end. In 1924 I passed over that island in eight feet of water.

We traversed the shore and came up the plain along the old Roman road, of which a branch runs down the Lisan, the tongue of land that juts out from the east and nearly cuts the sea in two. Arabs still living in Kerak remember when camel caravans used to ford the sea at that point. When the sea had filled in enough at the upper end, it ran over at this point and flooded the southern plain.

All the time we were camped at Ghor Es Safi on this plain there had been—glaring in the sunlight day by day—that great white mountain on the west shore; not so high as those back of it, but conspicuous because gleaming like a veritable mountain of salt. Yes, salt! That is exactly what gleams and flashes there. We hired a motor boat at El Mezra, the port of Kerak on the sea, to cruise about that salt mountain. It is known as Jebel Usdum and consists of a stratum of rock salt about 150 feet thick at the base. Between the layers, and running down over them from the top, is a marl mixed with pure sulphur. Lumps of it may be picked up far and wide over the plain.

This salt and sulphur encrusts everything in the neighborhood. A certain pinnacle of the mountain incrustated with it has been pointed out by the Arabs as Lot's wife. That identification is only legend, but the incrustation shows exactly what happened to the poor woman, reluctant to leave her home. Some people imagine the whole story to be a myth. It is the simplest narrative of historical fact.

THE geologists, Wright and Blanckenkorn, while working here twenty years ago, found unmistakable evidence of just such a catastrophe as the Bible records. This is a burned out region of oil and asphalt. The oil has collected again; in fact, they are now drilling for oil near Hebron. At some point in historical time, the date of which geology cannot fix, something kindled the gases which accompany oil. There was an upheaval and then subsidence and the great stratum of rock salt and sulphur was ruptured. The salt and sulphur were carried, red hot, up into the heavens, from which fire and brimstone were rained upon Sodom and the whole plain and "all that grew out of the ground."

The whole region was blasted.

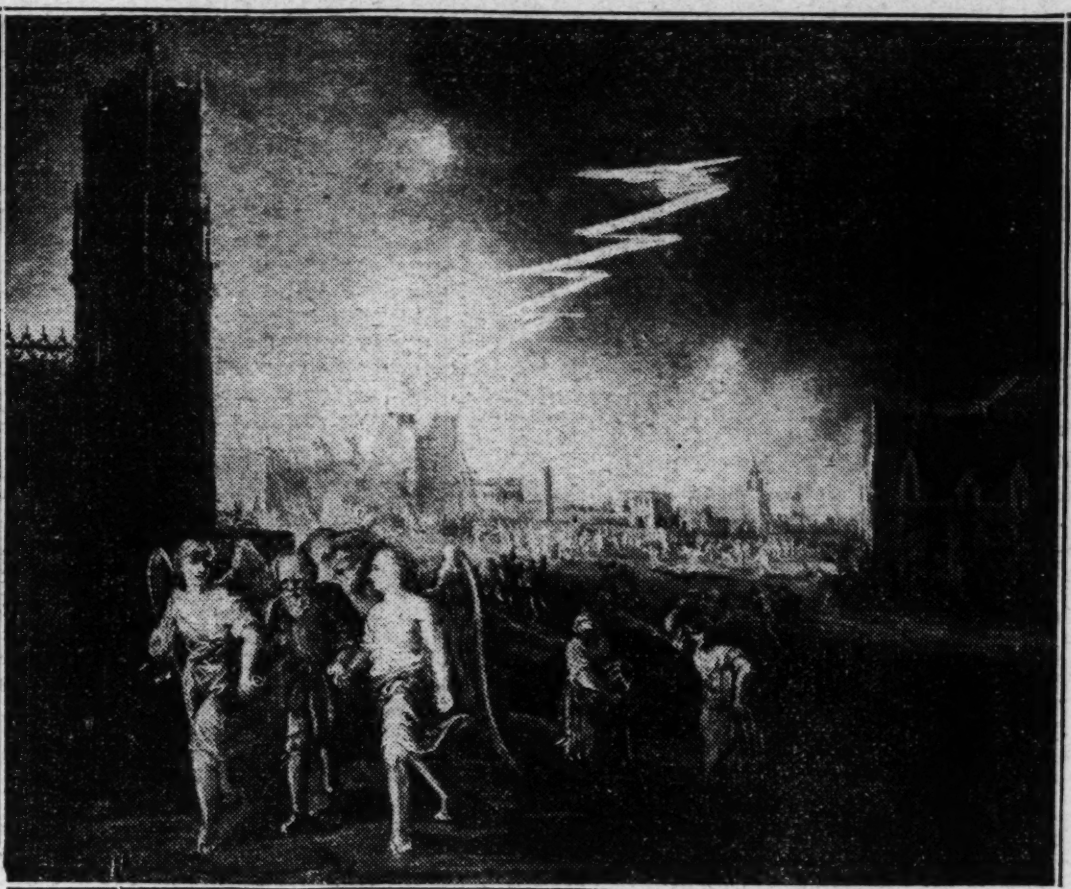

The account in the Bible draws aside the curtain to let us see what God was doing. The geologists show us what took place in the elements of nature. The two accounts exactly agree.

Now, where was that catastrophe? Where was Sodom? Manifestly the catastrophe was where the ruins of it now are. Ruins "stay put." The rivers converge toward a point in the shallow water in front of this salt mountain—the place which was overflowed by the filling in of the upper end of the sea since Abraham's day. There the waters have mercifully come and hid from view the shame of the doomed cities.

Some one will remind me at this point that the actual evidence of that old civilization on the plain has not been shown. That very day of our cruise to Jebel Usdum, Pere Mallon came upon some graves which the Arabs had opened in search of treasure. They were on the high ground at the eastern edge of the cultivated land. There, scattered around the graves, were many precious pieces of the beautiful light pottery of the early bronze age. An examination the following day showed hundreds of these graves and a great quantity of pottery. Here was conclusive evidence that the old civilization of that age—of which we could find no trace at any subsequent date—was actually here.

We had found everything we hoped for; the evidence for the cities of the plain was complete, but still more was in store for us. In 1908 I excavated around the base of a statue of Rameses the Great at the Temple of Luxor, and found an inscription in which he boasted of having made conquest of Moab. This certified the existence of the civilization in Moab as early as the time of the Exodus. The Bible represents that civilization to have begun with the flight of Lot to the mountains of Moab, when he was afraid to stay longer in Zoar.

A few days before the discovery at Bab ed-Dra, a Moabite temple was found at Ader in the mountains east of the Dead sea. It is similar in construction to Solomon's temple, only smaller and ruder. The pottery here dated this temple at the latter part of the early bronze age and the early part of the middle bronze age, 1800-1600 B. C. Thus are confirmed both the Biblical date for the rise of Moabite civilization and Ran-ses' claim for its importance in his day, just before the Exodus.

The Destruction of Sodom and Gomorrah: one of the many paintings of the story which has captivated the imaginations of artists. This picture is the work of a Dutch painter, who was a pupil and imitator of Rembrandt—Gerbrandt Van Den Eeckout, who was born at Amsterdam in 1621. Following the manner of his period, he depicted the Biblical scene with the architecture of his own day. Between the clouds of smoke are seen the burning cities and the panic-stricken people, while the rain of brimstone is heightened by the lightning flash. In the foreground is Lot, escaping in company of two angels, with members of his family behind him.—Courtesy of the Metropolitan Museum of Art, New York.

Coming down over the long centuries of silence to the present, we now know the burial of the dead and the worship of the gods by the people of the plain in the days of Abraham and before that time. The sparkling fresh water, fertile fields and fig trees attest the richness of the plain in which the cities stood. The extensiveness of the cemetery at Bab ed-Dra and the size and strength of the fortress give a guarantee that more than sustains the Biblical references to the greatness of the metropolis of Sodom.

The precisely typical character of the shrine with its seven sacred pillars puts this civilization exactly alongside the civilization of that age elsewhere in Palestine. For the date of all this we have the distinct pottery of the early bronze age, as conclusive as printed books are of the modern age of printing. The geologists, as we have seen, show us exactly what took place here in the elements of nature—the bed of rock salt mixed with free sulphur, rent and torn and uplifted. They have shown us the oil field with its by-products of asphalt and the source of the gasses that ruptured the stratum and carried salt and sulphur into the heavens, and let them descend, red hot, sending up such a column of smoke as only hot asphalt can generate. The geologist cannot tell us the time of these events, but the Bible tells us that, and the pottery substantiates the Bible records.

WE know also the curious hydrographic history of the sea during the last four thousand years. Water runs into the Dead sea but does not run out. Its only escape is evaporation. But evaporation depends upon the extent of the evaporating surface. A broad basin sends up more steam than a narrow one. Since the days of Abraham and of Lot, and the city of Sodom, the great torrent of Jordan has filled in a delta at the upper end of the sea, equal to one-seventh of the evaporating surface of the sea. This caused the sea to rise until it could run over the southern end and submerge the plain where the ruined cities stood.

For a long time the sea rose but little more, because it could still run over and spread out at the southern plain. About a hundred years ago, or less, it reached the higher ground around that edge and so the sea began to rise again and, the delta still filling it, it has submerged the forest along the edges of the sea on the plain, as we have seen.

There the cities destroyed by the fire are now hidden in their fallen estate by the merciful waters. Why just there? Because the metropolises of the world are at the junction of water courses. Is it common sense to suppose it different here on the plain? There at the heart of the devastation the water courses meet, and there the cities stood. Yonder on the edge of the mountain desert they buried their dead and worshipped their gods and built their great fortress to guard the frontier north and east.

That which will impress all who read this account, as it impressed all engaged in the researches, is the trustworthiness of the Biblical cities of the plain. Moreover, this is but a single instance of the general course of such discoveries during the last hundred years. Archaeologists do not find that the ancients falsified their documents nor were they indifferent to the accuracy of their record.

IDON'T your uncle tell you about his scheme, Jane?" Gail's dark face smoothed to a new thoughtfulness. The timber track was wide enough for them to ride abreast, and his expression puzzled Jane Borden as she studied his profile.

"No. It was that same night that he—that he died."

Gail nodded. "That's so. I'd forgotten." His face seemed to clear, as from a doubt. She fancied that he was relieved, pleased, even.

"I'm right glad he didn't, Jane. It's better you shouldn't know—not yet, anyhow. The way things are fixed, I mean. You don't have to worry—the scheme's all right. I'm tending to it."

"I'm not worried about that," she said. "But you don't understand how—how I feel. Miss Drummond asked me to stop with her temporarily—till I could straighten out my affairs. I didn't know, then, that I hadn't any affairs to straighten out—and neither did she. As it's turned out, I'm on her hands indefinitely, and I don't feel—"

"They're right pleased to have you, Jane. You don't have to fret about that." He spoke quickly. "Anybody'd be glad to."

"That's very nice, and I hope it's true, but it doesn't alter the facts, Sheppard. I've got to face things; I can't go on this way. They—they're both kind and thoughtful, and perhaps they really do like having me here, but—O, it's horribly ungrateful of me to think it, I know, but they're not my kind, Sheppard. They're so different from—from us that they don't ever know there's a difference. It never occurs to them that their routine may not suit me as perfectly as it suits them, that I may not look at things as they do. They just take it for granted that what satisfies them satisfies me, too."

A Dramatic Novel of the Forest and Sandhills of the South—a Fine Story of Love and Adventure

There was, she thought, a gleam of ironic humor in his look. But he nodded, as she paused, and seemed to wait for her to go on.

"It's hateful to feel this way about it. But sometimes it seems as if I'd have to scream at the monotony of it, Sheppard. Getting up at daylight—everlasting prayers, after breakfast, with all the house negroes standing in the doorway—work and then more work, till it's dark again—I don't mean that I have any to do—it would be easier if I did, perhaps—I mean that the idea of work just fills up their lives. They don't work to live, they live to work; you never get out from under the shadow of that word."

"I know." He nodded. "It'd be bound to feel queer, to you. But it isn't just because they don't know any better, Jane. If you aim to make a living off this sorry soil, you got to work—work all you know, just to keep your head out of water. Dave MacIvor works his land mighty hard, but he drives himself a sight harder yet. He's got to, or sell out and quit."

This pleased and irritated her at once. She had counted on him for sympathy, understanding, and yet she admired him for his defense of a man he disliked.

"I'm not criticising them. It's just that I don't fit into their scheme of things. I'm in their way; there's no place in that household for an idler, and—I've discovered that being idle is pleasant only when the setting suits it. It's—its deadly dull there, Sheppard. They've forgotten how to rest and I don't believe they ever knew how to play. And I don't know how to do anything else."

Again he nodded, and held his tongue. She moved a hand in an impatient gesture.

"I could stand it if I could tell myself that it wasn't for long," she went on. "I like them. I know how good they're being to me, and I'm not small enough to resent the obligation. But it suffocates me, looking ahead and seeing nothing but that treadmill round of theirs. Slavery—it's nothing less, Sheppard, slavery to a lot of barren land and a set of antiquated ideas; slavery to an old-fashioned God, backed up by a physical hell and a heaven of gold pavements with milk in one gutter and honey in the other. I'm sorry for them, but they don't know they need anybody's pity; I'm sorrier for myself."

"If you can make out to stand it a spell longer, you'll get to the end of it, Jane. I reckon I can promise you that much. I hate for you to be staying there. But there's no other place, right now. I haven't got any aunt, or I'd ask you—"

She cut in quickly. You don't understand. I'm not unhappy there—not in the present, I mean. It's oddly bearable, even when I'm bored to tears, and Miss Allie's no end of fun. It's the future that chokes me. If I could see the end of it—"

"I'm telling you it's coming powerful close, Jane—the end of this. I'm fixing—"

"Yes. But how? I'm skeptical—curious. I can't satisfy myself with nice, indefinite promises. I want to know the details, I want to convince myself that there really is a way out. And that's why you've got to tell me just what it was that Uncle Warren meant."

He shook his head. "Reckon I better not, Jane. Not yet awhile, anyhow. You have to take my word for it."

She was offended. "That seems rather strange, doesn't it? Uncle Warren would have told me."

He nodded. "Yes. But things were mighty different, then. You weren't living with Dave MacIvor's aunt. I don't know how I can make it look plain to you, the way I see it, without I tell you too much. Maybe I can. It's thisaway."

He hesitated, and she smiled thinly at the final word.

Sometimes his speech was as free as hers of the local idiom, though always the resonant, pleasing quality of the country colored and warmed his voice; there were occasions, however, when, as now, he slipped into the argot of the neighborhood, and always she found an unreasonable pleasure in those homely phrases, when he used them, liked him the better for what seemed an evidence of sincerity.

"This scheme your uncle had—it's all fair and square—he wouldn't've thought of it if it hadn't been. Only—only it won't look thataway to Dave MacIvor, when he hears about it. You know, Dave. He's got a sight of foolish notions, Jane. And this scheme—"

"It's something to do with his timber, then, and the railroad?"

"I reckon I better not even answer that."

"You seem to have very little faith in my discretion—" she was angry, now. Her voice told him so. He hushed.

"It might look thataway, Jane, but it isn't so. It's deeper—the way you're fixed, living there at Miss Drummond's, Dave's got a right to feel that you wouldn't go against him. No matter if he's wrong in his notions, like we know he is, it would not look decent to him for you to be helping beat him."

HER anger died in a glow of pleased comprehension. She liked Sheppard Gail better than ever, as his reasoning explained itself to her mystified resentment. That was the gentleman, the legitimate heir of the cavalier, seeing even sordid business from the point of view of a man of honor! He was protecting her against what his code regarded as a breach of the faith, splitting hair perhaps, but splitting them with patient accuracy.

"I'm sorry, Sheppard. I ought to have seen that for myself. You're right, of course. Don't tell me any more. I'd rather not know."

He brightened. "You understand that it's all fair, this notion your uncle had! There's no reason why you shouldn't know about it, help me work it out, excepting only that while you're living over yonder—"

"I understand. And I'm glad you saw it as you did. It would be contemptible of me, if I knew. I couldn't stay there."

"You got to remember that Dave's going to profit by it—a sight more'n anybody else. We're aiming to do him the biggest favor anybody could. It's only his wrong headed notions that don't look at it right."

"Yes. I quite understand." She felt a warmth of liking for him. "It's just what I might have expected of you, Sheppard, I'm ashamed that I didn't guess."

He drew rein abruptly and both horses paused. He turned in the saddle, facing her.

"I—I got no right to talk the way I'm fixed, Jane. You know how that is—you been to my place—you've seen what it's like. But I can't stand it—having you look ahead and never seeing an end to it. I got to tell you, Jane—I been wanting to tell you since the first evening you got here, that time I saw you at the station. I reckon, maybe, you guessed. I couldn't help showing it, some. But this scheme is going to fix it all up—you're going to make plenty out of it. You'll be fixed comfortable enough to do what you're a-mind to, I mean. And I'm going to be fixed so I can ask you to love me back, Jane."

His voice made her think of a violin. Something in her sang and quivered in response in its vibration. She had a stab of self-reproach for her earlier opinions of him; she'd laughed at his gallantry as a kind of harmless affectation, thought of him as a figure in some amiable comedy, with his shabby gentility, his elaborate flourishes, his threadbare pride. And while she had laughed he had loved her, and had held his tongue, had worked and planned in her interest, and, where she would have seen no question of ethics, had safeguarded her honor in his own sight more jealousy than his own.

"I'd have asked you right out, that time your uncle died," he went on, in the same singing key. "I wanted to, Jane! I like to have died, leaving you go live yonder at Miss Drummond's, when I wanted you like I never wanted to live! But I couldn't ask you—I knew I had to wait till I'd fixed it so you'd be rich again."

Her eyes widened. Here was a new riddle, so challenging that it arrested her thought in the midst of unreasoning emotional reactions. He couldn't ask her to marry him till he'd made her rich! Why?

He seemed to see the question in her look. "I had a house, such as it is, and I could make out to take care of you, but I couldn't go asking you then, could I? When you were fixed so it looked like there wasn't any other way out? I couldn't come offering you my old house and me, when it might look like I was giving you something instead of getting everything? I was plumb bound to wait till you could say yes or no without thinking of anything else only did you want to or not. You can say it now, Jane. In a little while you'll have plenty to go back north, if you're a-mind to. You don't have to stay down here and choose between my place and Miss Drummond's—you can—"

Her hands went out to him impulsively. "I'll stay," she heard herself whisper. "I'll stay where you stay, Sheppard."

Afterward, when she tried to search out the truth, it seemed as much her own idea as Gail's, though the suggestion came from him in a persuasive rush of eloquence. She was shamed by the realization that, as she listened, the life at Miss Drummond's house was in her mind, the contrast between its dour, bleak routine of work and God and the shiftless, inviting indolence of Gail's existence as she had glimpsed it once, when hounds met in front of his shabby, beautiful old house among the pines—the slipshod comfort of the mellow rooms where he lived in his litter of pipes and tattered copies of "The Field," where bits and crops and riding gloves were scattered about in comforting confusion and his pet copy of Handley Cross seemed as characteristic and significant as MacIvor's worn old Bible. There was even an added impulse in the thought that tomorrow was Miss Drummond's inevitable cleaning day, when the rooms would be relentlessly turned inside out in pursuit of non-existing dust. There was temptation in the thought of escaping tonight's prayers, the plodding tempo of MacIvor's voice, reading from the Old Testament, the slow fervor of his praying tone, the early retreat to the bare room under the roof, to lie awake, listening to stealthy noises in the woods and looking forward to another deadly day when the sun came back.

"There's no reason why we got to wait, Jane, if you care. I don't feel like I could leave you go back to Dave's, now I know. I got so, when night comes, I saddle up a horse and ride over to Miss Drummond's, so I can see the light go out in your window. We could ride down to the village."

JANE BORDEN never wholly understood the impulse that bade her yield. But the thought came to her, now, touched with childish glamour of adventure and romance, beckoning like a forbidden, harmless escapade, with, too, a sudden, quickening hunger for escape. The intoxication of a reckless gallop through the shadow dappled lanes, the pounding beat of hoofs on the sand, the infection of strength and eagerness in the plunging beast that carried her, as if, like the mare, she felt the release of some restraining, curbing overmastery—they all contributed to the acquiescent, unthinking mood that lay upon her through the ride, that carried her almost defiantly into the shabby little study where Mr. Geikie listened soberly to Gail's swift explanation of their errand. It supported her as she stood up beside Sheppard Gail, only half conscious of the wide-eyed stares of

Mr. Geikie's wife and sister, summoned from the kitchen to be witnesses; it gave her voice assurance when it was her turn to answer, and there was a tight moment while she knew that she could still draw back. Only when the final words came to her with an exaggerated effect of solemnity did she wake to a clear realization of what she had done, and even then there was no real regret. Gail's hand closed tight on hers; she liked the quick strength of the lean fingers; there was in her a joyous consciousness of giving, a new sense for Jane Borden, who had given so little, taken so much.

They rode away at a walk, sparing the spent horses; Jane's mood seemed to reflect the change in pace. She could think now, could concern herself with practical considerations.

"We'd better take care this turn, hadn't we?" She drew rein as Gail would have taken the fork that branched off toward his house—her house, now. "I can't go without telling them—after their kindness."

He seemed to hesitate, as between opposing desires.

"Besides, I'll have to pack my things."

"That's so." He nodded. "I'll ride with you to the slanting pine, anyhow. I—" he stopped again—"I was thinking that maybe it might be better if you told them without me being there. They—they're right set against me, Jane. It's going to be mean news to them, and—"

"But no worse for your being with me, surely?"

"I don't know. I keep thinking how I'd feel if I was Dave MacIvor. I'd hate it a sight worse if I had to look at Shep Gail when Jane Borden told me she'd married him. It's bound to be bad enough for old Dave, without that."

Again the glow of her liking warmed to him. He could even now put himself in MacIvor's place, take thought of sparing the other man's feelings.

"You think everybody's in love with me, because you are, Sheppard," she said lightly. "It won't mean anything to David MacIvor except that he's well rid of a troublesome guest who doesn't understand his ways or agree with his whimsies. But it's like you to think of it that way. You're quite right, except that he doesn't care a straw what happens to me, as long as I'm out of his way. I'll go on alone. You can ride—" her tongue tripped at the word, but she forced it—"you can ride home and send a cart for my trunks. It may be just a little easier to face Miss Ailie if I'm alone. She's so outspoken—and she doesn't approve of you, of course. It would be a pity if she forced a quarrel on us."

"She won't ever do that—not on me," said Gail. "No matter what she says, I'm bound to remember she's been good to you when there was nobody else to do it. But it's better if I don't go. And I can start that negro of mine in to cleaning up some. It's a mighty sorry place to bring a lady. I wasn't figuring on carrying home a wife when I come away this morning."

She saw, below his smile, that he was honestly relieved at her willingness to fall in with his preference, and again her thought softened toward him. She had done a crazy thing, she admitted now; it was hard to believe that she'd married this man, this stranger, on the impulse of a momentary discontent. But she saw that she had made no mistake; he rang true:

she told herself that his sensibilities and perceptions were finer than her own. And she watched him as he cantered away, with a glow of pride and possession, conscious of the perfection of his riding, as another proof that she had chosen well.

SHE would not quarrel with the life that lay before her; she would live out her days in a great peace of solitude and love, as careless of trifling discomforts as Sheppard Gail himself. Poverty, here, was a superficial matter, a detail, no tragedy. Gail, no less than MacIvor, had taught her this.

She smiled at the thought of him. Under that surface sophistication he was just a shy, backwoods boy, after all. A protective, maternal impulse stirred in her. She would take care of him. The baffling sense of a discord, somewhere, was just silly, she told herself angrily. She was happy; she was always going to be happy. She touched the mare with her heel, as if to leave her doubts behind.

A shabby man on a forlorn mule passed her at the end of the home drive. She knew him as an incorrigible, saturated idler, who hung about the courthouse at Tyre, open to occasional odd jobs of process serving, a willing juror, industrious only in shunning labor and finding drink. His presence here puzzled her; Andie Craig was an improbable visitor at Miss Drummond's gate. He touched his rusty black hat as he jogged past, and she caught a look of something like disfavor in his watery eye. It followed her, with an effect of reproach, while she stabled her mare; it was still in her mind when she faced Miss Drummond and MacIvor in the gallery. She was angry at herself for imagining that the same shadow of reproach and doubt was in MacIvor's glance.

A feeling of regret troubled her. She should have thought of these two, have waited until they could be told. It would look, now, as if she had been afraid or ashamed, or as if she had carelessly ignored their claim of friendliness and service. She almost welcomed the gravity of their faces, the sense of impending trouble she could feel in their silence, as an excuse for deferring what had suddenly become a confession.

"Is—is anything wrong, David?"

"If Andie Craig has not found a mare's nest in the heel of his jug, something is wrong enough, Jane." He shut his lips grimly. "And for once the man had no sound of liquor." His tone changed. "You rode alone, today?"

She could feel a mounting heat in her cheeks.

"No. Sheppard Gail rode with me. He turned back at the clearing."

Why couldn't she tell them bluntly and be done? She hated herself for the forced lightness of her tone, as if Sheppard Gail meant nothing to her this morning that he had not meant yesterday. She saw MacIvor's lips tighten again and felt a sudden bitterness of antipathy in his silence.

"I—I wish you two were friends, David. I'm sure if you knew how he feels toward you—"

"I'm finding out, Jane." He seemed to halt his speech with a visible effort. Miss Ailie carried on for him.

"Small wonder that he takes it ill, Jane. The blood in him dislikes a beating more than most. And he sets such store by his timber—"

"The timber?" Jane started. "Has—has anything happened about that?"

HOW MANY POUNDS WOULD YOU LIKE TO GAIN IN A WEEK?

So Easy Now To Have the Lovely Rounded Neck and Shoulders That Everyone Admires

Scientific Discovery of Vitamines Quickly Builds Up Thin, Scrawny Figures—No Drugs or Dieting—Quick Relief For Tired, Worn-Out People.

Samples Sent FREE

ARE you too thin? You needn't be. Now it is possible for anyone to have smooth, full shoulders, rounded neck and a plump, trim figure. Hilton Vitamines, extracted from a wide range of foods, are primarily responsible for converting food into firm flesh and producing new vigor and vitality. Lack of Vitamines in the diet causes nervousness, loss of weight and vitality, headaches and many deficiency diseases such as skin eruptions and emaciation.

Hilton Vitamines

QUICK RELIEF NO DRUGS OR DIETING

When Hilton Vitamines are added to the diet, the results are often amazing in their rapidity. Within a few days many emaciated, scrawny figures begin to round out—bony angles and ugly hollows disappear. In a natural manner your weight quickly becomes what it should be according to your height. The flabby, useless tissues which are now a handicap become firm flesh and muscle—rich, red blood is produced—tasks now wearisome are quickly done because the food you eat is converted into energy.

A CLEAR COMPLEXION, Too

Along with the healthful gain in weight comes a new, clear complexion, free from pimples and blemishes—rosy cheeks which are indicative of new vitality and a consequent personal magnetism and charm that make for social success.

Important: Hilton Vitamines are not to be confused with "Vitaminic" products now on the market containing drugs. Hilton Vitamines are pure Vitamine concentrates, nothing else, and are widely recommended by physicians.

GAINS 4 POUNDS IN 8 DAYS
"I gained 4 pounds the first eight days I took Vitamines and am still gaining. Have increased my weight nine and a half pounds and feel like a different man."
GAINS 6 POUNDS QUICKLY
"Vitamines have increased my weight eight pounds and done wonders for my complexion. They are the first thing I ever tried that put weight on me. I advise every nervous, scrawny woman to take them."

A Blue Ribbon Short Story

THEY said no more as the fourth race ended, bringing in Ben Adhem for show, instead of the winning that Bergen had wagered, but, as if they did not need words for understanding, they went from the grandstand at the end of the fifth race, taking the first train back to Baltimore. On the way they talked of commonplaces, but when they had found shelter at a corner table in Caselli's they fell into those "Do you remember" that forge bonds of steel between those who meet after long partings. Over Caselli's famous crab-meat they loitered down old paths of recollection, stepping here and there over stiles of understanding. They had gone far toward the road of reconciliation when Laura pulled her cape around her.

"If I didn't know that you'd never loved me, Billy," she said. "I'd think you were trying to make me believe that you had."

She laughed as she arose, but her words sponged from the man's thoughts all the joy he had been finding in her presence. Remembrance of the night when he had stoned her with the truth flooded back on him, it's tide embittered anew by the knowledge that he had wrecked the girl's life by his brutality. For he knew that he, and he alone, could find in this Laura Raymer of the furs and diamonds, the perfume, and the luxurious nonchalance of aspect the girl he had married in the belief that she could hold him away from the life in which his action had plunged her. Not Bergen nor any other man could know the innate honesty and sweetness and tenderness that slumbered—that must be still alive, he told himself insistently—beneath her weary scorn. He couldn't let her go to Bergen under that cloud. She could marry again, of course. She surely would, one day. It was none of his business, he admitted. But he must, before she married, restore her to the place from which his selfishness had dragged her, must set her back on that pedestal where she had reigned as his wife. He had to get her straight with herself ere their paths diverged forever.

"I'm going to see you again?" he pleaded, as he saw that she was going to leave him outside the brilliant Elsinore.

He saw her hesitate, and he had the thought that not desire, but a sense of pity for him, led her to assent.

"I'll meet you at the track tomorrow," she promised.

He watched her enter the hotel with a strange feeling of loneliness that he had not known in the years of their separation, then struck off to find humble lodgings for the night.

For three days he met Laura on the grandstand, only to have her leave him as soon as the last race was over. He had an idea that she went back to Baltimore with Bergen, and avoided any train that might be carrying them. His uneasiness about her grew, however, with the vague allusions to Bergen that he overheard in the paddock, but Laura's manner held him off from speech about her future until the night before the running of the Calvert. Then, driven into action by the brooding that kept him awake of nights, he challenged her to combat.

"You're afraid to come down to Mother Graham's to supper with me," he told her, as the crowd rushed for the Baltimore train.

"I am not," she said.

AGAIN her glance led him to the belief that pity for his apparent poverty rather than wish for his company impelled her decision to go with him. In masculine irritation over the motive he began to brag in that whimsical way that made his boasts forgivable.

"I may be down on it today, Laura," he assured her, "but I still own the luck of the devil."

"That's what they've always said about you, isn't it?"

She fell into step beside him on the road to the town. Her eyes turned toward the bay, gleaming with sunset light, and he could only guess from her voice that a mood of sadness had overcast the gaiety that she had held through the afternoon.

"Do you need any money, Billy?" she asked him.

The kindness of her tone checked his angry refusal.

"No, thanks," he told her. "I've enough for a grub stake now, and I'll be rich again tomorrow."

"How do you know?"

It was the old question she had so often given him before their marriage on those evenings when they had come down the road, seeking the white house that stood now but a mockery of their associations with it and with each other.

"I've put five thousand dollars on Pentecost, and Pentecost is going to win the Calvert. It'll be four to one, too."

"Oh, Billy, you haven't!" The old-time consternation rang in her voice. "You haven't put everything on him?"

"Every red cent I could steal." He laughed at evanescent memories of how he had hoarded the pile for placing on the horse. "I can buy you a few blinders myself out of what I'll take away from the machines tomorrow."

"But if he doesn't win?"

"He's going to win."

"He'll get place, but he can't win. Oh, Billy, I know!"

Her voice trembled with agitation. All the indifference that had veneered her face had disappeared as she turned to him in the dusk that was speeding on the heels of sunset.

"How do you know?"

"I can't tell you that, but I do know. Can't you change? Can't you, copper? I have some money I've been keeping—" he knew she meant the account in the bank that she had never touched—"that I'll be glad to give you. Won't you take it?"

"No," he said.

They had come to the shack where, back of the steamed windows, they could see Mother Graham and Pop dishing coffee to the men on the high stools. Raymer put his hand to the door, but Laura hesitated.

"Let's not," she pleaded.

"I thought you wouldn't," he said, with a bitterness he could not quite conceal.

"It's not that," she tried to justify herself against the implication that she had outgrown the simplicity of the common lot. "It's the crowd. I don't feel like facing them. I'll tell you," she suggested with the eagerness of compromise, "what we'll do. You buy our supper and bring it up to the house. I have the key. I'll get the candles at the grocery. Don't you want to?" she demanded, seeing his hesitation. She put her hand on his arm in supplication.

"You just watch me," he said, and plunged into the shack.

HE was laden with armsful of food as he overtook her. He laughed at sight of the candles she had bought, and she laughed back, but their mirth died as they went through the dusk up the weed grown path to the house. Their hands met as he tried to help her with her fumbled unlocking of the door, and the quick flame that ran through his blood terrified him for the instant before he saw the glow in Laura's eyes, but she drew away from him as they entered the little square hallway and groped their way through the sitting room.

She lighted the candles she had bought, placing them on the dining room table. Then she pulled down the shades, with the comment that they might be mistaken for ghosts, and went about the setting of the table. As he watched her, Billy felt the coming of that queer tightening of his heart that had been assailing him in these meetings with her, but it was only when she had taken her place and smiled across at him that his memories of that year when she had been wont to greet him every evening grew too heavy for solitary bearing.

"Did you ever happen to think that I was an awful fool?" he asked her.

"No," she said soberly. "I've been too busy being a fool myself."

"I wonder," he went on, "if you care for me at all any more."

She stared at him consideringly in the candle light. "I wonder," she countered, "why you want to know."

"You could make it easier for me," he parried.

"I'm no good at riddles, Billy."

"This is no riddle." He braced himself for the plunge. "Didn't you ever think that sometimes a man might not know what he felt? Haven't you ever thought I really might have loved you, Laura, all the time that I didn't know it?"

"No," she said. "You left no loophole to crawl through." The gleam from the candles showed her eyes strangely somber. "You have forgotten all that you told me that night. I have forgotten not one word."

"I haven't forgotten," he said resentfully. "I've wished often enough that I could." He groped for a new beginning, then rushed into it. "If you could be sure that I cared for you now, that I love you, would you give me another chance, Laura?"

She stared at him between the flickering yellow lights. For a moment her face softened into a tenderness that set his pulse beating fast. Then, as if memory had glared her, she hardened.

"No, Billy, I wouldn't," she told him. "We had our chance and we lost it. I lost you and you lost me."

"Don't you believe I love you?"

There was a misery in his voice from which she veered away.

"How could I be sure? I believed it once, you know, when you weren't."

"But I was. I think I've always loved you. The trouble was—" he tried to light a cigaret with a deliberation that failed—"I didn't know what love is. I thought it was wanting a girl all the time, and because I didn't want to be with you every minute, I thought I didn't love you. Perhaps I didn't, but I think I did, although it was in a different way. I don't know but what it was a better way, Laura."

"I was nicer then," she said, with a little catch in her voice.

"No," he said, "I don't believe you were."

"Oh," she began, "you don't know all I've done when I've been lonely, and reckless, and desperate. I've—"

"I know," he stopped her, "and all you've ever done has been my fault."

THE acute contrition in his voice went deeper than his words, for the girl leaned over the table, watching him intently.

"So that's why you want me to marry you again?" she demanded.

His eyes answered her, for she flung into anger as she stared at him.

"I won't have you sorry for me, I tell you," she cried. "It was bad enough to have you marry me because you thought I'd pull you out of the way you didn't want to go. It's worse to have you want to marry me again so that you can pull me out. Well, I won't. I'll marry Bergen, and I'll go on drinking, and gambling, and playing the races till I die! I hate it, and loathe it, and I hate myself, and Bergen, and all of them, but I won't have your pity. I'd have gone through hell with you, Billy, if you'd loved me, but I won't take less than love from you, no matter what I take from other men. So it's goodbye again."

She rose from the table, throwing her furs over her shoulders and standing at the doorway in a high blaze of fury.

"When you know what love means," she told him, "when you know that nothing in the world, poverty or riches, failure or luck, good or bad, matters when you have the one you care for, then you'll know how I've cared for you. When you know that, you can come and find me. I may be down in the hell my love for you has sent me to—" her laughter rang out madly—"but, wherever I am, I'll be waiting for you!"

She whirled open the door, letting the wind blow gustily over the table.

A whiff of her perfume floated with it to the man's nostrils as she stood for a moment on the threshold of the night. She banged the door behind her as she went out, but her going did not leave Billy Raymer alone.

While the candles guttered down he sat by the table, attended by ghosts of every memory of Laura his brain had registered from the day he had seen her in the garden outside. Relentlessly he went over every incident of his relationship with her, every thought of his attitude toward her.

His face, stern even in the soft light, fell into hard lines of determination as he pictured her in the guise of the last week, knowing what it portended for her future; but when he thought of the look in her eyes as she had stood in the doorway, flaunting his repentant reparation, even as she had proclaimed her love for him, Billy Raymer buried his head on his arms and sobbed out his grief and longing and remorse as the candles that Laura had lighted died down in their sockets, leaving the room in a darkness through which he groped his way out to the starlight of a southern night.

HE had no thought of following her as he went down the street, but a sudden realization that she would go to another man's arms into unconsidered action. She had said she was going to marry Bergen. Well, he knew Bergen's crowd, and he didn't believe her. Bergen wouldn't marry her. And then where would she be? Going down a little lower every year until she'd come at last to be like those women whom he saw at every meet, hot eyed, haggard cheeked, hard mouthed. Then after a while she'd drop out of the game, skulking in some cellar, steeped in dope when she could get it, writhing in agony when she couldn't.

"God!" he groaned, twisting at the thought. "And when you think of what she was when—"

Understanding of his own responsibility in her downfall pierced him with anguish. "I've got to stop her," he told himself. "I can't let her go on like this. I've got to stop her!"

He ran down the road, only to see the tail lights of the train to Baltimore swinging around the curve beyond the station. A motorist, speeding over the highway, almost knocked him down, and slowed to make certain of his escape.

"Going to Baltimore?" he yelled to him. "I'll pay you—"

"If you ain't a bootlegger," the man called, "get in."

He clambered into the car, sitting in silence as they sped through the night. The rush of the wind roared in his ears like a thousand accusing voices. "Stop her, stop her, stop her," the motor throbbed. "Can't you beat the train into Baltimore?" he pleaded with his driver. "Give you five more if you do."

"Take you," the man said. "It's an accommodation."

The car whirled on through soft darkness, passing clusters of light beside the highway, sailing through little villages, and coming at last to the outskirts of the city. There they had to thread a slower course.

"Can't you step on it?" Billy demanded harshly. "I ain't figuring on being arrested for anything," the other said with emphasis. "Where'd you figure on going?"

"Union station."

"I thought you were dodging some one who'd be on that train."

His face, stern even in the soft light, fell into hard lines of determination as he pictured her in the guise of the last week, knowing what it portended for her future; but when he thought of the look in her eyes as she had stood in the doorway, flaunting his repentant reparation, even as she had proclaimed her love for him, Billy Raymer buried his head on his arms and sobbed out his grief and longing and remorse as the candles that Laura had lighted died down in their sockets, leaving the room in a darkness through which he groped his way out to the starlight of a southern night.

"I thought you were dodging some one who'd be on that train."

His face, stern even in the soft light, fell into hard lines of determination as he pictured her in the guise of the last week, knowing what it portended for her future; but when he thought of the look in her eyes as she had stood in the doorway, flaunting his repentant reparation, even as she had proclaimed her love for him, Billy Raymer buried his head on his arms and sobbed out his grief and longing and remorse as the candles that Laura had lighted died down in their sockets, leaving the room in a darkness through which he groped his way out to the starlight of a southern night.

"No," he said, "I'm meeting some one."

He paid his motorist when they pulled into the station eight minutes before the train was due, but he did not go to the gate out of which the passengers must come. Instead, he flattened himself against the outer wall, and behind a pillar from which he might have a vantage point for watching but where he could not be seen. He heard the train roar into the shed below, and waited tensely for Laura's passing. She came out hurriedly into the street, looking for a taxicab. Failing to find one, she measured distance with her eye, and started up the street toward the Elsinore's yawning towers. Raymer, following her, kept to the shadows, but never let her go beyond his gaze until she had entered the hotel.

Outside, he considered his next move. Should he wait till she entered her room and telephone her, telling her he must see her? She would hang up the receiver. Should he wait on the chance that she would come down again, perhaps to go out with Bergen? She might not come back. He peered through the revolving doors, striving to see if she had gone from the lobby, and, as he looked, saw her cross the pillared room with Bergen and enter a waiting elevator. The blood rushed to his eyes, making the room a red blur. Like an automaton he went into the hotel, and straight to the desk.

"I've a message for Mrs. Raymer," he said. "What's her room number? I want to phone her."

"Five twenty-nine," the clerk said casually.

FROM the telephone booth to which he turned with the caution of the hunted rather than of the hunter, he doubled back to the elevators. "Five," he said huskily. "Five," the elevator boy repeated, running open the door for him.

He followed the numbers down the hallway, standing outside five-twenty-nine until he heard Bergen's voice and Laura's from within. The sound crackled across his brain as if an ice jam were breaking. Instinctively he reached to his hip pocket. Reassured, he opened the door of the room.

Under the light of the chandelier Laura and Bergen stood, facing each other. At the sound of his entrance they both turned, Laura in fright, Bergen in anger.

"What do you want?" Bergen snarled at him. "Don't you know enough to telephone before you come up?"

"I want to talk to my wife," Raymer said steadily.

"She's not your wife any more," Bergen snapped, "and she's going to be mine."

Why Don't You Reduce?

Aren't you tired of being called fat? Aren't you tired of being made fun of, tired of being unable to do the things that slender people do?

Then here is what you are looking for—a simple, pleasant, method of reducing—Marmola Prescription Tablets. Just take one of these tablets after each meal and at bedtime and almost immediately your fat will begin to disappear. In a short time you will be as slender as you want to be.

Don't endanger your health by staying fat. Go to your druggist and ask for a box of Marmola Prescription Tablets, or, if you prefer, send one dollar to the Marmola Co., 1700 General Motors Bldg., Detroit, Mich., and a box will be sent postpaid. Then try them. See how quickly they make you slender—without tiresome exercises or starvation diets. Eat anything you want. Marmola Tablets will make you slender! Get your box and start today.

"Even if I believed that you meant that," Raymer told him, "I'd see that she didn't marry you."

"What right have you to dictate to her—or me?"

"I'm going to save her," Billy Raymer said. He pushed his checkered cap from his forehead, and his hand went again to his pocket. "I took her out of a good home, and away from good people. It's my fault that she came to know you or any one like you. It'd be my fault if she went to hell with the gang of you, so it's up to me to stop her."

"You're drunk," said Bergen.

"No, he isn't," Laura said. She was staring at him with startled eyes. "Let me talk to him, Dan."

"There's no use in talking now," Raymer said. "We went beyond talking down there in the old house."

"Look here," Bergen put in, "you can't come around here, raising a row. If you don't get out—" He moved toward the telephone.

"Stay where you are," Raymer bade him. He kept him under cover as he turned to Laura. "Will you marry me now?" he flung at her.

"No." She flung back her head, and looked him squarely in the eyes.

"Then, by God, you'll die with me," he choked, and flashed out the revolver on which his hand had rested.

She never turned from her steady watching, but into her eyes rose not the fear he had expected, but a triumph which blazed like a fire out of embers.

"Then it wasn't because—" she began, but Bergen's swift pounce upon Billy halted her words. "Don't hurt him!" she shrieked as the stouter man gripped him from behind, and the two of them began to struggle over the narrow room.

WITH Bergen's arms pinioning him, Raymer struggled frantically, twisting and turning in the other's grasp. Against the bed, against the table, against the wall they swayed.

"Don't hurt him," she kept saying, as they milled in locked embrace, Bergen relentlessly pressing the slighter man until at last he flung him, defenseless, on the floor. Then, "Give me that gun," she told him. He handed it to her with no question. "Now get out," she said.

He looked at her unbelievably for a moment, then pursed his dry lips into a whistle. "Do you mean," he asked her, "that you're quitting me cold?"

"I mean just that," she said.

He looked down from her to Raymer and a bitter smile ran its twisted way over his broad face.

"Raymer," he said, "I thought you were a damned fool, but I've decided I'm a damner one. I thought I knew a lot about women, but I guess the most that any man knows is that he doesn't know anything at all. I've surely had the wrong hunch at this game. I thought she wouldn't see you for dust. But you never can tell. Anyhow, you were wrong on one thing. You didn't believe I wanted to marry her. Well, I do. There's never been anything I've wanted quite so much. I know when I'm licked, though." He turned to the door. "Goodby, Laura. Happy days!"

"Happy days, Dan," she said. "Just remember that I know you were playing the game straight."

The door closed after him, and she bent over Raymer. "Are you hurt?" she asked him.

"Not bad," he told her, struggling to rise.

"Can I get anything for you?" she persisted.

"No," he told her. "I guess I made an awful mess of things."

"You did," she said.

In spite of the pain which racked him, he managed to get to his feet.

"He's right," he said. "I'm a damned fool, and a damned knave, too. What right have I to stand between you and anything you want? I—I went mad tonight. I'm sorry, Laura." He held out his hand to her. "Will you forgive me?"

"For this?" She twisted her gleaming rings.

"For everything. I've been all wrong all the way through. I didn't see that marriage was fifty-fifty. I just took what you gave, and I didn't give anything at all. You had your hell when you found out. Mine's just beginning. It all squares up in the big books." He moved toward the door. "You said out there in the house," he went on, "that you wouldn't marry me because I was only sorry for you. Well, I'm not asking you to marry me now, because the shoe's on the other foot. You're sorry for me, and I don't deserve even that. I'm nothing but a down and out gambler, and even if I win tomorrow I'll never be anything else. You're—well, it's in you to play for higher stakes. Goodby, Laura."

"But if—"

"Goodby."

"Goodby, Billy."

He limped down the hallway and summoned the elevator. In the lobby he passed Bergen, smoking savagely, and sought to stride that the other man might not notice his stiffness. If Bergen saw him, he gave no sign. A group of men over near the desk hailed him, but he ignored them, and went out into the cool night. On the sidewalk outside the Elsinore he stood, staring out upon the twinkling lights of Baltimore.

"Even if I win tomorrow," he muttered, and with a long sigh for what could not be, crossed toward the street of his lodgings.

The bugle was sounding the Calvert when he saw Laura the next afternoon. She was in the paddock, scanning the crowd, and he had the hope that she sought him, but the memory of his outburst humiliated him, and he turned away, going to the gate to watch the approach of the horses to the barrier. It was just as well, he thought, that they didn't meet again.

"I ought to be lucky at the ponies now," he told himself, and wriggled through the jam to see the entries for the famous race.

Pentecost came first, stepping high with a sure pride that brought to Raymer's heart a little glow of comfort. In the heat of it he tried to convince himself that, after all, this was a man's great game. A line, heard long before and stored in some corner of his camera plate mind, printed itself out as he looked on the string of thoroughbreds coming forth to trial.

Four greater things than all things are, Women, and horses, and power, and war.

he remembered. Well, for power men had gone to war, but the horses had run at Autuel within sound of thundering guns. Twice he had lost Laura, but women were women, and Pentecost would win the Calvert, helping him to forgetfulness of that flame of scorn with which one woman had seared him last night. The thought of that look steeled his resolve, and he flung himself into concentration and watchfulness of sorrel, and chestnut, and black, gazing on them with the partisanship of the early wagerer.

THE Belvoir three-year-old, dancing outward, lifted the cry of "Belfonte" from the crowd in the stand and the crowd near the gate, but Billy Raymer's mouth twisted at the zest of the cheer while he visioned the moment when the orange and blue of the Belvoir must fall behind the green and white of Pentecost's rider. A frown ran between his eyes as the red and black of Atilla went between the favorite and the horse of his choice, but fell away as the barrier lifted and the bunch sped down the ochre ribbon of the track, with Pentecost in the lead.

An old voice, quavering behind him at the drop of the barrier, persisted in his ears as he leaned out, intent on the twinkling of Pentecost's heels. An old hand-clutched his sleeve, and he turned to find Pop Graham beside him.

"I've bet on him, Billy," the old man croaked. "Put up two dollars in the Mutuel."

He danced merrily at Raymer's elbow as Pentecost flashed past the first white post, and chortled with joy as the green and white held the lead at the half-mile, but Billy Raymer caught his breath sharply as the red and black edged to the fence, shoving Pentecost off from vantage. Then, in a flash, the orange and blue of the Belvoir was in front, streaking the olive drab of the course with its flame as Belfonte, leaving the huddled group, shot forward.

"Come on, Pentecost," pleaded Pop Graham, grasping at Raymer's coat. "Attaboy, Atilla!" a ferret faced tout kept shouting. "But 'Belfonte!' roared the crowd as the Belvoir colors came closer and closer and 'Belfonte' clove the clouds as orange and blue crossed the tape.

"I've lost it, Billy," Pop's voice sobbing regret, came over a vast distance to Raymer's ears.

"Well, so have I, Pop," he said. "We're out of luck," the old man sniveled.

"Out of luck," said Billy Raymer. He tried to smile, but the smile would not come at his bidding. Try as he might, he could not summon the blithe courage that had carried him through so many disasters. A strange sense that life was playing him false cast its burdens upon him as he looked over the track with misty eyes. He had lost times in plenty before this, but never before had his failure to win jerked him away from his moorings of belief in his ultimate luck. Now a feeling of utter loneliness and of unbearable misery swept over him as Pop Graham shuffled away. Instinctively he followed the crowd, careless of where he went or of what current might swirl him out on a sea of shipwreck.

With the dejection of the first defeat he had ever acknowledged, with sagging shoulders and pulled-down cap, he was standing at the end of the platform, waiting for the city bound train, when he saw Laura once more. She approached him breathlessly, as she had been wont to come in the year of their marriage. Without reference by voice or by look to the words with which she had left him she spoke.

"Did you lose—everything?" she asked him.

"Everything," he said. Then, as if fending off the offer he expected of her, he added: "And I won't borrow one cent from you. That money's yours."

"I can't offer it to you." She laughed nervously. "I thought I'd copper your bet for you, Billy, and so I drew it all out this morning, and put it on Atilla—to win! They'd framed it, you see, for that. Pentecost is Bergen's horse. They thought they could shoulder Belfonte out of it at the turn. But Belfonte ran away with it!" Her laughter shifted perilously close to sobbing. "And so I'm broke, too, as broke as you are!"

"But—"

She pulled off her gloves, holding up her hands, bare now of all but the gold band he had once set on her finger. "I gave them back to Bergen," she said. "I'm through."

The train, rumbling into the station, emptied the platform of all but the two of them, but they stood in the gathering darkness while it roared out toward the city. Billy Raymer moved closer to Laura.

"Do you mean," he asked her, "that you'll give me the chance?"

"I mean," she said, "that I love you so much that all I want to know is that you need me."

"I do," he said hungrily.

In the dusk of the deserted platform his arms reached out to her. Into their sanctuary against a pursuing world Laura Raymer nestled. As the tail lights of the race special whirled around the turn on the way to Baltimore, Billy kissed her. In sure and sudden knowledge he held her close.

"I love you," he told her.

ville Chamber of Commerce. He said:

"Clark Howell brought out a good point in his talk the other day when he said that Asheville is within a day's ride of 72 per cent of the population of the United States. There is no doubt in my mind but what Western North Carolina will very shortly be the principal summer playground of the nation. California is drawing many thousands of tourists every year, but they have not such great attractions as we, and Southern California, while doubtless a pleasant place to spend a vacation, is as far away from the business and population centers of the country as one can get, unless he goes to Alaska.

"The eastern and coast resorts every summer attract many, but they cannot compete with Western North Carolina for natural beauty and recreational facilities.

"And naturally when folks come to Western North Carolina to spend the summer, they come to Asheville—a majority of them—since it is the only large city in the entire section, and is so centrally located that all points of interest are roughly equi-distant.

"The chamber of commerce and Western North Carolina, Inc., are doing great work in advertising this section. Everywhere one goes Asheville is a familiar topic, and those who have never been here express a desire to some time visit the 'Land of the Sky.' I have traveled over a good part of the United States, and have found that Asheville is known in all places. And one never hears a 'knock' against our city."

Rich Mr. Winthrop and His Runaway Daughters

Mr. Winthrop will eventually prove to be only one of several persons to whom this double elopement will bring disillusionment.

It is predicted that after the first zest of their romances wears off the eloping sisters will be pining for the cultured, refined environment of wealth and fashion they have always before known.

And the two husbands—how will they feel to find that they must still toil?

The Winthrop daughters are as thrifty as one would expect from their New England ancestry. Their kennels and chicken farm usually paid expenses, and not infrequently showed a small profit. A lazy, do-nothing-but-spend-money life is not what they want. Before their honeymoons were fairly under way it is said they were urging on their husbands the necessity of looking for new jobs.

No. 7—Stop, Look and Listen

By JANE CORBY

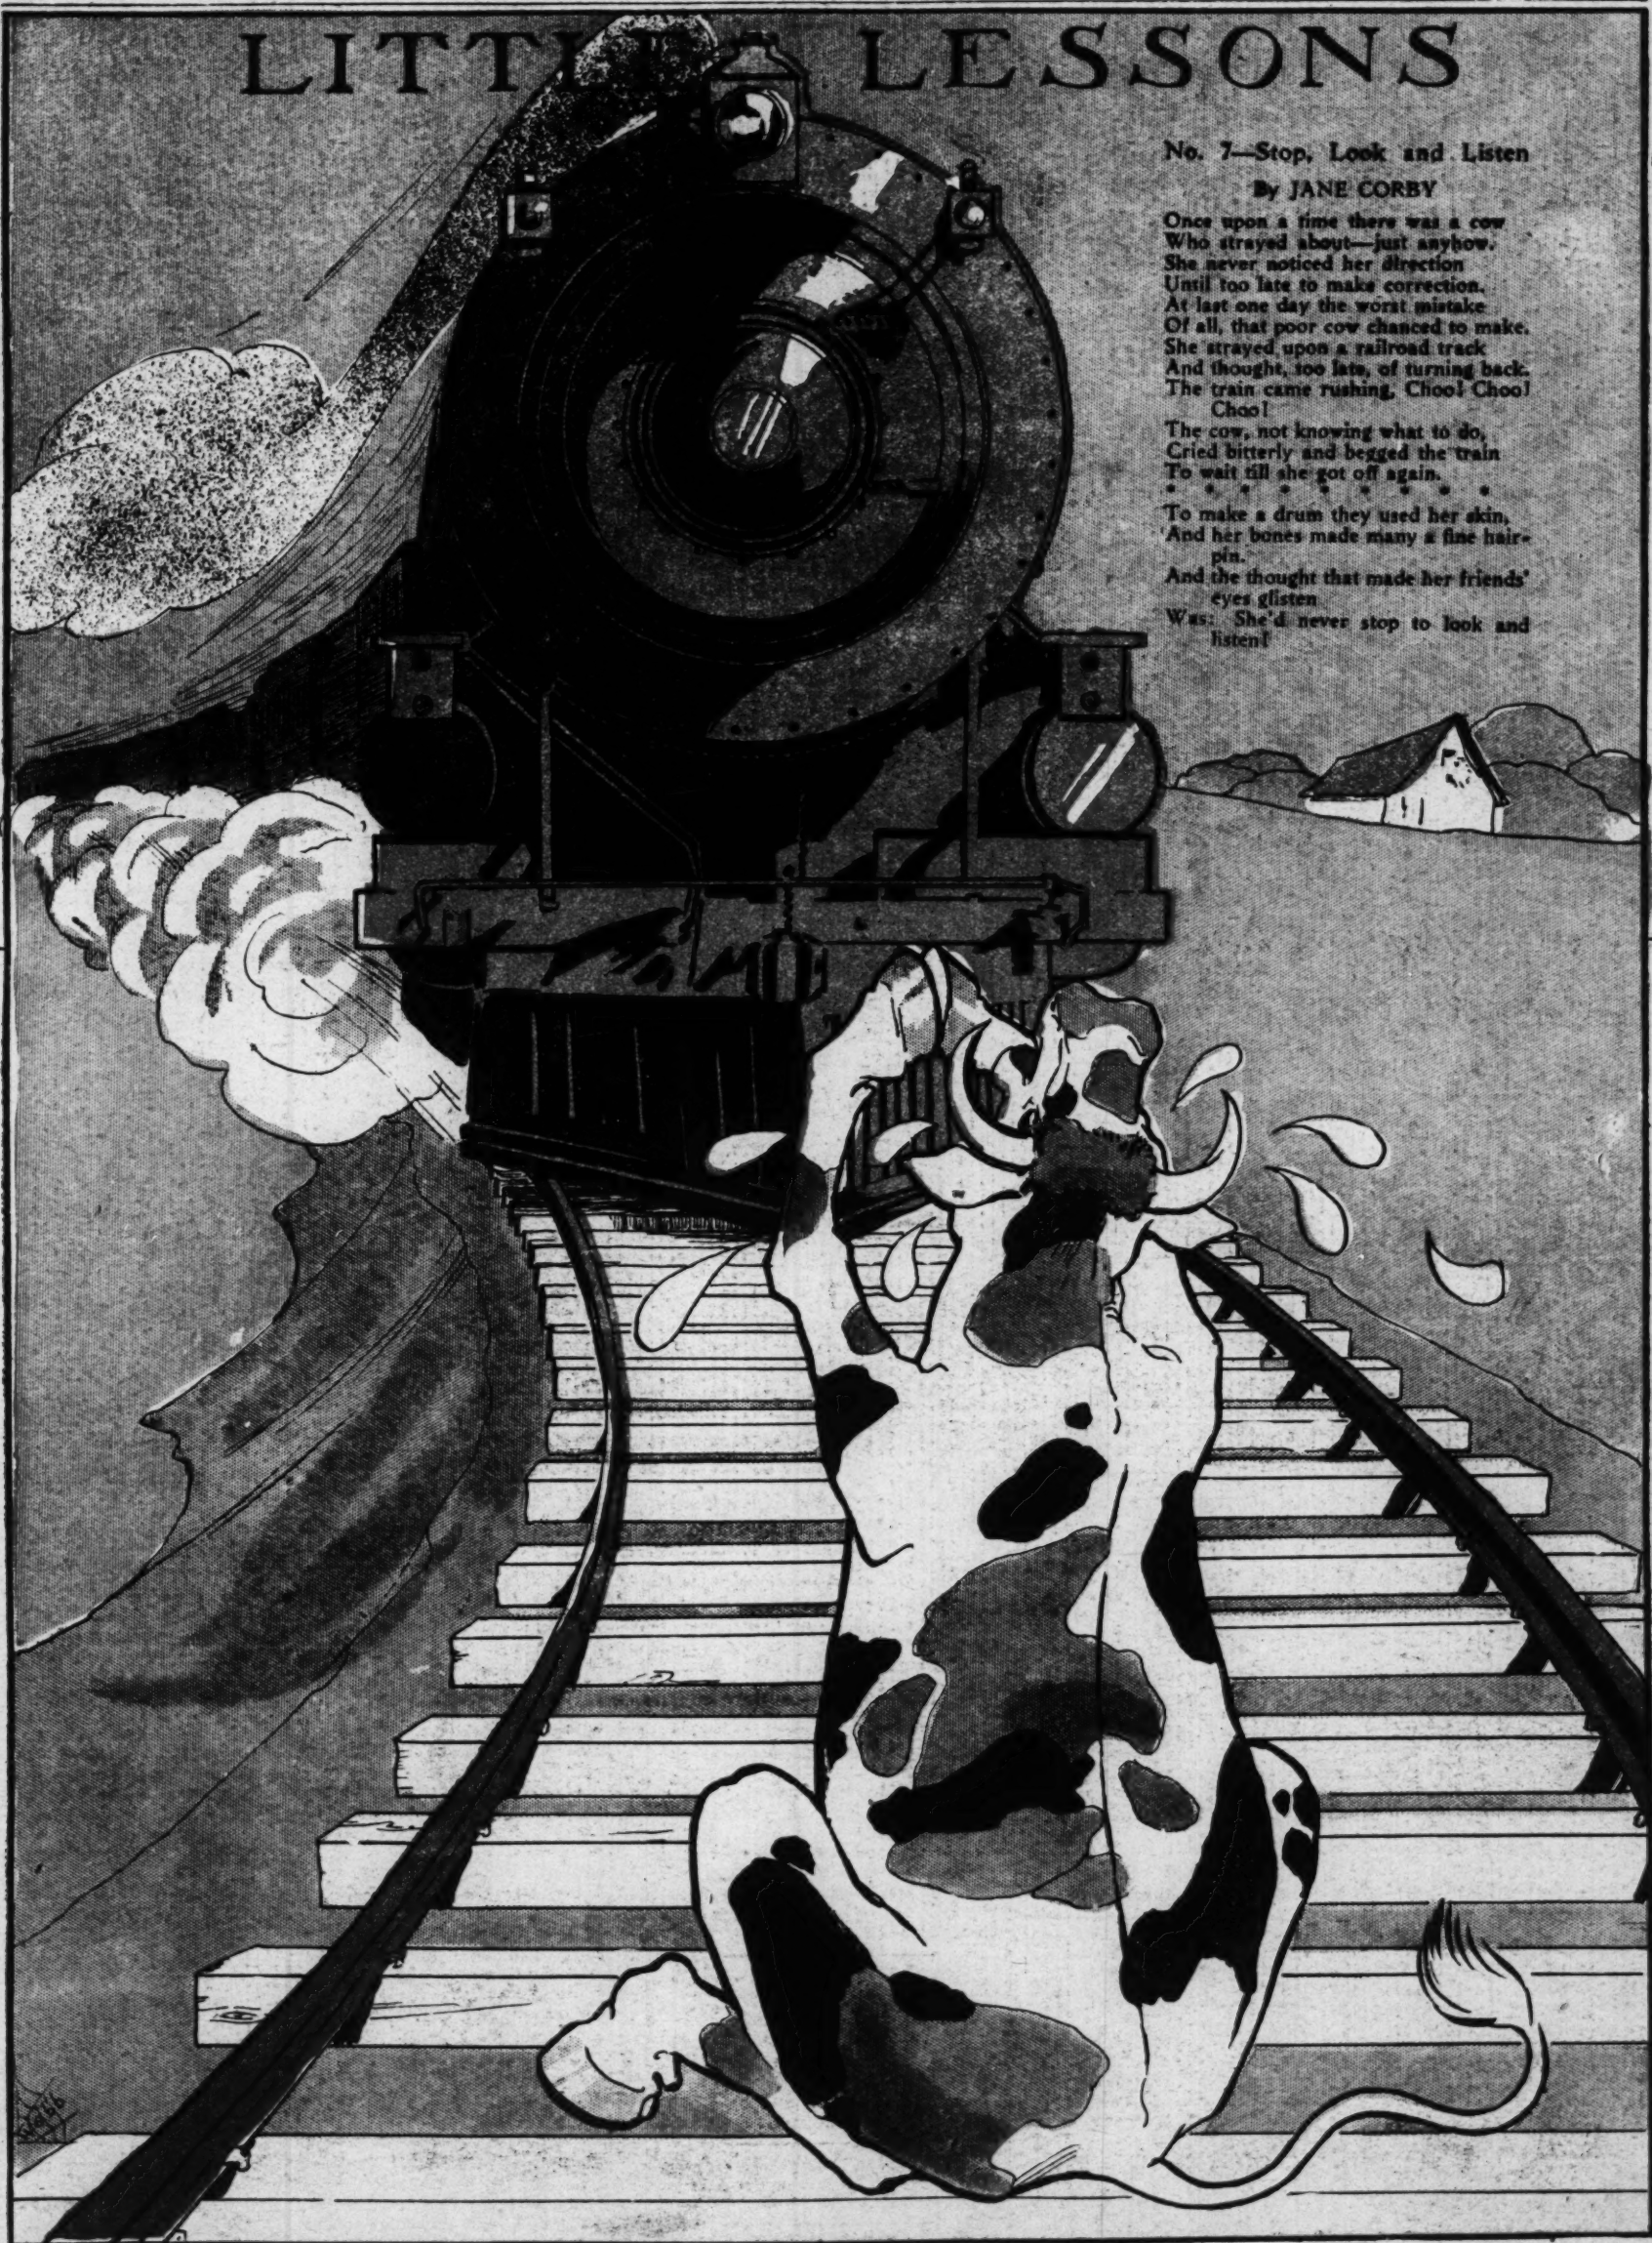

Once upon a time there was a cow
Who strayed about—just anyhow.
She never noticed her direction
Until too late to make correction.
At last one day the worst mistake
Of all, that poor cow chanced to make.
She strayed upon a railroad track
And thought, too late, of turning back.
The train came rushing, Choo! Choo!
Choo!

The cow, not knowing what to do,
Cried bitterly and begged the train
To wait till she got off again.

To make a drum they used her skin,
And her bones made many a fine hairpin.

And the thought that made her friends' eyes glisten

Was: She'd never stop to look and listen!

IN THE DAYS OF THE FLYING DRAGONS

Once upon a time there were strange and fearsome animals which disappeared from the earth ages ago. They were larger than any animals we know today, and so terrible in appearance that they were like strange things we see in nightmares after too much mince pie.

How do we know that these animals really lived? Scientists have found their bones buried in the earth and from the skeletons we can tell what these animals of old looked like.

Bones Were Buried

You see, one of these animals would have a fight with another and would be killed. If he were a sea animal, he would drop to the bottom of the lake. If he were a land animal, he might be buried in a cave-in of the earth. At any rate, the bones would not decay. As the ages passed, the skeleton would be covered by more and more earth and would become harder and harder. That is how men are able to find, often by accident when a pit is dug or well is drilled, these bones of the vanished animals.

Animals, you see, are always becoming extinct, which means that they disappear. How does this happen? Changes of climate, new enemies—these are some of the causes. Why, perhaps you have heard your grandfather talk of the days when buffaloes wandered in herds over the plains. Men killed them off in droves, and now there are only a few left. Some day they, too, will be found only in museums.

Animals Disappear

Even the strongest of animals could not exist forever, and we should be glad that the flying dragon in the picture—his right name is pterodactyl, but that's an awful name to pronounce—is no longer with us.

He wasn't a member of the bird family, but was a flying reptile. Most of the animals then were reptiles, whether they lived on land, sea, or air. They were cold-blooded animals. To their family belong snakes and lizards of today. They weren't a very pleasant family, were they? There's something about reptiles that gives you a "creepy" feeling.

Were Giants in Size

If you could have lived in those days and had stood on one of the giant rocks of that rugged landscape, you might have noticed a sudden darkening of the sky above you, as though a cloud were passing over. But if you had looked up you would have seen the flying dragon. He was a giant indeed. The largest of the dragons measured twenty feet across from the tip of one wing to the tip of the other. That means he could have stretched clear across the front of your house! We can hardly imagine any flying animal that big.

Some of these dragons had long, narrow heads with sharp, toothless beaks. Others had short heads and beaks armed with terrible teeth, which they used for fighting and for capturing smaller animals to eat.

Had Large Eyes

They had such large eyes that some folks believed that they must have gone flying at night, like the owl. These big eyes were an advantage, for the dragon could see in any direction with them. Nothing could take him by surprise, for he never had to turn his head to see anything.

The pterodactyl had four legs, each ending in four fingers. The outside finger of each front leg was fastened to the wing, so he could walk on his hind legs only. He was much better off in the air than on land, for he had trouble walking. When he had to walk on his hind legs he had to curve his big head backwards, or he'd lose his balance and topple over. He probably couldn't have gone very fast in this position, and must have looked very ridiculous.

Got Food Easily

This strange animal could get food in many ways. He could capture birds as he flew, could attack land animals, and could forage up and down the sides of cliffs, for his sharp claws helped him to cling to the sides of the steepest mountains. He could even swoop down in the sea for fish. So he had no trouble getting a living.

Skeletons of these flying dragons have been found in nearly every part of the world. In the United States they were found around a big inland sea that once covered the western part of the country.

Scientists Risk Lives

There are men who devote their lives to the search for the bones of animals such as these. They are called paleontologists. They sometimes form parties and go searching into the deserts or mountains or other out of the way places where they think they can find skeletons, staying for months at a time, far from civilization, and going through all sorts of hardships and dangers in their travels. We sometimes think that being a scientist is a cut-and-dried life, but some of the men who have had the most exciting adventures you could read are scientists.

New discoveries are constantly being made about these ancient animals which were created long ago and disappeared from the earth before there were any zoos to preserve them in, as we are now saving many of our wild animals that have been driven by man from their natural surroundings and can no longer live without being protected.

(Next week we'll learn about the largest of all the animals that ever walked the earth.)

A HALF-DOZEN TRICKY PUZZLES

1. Form a word square of words meaning a heavenly body, a story, charity, and to repose.

2. A word chain is made up of words arranged so that the last letter of the first word is the first letter of the second word, the last letter of the second word being the first letter of the third, and so on, the last letter of the last word being the first letter of the first word. Form a word chain of words meaning an animal closely allied to the sheep, a part of a kite, state of wanting, a blow with the foot, and a small cask.

3. Form a word diamond out of (1) a letter found in September; (2) to strike; (3) an animal of the jungles; (4) a number; (5) another letter found in September.

4. Take away the first letter of a name commonly given to dogs and leave above. In the same way behead a jewel and leave a chum. Behead shining and leave correct. Behead unreal and leave a business transaction. Behead orderly and leave devour. The letters beheaded spell the name of a bird.

5. Change the head and tail of a number and have a strip of fragment. Change the head and tail of another number and have a boxing match.

6. Behead a word meaning a kind of ship and leave a shoemaker's tool. Behead a gulf between Arabia and Africa and leave the lair of a wild beast. Behead additional and leave a material containing metal. The beheaded words, when properly arranged, spell a month.

Answers to Puzzles.

1. Star, tale, alms, rest.
2. Goat-tail-lack-kick-keg.
3. T, hit, tiger, ten, R.
4. R-over; o-pal; b-right; i-deal; n-eat; Robin.
5. Three-shred; four-bout.
6. Y-awl; A-den; m-ore;—May.

"I'm running this," said the bully, as he turned on the water for his morning bath.

THE FOOTBALL CONTEST BETWEEN THE NEVERSINKS AND THE TRANSPARENTS BROUGHT OUT SOME STARS.

A Matter of Hair

"We must have a girl with long hair," declared the English teacher. "When it comes to the lines where the hero says, 'Lovely lady, let down your long hair,' it would be ridiculous to have a bobbed haired heroine stick her head out."

"But nearly every girl in the school has her hair bobbed," objected the other teacher. "It will be pretty hard to find a girl who has any idea of acting at all and at the same time has long hair."

"How about Marion Felix?" suggested the English teacher. "She not only has long hair, but it's curly as well. She has always wanted to take a part in one of the pageants, and never got in."

"Oh, but she's so stiff and awkward and she hasn't any imagination," objected the other teacher. "It isn't because she wants to act that she wants to be in, but because she wants to be noticed. She's awfully vain."

"Well," sighed the other, "it seems to me she's really the only one we can use for the part. She will follow directions and she doesn't have much to say. It's her hair we want her for, anyway."

The next day the English teacher notified the different ones who had been chosen for the pageant. They were to report for the first meeting before school the following morning, and they would then be assigned their parts.

Marion Felix was surprised to find her name on the list of actors, and she was jubilant. At last she

HAVE YOU MADE AN AIRPLANE?

Last week you clipped the last of the six lessons which told how to make and fly a model airplane, so you should now have your plane in good working order. Are you having any trouble with it? If so, write to Mr. Terence Vincent, Director of Miniature Aircraft Flyers, 746 Monadnock Building, Chicago, and he'll be glad to answer any questions or give you pointers that will help your plane fly better.

Already he has received letters from a lot of you who are interested in model airplane building, and he'll be glad to send you plans for more complicated models if you want them. GIRLS, TOO.

Mr. Vincent says that one of the prize winners in a model airplane contest in Chicago was a girl, who made a plane better than those made by hundreds of boys who entered. He'd like to see a girl win one of the places in the national meet held November 14—how about it?

IN JINGLELAND

Did you ever try to make up jingles? Just get the meter in your head and you'll find it isn't hard at all. Here are some sample jingles taken from school papers all over the country. Try making some like them for your school paper.

IN SNOPPYQUOP LAND

WHERE NOTHING SEEMS QUEER

This picture shows how Mah Jongg was introduced into Europe. In the China-Trojan war of 86 A. D. (Asiatic Dominoes) the Chinese army lay (and stood) before the walls of Troy, unable to get to capture the city. Bimeby General Con Fusion hit upon a bright idea and ordered his troops to build a huge wooden Chinese Good Luck Dog. They put this in front of the walls of Troy, and then beat it back into the mountains to see what would happen.

The dumb Trojans opened their best gate and hauled in the big dog, then locked the gate and went to bed. As soon as it was dark, or midnight, or both, a whole flock of Chinese Snoppyquops who were hiding inside the big dog opened up the door and came out. "Golly, him warm in there," said one Chinaman. "Yep, him Hot Dog!" replied another.

The capture of the city by this brave detail of troops was a mere detail, and soon the gates were opened and the rest of the Chinese army admitted. Leading the parade in the illustration you will see one circle, closely followed by eight bamboo, West Wind, one bird, four Flowers, and four balls, take your base. Thus was Ma Jongg and Pa Jongg and all the Jonggs introduced into Europe.

FIGHTING A LYNX BAREHANDED

Meet Davvy Crockett Poole, 74-year-old premier guide and trapper of the White mountains.

Davy has had an experience which few men have had or would care to have; he has killed a big Canadian lynx barehanded. It happened this way:

One day he was upon top of Mt. Willard, one of the smaller mountains of the range, gathering spruce gum, which he sells. As it was getting late Davvy decided to camp up on the mountain for the night, as he had his pack with him, and it was about three or four miles down hill to the nearest shelter.

Sees Big Lynx

Accordingly, he looked around for the likeliest place to unroll his blankets and make a cooking fire. Having selected the spot he unrolled the blankets and began picking up wood for his fire. He gathered an armful of sticks and came back to his blankets. As he dropped the fagots he heard a rustle behind him. When he looked around there was a big lynx watching him with evidences of displeasure.

Davy had no weapons and frankly admits that for a moment he had no idea of what to do or why. Then he remembered that a lynx would not attack a man unless there was a mighty good reason. He also remembered that a lynx could often be scared very easily.

Throws Stick of Wood

At first Davvy sat watching the lynx and the lynx sat watching Davvy, but after a while the lynx took a step forward in Davvy's direction. Davvy threw a stick of wood at him. This made matters worse, as the lynx gave one of its crying howls and came forward two more steps. Davvy says he was scared foolish. And then a rather silly idea came into his head. He had heard of the bull fighters in Spain. Why not try a lynx fight?

With this in mind he grabbed up his blanket and began pelting the lynx with sticks, watching for the lynx to charge him. The blows from the sticks got the lynx madder and madder and he circled about, waving his stubby tail and howling as only a lynx can howl. Finally the beast paused, wheeled and began its charge. Davvy grasped the blanket at opposite corners and held it before him.

The Animal Charges

The animal charged straight into the blanket, which Davvy immediately got around him by the aid of great skill and a good deal of luck. In this process the trapper got several claw scratches and a tooth mark or two, but he succeeded in rolling the animal into a practically helpless position.

Having done this the trapper put his knee into the lynx's back, caught hold of his muffled head and calmly proceeded to break the back of his antagonist.

After the excitement was all over what do you suppose Davvy Crockett Poole did? Fainted? Yelled? No, he finished making his fire, cooked his supper and skinned the dangerous foe he had killed with his bare hands. The trapper says that the lynx just about ruined his best blanket.

Answer to today's picture puzzle: The two kinds of fruit are raisin and cherry.

A NARROW ESCAPE FROM THE WITCH'S KITCHEN

"Let's think of something new to do," urged Fred. He was in the mood for adventuring, that bright, crisp Saturday.

"I know what!" exclaimed Roy. "Let's go down to St. Jean and climb around some of the caves in the bluffs there."

"That's the stuff," answered Fred eagerly. "We're in hiking clothes already. Let's fix up a lunch and catch the nine o'clock electric to St. Jean."

Roy had come over to spend the day with Fred, but Fred's father and mother had gone away for the day to see some farm land they were interested in, so it was up to the two boys to amuse themselves.

Accordingly they took an electric to St. Jean and hiked on through the town to the bleak hills and the bluffs beyond, which were famous for their caves. They explored a few of the smaller, lower ones, then stopped and ate lunch before going farther.

They followed a narrow, winding trail, almost a ledge, which led them higher and higher. Suddenly Roy, who was in the lead, stopped, and looked up. Fred, who had heard a slight noise, looked up, too. He saw the face of a man peering down from above them. "There's the old hermit of the bluffs," laughed Fred. "Nothing to get excited about. He's a half-witted fellow that lives somewhere around in these caves. Summer tourists out here give him money for reading their fortunes. He pretends to do it with grains of sand. I guess he makes enough that way to buy food during the winter. Funny looking old fellow, isn't he, with those long whiskers?"

"Makes me feel creepy," answered Roy, with a little shrug. "I don't like the way he watched us."

II.

The two boys climbed up the side of the bluff, further and further, until the going became really dangerous. Suddenly they found themselves on a rather wide platform of rock which sloped down to the dark mouth of a cave. The mouth was small, and had a strangely forbidding appearance.

"Don't think I was ever in this one," remarked Fred. "I've never been up this high. Let's have a look at it."

They stooped down and crawled in. Once inside they found it a fair-sized cave. They could almost stand upright in it.

"Where's that light coming from?" asked Roy. "Oh, I see, there's a big hole in the roof."

Fred gave a little, low whistle. "Then this must be the cave known as the Witch's Kitchen. Look at that hole. It's known as the Witch's Chimney. See how it goes right straight up, as round and smooth as though it had been carved out of the rock. Queer, isn't it?"

"This is a creepy place," replied Roy nervously. "Isn't it supposed to be haunted?"

"That's what they say. Folks have been scared away by queer noises. The people down in St. Jean won't come near the place. I wonder how far back it goes? Let's explore a little."

He lit a match and they examined the walls of the cave. It was a shallow cave, almost round. "What's this in the corner?" exclaimed Roy. The boys lit matches and knelt down. They heard at that moment a slight noise at the mouth of the cave and turned to see the face of the crazy hermit glaring at them. The face disappeared at once.

The boys looked at each other nervously. "I think we'd better get out of here," declared Fred. "Maybe the old boy has a particular fondness for this place and doesn't want us here."

He had hardly finished speaking when there was a strange rumbling, then—bang! The light coming in through the mouth of the cave was shut off. Fred turned white. "He rolled a boulder down the slope and blocked the cave!" he gasped.

III.

The boys were speechless with horror. Then Fred noticed that Roy was holding up in his hand a long pouch in which a few pieces of silver clinked. He had found it stuck away back in the cave. That explained things. This cave was the hermit's "bank," for some strange reason, and he thought they were stealing his money. That explained his anger, and why his crazy brain had given him the idea of trapping them.

Without a word the two boys made a rush at the boulder. They pushed until they were exhausted, but could not budge it. They realized there was no chance of rolling it back up hill.

"The mouth was small and had a strangely forbidding appearance."

"No one knows where we are," shuddered Roy, white-lipped. "They might not think to look here for days and days—by that time—" Fred was looking up the Witch's Chimney. "It's plenty large enough for a fellow to let himself down through," he mused.

"You couldn't possibly climb up the smooth sides," sighed Roy.

Fred looked sadly up at the little patch of blue sky and admitted that he was right. Then he realized that the patch of blue sky was cut across by something green—evidently a tree branch.

He quickly unwound the lasso which he always carried, for he was fond of lassoing. "This is our last chance," he said soberly, "and it isn't much of a chance at that. I'll try throwing this up in the hope that it might catch on something solid. Look out now."

He made several tries, with no luck. Then the rope seemed to have caught something, but a few jerks brought down a twig. Fred stopped and rested a moment. Neither of them had anything to say. The light was beginning to fade slightly, and soon they would no longer be able to see the chimney.

Once again Fred tried it, and again. Then—"Roy," he choked, "it seems to be holding. Oh, if it only will—" Slowly he began going up the rope, hand over hand. Roy scarcely dared breathe.

Roy scarred seemed ages, he heard a shout. "I'm on the ground!" rejoiced Fred. "Come on up, Roy. We've escaped the Witch's Kitchen!"

A NEW GAME FOR WINTER PARTIES

Did you ever watch a farmer cutting corn with a big corn knife? When the knife touches the stalks they go toppling over. Here's a game that is built on the same idea.

This is a good, lively game for your winter parties, and almost any number can play it. You will need a broomstick, a clothespole, or a bamboo fishing rod to use as the farmer's knife. A rope slightly weighted on one end would do instead of the pole, but the weight must not be heavy enough to hurt any one if it hits him.

Choose A Farmer

One player is chosen to be the "farmer." All the other players are the stalks of corn. They form a big circle, with the farmer standing in the middle with his "knife." He begins to revolve this slowly about him, cutting his corn.

As the pole approaches, the players leap into the air to avoid being cut down by the farmer. Any player who is touched by the pole, even slightly, is "cut," and must get out of the circle until the game starts over again.

Shift Position

After the farmer has brought his pole around once or twice, he stops suddenly and calls, "Shift!" At this signal all the players who are still in the ring get down on all fours and the farmer tries to cut them down from this position while they, in turn, try to jump as the pole comes to them.

When he has done this a few times, the farmer will no doubt find some of the tough stalks still standing. He then calls, "Shift!" once more. All those still in the circle stand on the left foot and touch the ground with the right hand, trying to jump from this position.

Increase Speed

The farmer is supposed to revolve his "knife" slowly at first, but as the players grow more accustomed to jumping he increases the speed to catch new players. The pole, during the game, must never be more than eight inches from the ground as it reaches each player.

The last player cut down is the farmer for the next game and the ring is formed once more.

Testing It Out

A foreign boy was attending night school. One of the things he learned in arithmetic was that four quarters make a whole. He studied it over and over again. Sunday morning he went into the back yard and began to dig. His father heard him, and asked what he was doing.

"I'm digging a hole," said his son, "because my teacher said there were four quarters in a hole."

The Wiggly-Woggly Pollywog

The story of the pollywog who always wanted to be a frog, and how he felt when he got to be one. Can you draw a pollywog, a pond lily and a frog? See how easy the beginnings are.

A pollywog
One summer day
Was wriggling happily
At play.

His head was round,
His tail was long,
He swished it as
He swam along.

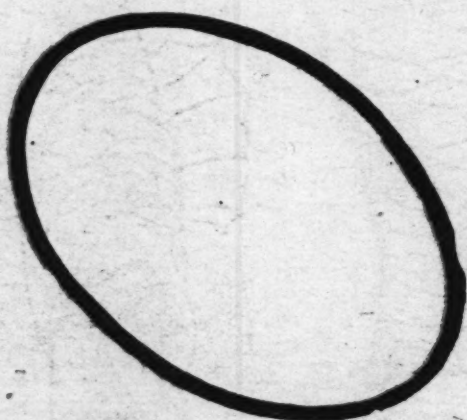

"I am," he cried,
"A pollywog,
And some day I
Will be a frog."

He wriggled to
A lily pad;
One lovely bloom
This lily had.

Beneath its petals,
Snowy white,
He wriggled swiftly
Out of sight.

"I'm tired, I'll rest Awhile," said he,
And settled down
Quite comfortably.

Time ran along
As time will do,
And always time
Brings changes, too.

And soon where once
A pollywog
Was wriggling, stood
A little frog.

"At last I am a frog!"
Cried he,
"But, oh! my tail—
Where can it be?"

A FLYING FISH

Directions: Cut out the two halves and paste them together, along the edges. Make a hoop the size of the opening of the fish's mouth; a piece of thin wire can be used, hat wire or any fine household wire. With a needle and thread sew the hoop inside the opening, taking a stitch through the upper and another through the lower jaw. Attach strings to the hoop, join them to a kite string and fly like a kite.

Some of the children rarely had been setting foot upon the ground and did not even know what leaves were on trees. ## FLYING INTERFERENCE

A remarkable picture of interference as it was run by Alabama to beat Georgia Tech, 14 to 0, on Grant field. Thousands—now have nicer bathrooms

Thousands of women who have always wanted nicer bathrooms have found that they can easily have them, not by making the bathroom all over, but simply by installing a new Church, all-white toilet seat.

The difference a spotlessly white toilet seat makes in the looks of the whole bathroom is certainly a pleasant surprise. Some women say: "Looks hundred per cent better"; some, "Looks dozens times better"; and others, "Now I am proud to have guests go into my bathroom."

Church Seats fit any bowl—installed in a few minutes

Church seats fit any bowl and can be installed easily in a few minutes; so easily that you can install one yourself, although any plumber will be glad to install it for you at small cost. If you move to another house or another apartment the seat is easily taken with you.

The handsome white surface of Church Seats is a smooth, ivory-like sheathing, which won't wear off as paint is apt to do, and it won't crack, split, discolor, absorb moisture or retain odors. It is as easy to clean as porcelain and is perfectly sanitary. It is above the criticism of any guest.

Send for interesting sample of sani-white sheathing and circular describing most popular models of Church Seats. Cut the coupon now and send it today.

"Put one on—the pain is gone"

"The World is one parish," said John Wesley. But the business world is more than that. It is a highly sensitive mechanism that reacts and vibrates to the slightest touch. The modern newspaper in its different phases, news, editorials, markets, GRAVURE and even sports, is the seismograph of the business world. It registers the shocks and is the truest indication of the trend of world affairs because of its cosmopolitan character.

GRAVURE tells the story with pictures—the most interesting medium in the world. The busy business man especially enjoys Gravure—where in a few moments he may cover the world's interesting events in the most enjoyable manner.

Pictures tell a True Story. Advertise in THE CONSTITUTION'S GRAVURE section.

Don't lose your slenderness

Have you noticed how some women keep their slender, youthful figures? Do you envy them because they're as graceful now as before they were married?

There is no reason why you can't have a graceful figure.
Just use Marmola Tablets—the pleasant way to reduce.
No exercises or diets. Eat what you want and get slender.
Thousands of men and women each year regain healthy, slender figures this way.

All drug stores have them—one dollar a box. Or they will be sent in plain wrapper, postpaid by the Marmola Co., 1700 General Motors Bldg., Detroit, Mich.

The Subtle Charm Of Radiant Beauty

Beauty is sometimes a gift, but more often an acquire-ment. For the woman of today can easily achieve loveliness by keeping her skin soft, healthy and clean. She can further improve beauty by massaging the tiny network of muscles that control the youthful shapeliness of the face and neck.

Make this test today!

If you wish to see how much more lovely you can look, try a Crystal Bath Alcohol Massage. It will take but a few moments and your mirror will reflect the almost magic improvement in the soft texture, and colorful tint of your complexion.

Instant Beauty that Lasts!

When you have observed this change you will want to massage your whole body to wake up and beautify your skin. You will find that Crystal Bath destroys even the slightest hint of perspiration odors.
It prevents the embarrassment of unpowdered moments by keeping the skin soft, healthy and clean.

CRYSTAL BATH IS DIFFERENT

Some chemicals are disordered with chemicals that are positively injurious to the skin.
Prevents Enlarged Pores.
Crystal Bath is different! It contains 95% grain alcohol and among other beautiful ingredients one best known to science for cleansing, refreshing and beautifying the skin.

DOLLY DIMPLE AND THE LITTLE PIG THAT WENT TO MARKET

Said Dolly half way to the store, "It's shocking, I declare; I can't remember what to get—I must be stupid—there!"

"But out of Dolly's story book came squeals of 'Wee, wee, wee!' 'I can remember!' Dolly gasped. 'Whoever can it be?'"

Why, I'm the little pig that went to market—don't you know? And I can do the ordering if you'll show me where to go:

"I heard your mother tell you, 'six lamb chops, six pounds of beef; Pray, how could you forget it, dear? It passes all belief.'"

"He tells it to the butcher stout, who hears it with surprise, And writes it down, though more inclined to doubt his ears and eyes."

"Well, now der pigs vas ordering," he ponders in dismay, "I guess I wouldn't advertise dose sausages today!"

GIRLS! OH! SUCH A PRETTY DOLL! GIRLS!
She Walks! She Talks! She Sleeps!

Thousands of Girls
Have been made happy by receiving Dolls from us. No matter how many Dolls any girl has she always wants another. And I want to tell you that this

Walking, Talking, Sleeping Doll
Is just about the finest that ever came into your home to make you and your little playmates happy, happy, happy. Look at the picture. Read the description, and then fill out the coupon and send it in at once.

What "Other Girls" Say:
I received the Doll Baby, Monday, and was very much pleased with it. I find that it will walk, talk, wink and sleep. It is just the right size and all and I think any girl would be glad to own one. From (Signed) Junita King, Dresden, Ohio.

I received my Doll and was very glad to get it. I often wished I had one and my wish came true. I named it Betty Ann. Thanking you again, I remain yours respectfully. (Signed) Helen Marie Gaiser, 399 Hickory St., Buffalo, N. Y.

Received the Ma-Ma Doll that you sent me for selling your magazine books. And I am very much pleased with it. Thank you. From (Signed) Eva Lanzo, 614 Logan St., Carnegie, Pa.

I received the Doll. Thank you very much for it. I think it is a beautiful Doll. Your little friend, (Signed) Isabel Florence, Miami, New Mexico.

I thank you very much for your kind present and I will surely give little Betty a good home. Yours truly, (Signed) Bernice Nicholson, Capitol Hill Sta., R. 2, Box 110A, Denver, Colo.

And She Even Winks!
GIRLS!!! Here is the doll that we have been looking for years. If you let her drop, she won't break—neither will her eyes fall out. And say, you should hear her say:

"Ma-Ma!" "Ma-Ma!" "Ma-Ma!"
Sounds just like a real, laughing baby in the room. And hold her by the arms, like the little girl in the picture, and she walks along with you. A real baby couldn't do more. She will also sit up by herself. Picture her at a little dinner party sitting up at your little table. Now, don't forget the Eyes, pretty and they actually move. When she lies down they really CLOSE; when she sits up and you shake her just the least bit, she winks. This Doll is dressed to perfection in a little play dress with a pretty bow around the neck; socks, patent leather shoes, and all the fixings. When standing she is over 12 inches tall. A lady was in our office the other day; someone happened to move the Doll and it said: "Ma-Ma!" so plainly and so loud that the lady looked around to see where the Baby was. You want this Doll—I know you do—read how you can get her for yourself, all your own.
